The minutes were read and approved.

Bishop Paine took the chair.

N. H. D. Wilson moved that the Committee on the Publishing Interests shall consist of one clerical and one lay delegate from each Conference.

Motion of Mr. Wilson prevailed.

S. Regester, chairman of the Committee on Credentials, presented Report No. 1 of that committee, which was read, and J. D. Giddings moved to adopt the first item, referring to David Morton.

REPORT NO. 1 OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS.

GENERAL CONFERENCE, M. E. C. SOUTH: Atlanta, May 2, 1878.

The Committee on Credentials organized by electing the undersigned chairman, and H. W. Foote, secretary.

The committee has had several cases under consideration, but have arrived at a conclusion in two only, and have instructed me to make the following report as Report No. 1 to wit: In the case of Rev. David Morton the committee adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the Committee on Credentials Rev. David Morton is entitled to a seat in this Conference as a delegate from the Denver Conference.

Resolved, That the Rev. John Hogan is entitled to a seat as a delegate in this Conference.

Respectfully submitted.

SAMUEL REGESTER, Chairman.
H. W. FOOTE, Secretary.

The vote resulted in 110 clerical for and 34 against the adoption of the second item; and 65 lay for and 11 against the adoption.

The chair pronounced the question carried.

On motion of J. B. McFerrin the report, as a whole, was adopted.

The Conference then adjourned with the benediction by the Bishop.

THIRD DAY.

FRIDAY, May 3, 1878.

Conference met at the time appointed.

Bishop Paine in the chair.

W. H. Watkins conducted divine service.

The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

Bishop Wightman took the chair.

Bishop Paine addressed the Conference, saying:

Brethren, you have an important work on hand. You must be careful to govern yourselves a little better than yesterday and the day before. Have less noise and moving about. Self respect, the interest of the church, the glory of your Master, demand this.

I have heard criticisms by as good friends as you have expressing great pain at your want of order and self government.

You have been selected because of your supposed peculiar fitness for this work. You are picked men; you are representatives of the church; you are the best representatives as your brethren think who have sent you here.

Remember, you act in the presence of God—under his eye. Repress improper expressions and feelings. Govern yourselves. Do your business calmly quietly, as becomes Christian ministers transacting business for God's church.

On motion of R. K. Hargrove the reception of the address of the Bishops was made the order of the day for eleven o'clock this morning.

The following resolutions were then offered, read and adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, That we are delighted to see the venerable form of our honored father Rev. Lovick Pierce D. D. on the platform at this session of our General Conference, and we are devoutly grateful to almighty God for sparing his life and permitting him to be with us.

Resolved That Dr. Pierce be and is hereby invited to preach before the Conference at any hour that may suit his convenience and comfort.

A. R. WINFIELD.
JOHN HOGAN.

S. Regester, chairman of the Committee on Credentials, presented Report No. 2 of that committee:

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS.

A majority of the Committee on Credentials have instructed me to report the following as their action in the case of Logan D. Dameron, to wit:

The committee, after patient and careful consideration of the case of Logan D. Dameron, find, from facts admitted and proved, that he, the said Dameron, applied for and was admitted to membership in Chonteau Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church South on the thirteenth day of December, 1874. And as the Discipline of our church requires, as a qualification for lay membership in this Conference, a membership of six successive years; Bro. Dameron is not eligible to membership in this Conference.

A minority report will be submitted.

The committee have considered all cases referred to them, and made reports thereon; and there being no further business before them, ask to be discharged.

Respectfully submitted,

S. REGESTER, Chairman.

H. W. Foote, of that committee, presented a minority report, as follows:

REPORT OF THE MINORITY OF THE COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS.

Whereas, Some irregularities and disagreements have occurred in regard to the relation of Logan D. Dameron to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, by reason of which a doubt may exist as to the length of time he has been a member thereof; And whereas, The lay members of the Annual Conference where these scenes transpired, and who are presumed to understand them best, have chosen him as a delegate to represent them in the General Conference; therefore,

Resolved, That we recognize Logan D. Dameron as a member of this Conference.

Respectfully submitted.

H. W. FOOTE.

The report of the minority was laid on the table for the present.

The adoption of the report of the majority was moved, and S. Regester offered, as an amendment, the addition of the following paragraph to the report of the majority:

"Nevertheless, inasmuch as Bro. Dameron is already enrolled, and there being no contestant for his seat, we recommend that he be permitted to retain his place among us."

The report was discussed up to the hour of eleven o'clock. The Bishops' address was then read by Bishop Doggett, and will appear next week.

On motion of J. E. Edwards:

Resolved, 1. That so much of the Bishops' address as relates to our institutions of learning be referred to the Committee on Education.

2. That so much thereof as relates to Sunday schools be referred to the Committee on Sabbath Schools.

3. That the portion of the address which relates to our missionary work be referred to the Committee on Missions.

4. That so much as relates to District and Quarterly Conferences be referred to the Committee on Revisal.

5. That so much of the address as relates to fraternal relations be referred to a committee hereafter to be raised on fraternal relations; and that so much as relates to the proposed Ecumenical Conference be referred to the same committee.

6. That so much of the address as relates to the Publishing House at Nashville be referred to the Committee on Publishing Interests.

7. That the suggestions, in conclusion, as to additional legislation, be referred to the Committee on Itinerancy.

8. That so much as relates to the election of Bishops be referred to the Committee on Episcopacy.

On motion of J. E. Evans:

Resolved 1. That so much as refers to sinful amusements, family prayer, class meetings and kindred subjects be referred to the Committee on Revisal.

2. That so much as refers to the appointment of Bishop Marvin to visit our missions in China, and to the Wesleyan Methodist Conferences in every land, and his much lamented death be referred to the Committee on Episcopacy.

On motion of A. S. Andrews:

Resolved, That so much of the address as refers to Conference boundaries be referred to the Committee on Boundaries.

On motion of R. A. Young the address of the Bishops was ordered to be published in the Daily Christian Advocate and other city papers.

Bishop Paine then presented a communication which he had received from Bishops Simpson and Ames, and others, a committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, favoring an Ecumenical Conference. The communication was received and on motion of W. L. Nugent and T. K. Marshall it was referred to a special committee of five, appointed by the chair, as follows: E. M. Ipes, N. H. D. Wilson, R. A. Alexander, W. L. Nugent and A. G. Stitt.

The following resolution was offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That Dr. Redford be requested to deliver to the Committee on Publishing Interests the record of the Book Committee at Nashville.

B. CRAVEN.
W. F. KORNEGAY.

A. H. Redford presented the stereotype plate account, and the analysis of the business of the Publishing House from 1866 to 1877 by Mr. Dempsey Weaver, a member of the Book Committee, which was referred to the Committee on Publishing Interests.

D. C. Kelley presented a memorial concerning the Women's Missionary Society, and reports of the Board of Missions, and a picture of the Conference held by Bishop Marvin in China; all of which were referred to the Committee on Missions.

J. A. Miller, a clerical delegate from the Louisiana Conference, appeared and took his seat.

The Conference then adjourned with the doxology, and the benediction by the Bishop.

FOURTH DAY.

SATURDAY, May 4, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour. Bishop Wightman in the chair.

R. Alexander conducted divine service.

The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

Bishop Doggett took the chair.

The chair called for reports of standing committees. There were none.

The reports of special committees were called for. D. C. Kelley presented Report No. 1 of the Committee on Missions, which was read and adopted, as follows:

REPORT NO. 1 OF COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS.

Your committee beg leave to report the following resolutions:

Resolved, 1. That Rev. E. R. Hendrix be requested, at some time during the session of this General Conference, to deliver an address on Woman in Heathendom, together with the opportunities and duties of Christian women for their evangelization.

2. That the chairman of this committee be requested to arrange with the Committee on Public Worship as to time and place for this address, and a suitable programme for the occasion.

D. C. KELLEY, Chairman.

J. B. McFerrin, chairman of the Committee on Publishing Interests, presented a paper, which was read, and the request contained in it granted.

On joint motion of Drs. Potter and Finney, the chairman was directed to ask of the General Conference leave to present to it, for the purpose of reference to this committee, the investigation made by the executive Mr. Litton, of the books of the Publishing House, and the History of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, as written by Dr. J. B. McFerrin and other similar papers, and that Dr. A. H. Redford, the book agent, be requested to appear before this committee as its next meeting with any documents pertaining to the matters now before the committee in regard to the Publishing House which he may deem necessary.

Resolved, That the Committee on Publishing Interests be and is hereby authorized to call for any persons and papers necessary to the thorough investigation of the affairs of the Book Concern.

P. A. PETERSON.
W. E. WAILES.
PAUL WHITEHEAD.

R. Abbey, special agent for prosecution of the claims of the Publishing House in Congress, presented his report relating to the subject which was read and referred to the Committee on Publishing Interests.

Mr. Redford (agent Publishing House)—I desire to make an explanation of a matter. I have been asked by some brethren why I have not reported on the subject of the New Orleans Depository. I beg leave to state that the agent in New Orleans, Bro. Harp, delayed his report in consequence of personal illness. He was not able to get it up, but did his best. I received his report two or three days before leaving home, and have it with me in Atlanta. On Monday Bro. Harp wrote that he desired to make a correction, and requested that the report be not presented until the correction was made and he would send it in a few days.

A communication from the Bishops of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America was presented by Bishop McTyeire. Read and referred to the Committee on the Ecumenical Conference.

The Conference adjourned with the doxology, and the benediction by the Bishop.

THE GENERAL MINUTES FOR 1878.

Much regret has been expressed that the book agent has not been able to publish the General Minutes for the last two years. We share this regret. We prepared, with great labor and vexatious labor, the minutes of 1876 for the press. They await the printer. We have done the same with the minutes of 1877. They will abide their time. We wanted to make a special collection for their publication; but that was pronounced inexpedient. We have made out a compilation of the minutes of 1877, omitting errors which may be detected in passing them through the press; we find the grand totals stand thus: Traveling preachers, 3,339; superannuated, 282; local preachers, 3,—; white members, 759,218; colored members, 1,499; Indian members, 1,622; total ministers and members, 774,742. The transferred preachers are reckoned with those of the Conferences to which they now belong. The preachers who were discontinued last year (35) and those who were located (61) are not counted; those who were admitted on trial (232) and those who were readmitted (35) are counted among the traveling preachers, though many of them are also reckoned with the local preachers. The colored members, for the most part, have left our communion for the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, organized by our Bishops under the authority of the General Conference. They are reported in their own minutes; hence the apparent decrease in that department. Infants baptized, 42,316; adults baptized, 42,316; Sunday schools 6,597; teachers, 53,312; scholars, 353,183; collected for Conference claimants, $62,205 51; for missions, foreign and domestic, $121,[illegible]. The minutes of 1875 (those for 1876 not published nor recapitulated) show traveling preachers, 3,271—increase in two years, 168; superannuated preachers, 259—increase, [illegible]; local preachers, 5,462—increase 222; white members, 715,951—increase, [illegible]; colored members, 2,063—decrease, 581; Indian members, 1,335—increase, 287. Total increase, ministers and members, 13,381. In two years. The minutes of 1875 show infants baptized, 22,603—in 1877 there were more than in that year, in adults baptized 38,908—in 1877 there were 3,131 more than in 1875. In 1875 there were 7,575 Sunday schools—decrease, 981; in 1875 there were 49,797 teachers—decrease, [illegible]; in 1875 there were 346,752 scholars—increase, 6,401. Is this disparity to be accounted for by a tendency to report the number of Sunday-school scholars, without reporting the number of schools and teachers? We call attention to this. We have reported all the figures sent us from the Conference. In 1875 we reported collected, 326 18 for Conference claimants—decrease, $2,120 04. In 1875 we report $120,128 31 for missions—increase, $983 44. This includes both foreign and domestic missions, but in neither case does it include any contributions not reported by the Annual Conferences. Hence there is disparity between these figures and those of the treasurer of the Board of Missions.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Bro. Werlein closed a protracted meeting at Louisiana Avenue church last week, which resulted in a number of conversions and accessions.

Books and Periodicals.

SEOLA. Lee & Shepard, publishers, Boston, and Charles T. Dillingham, New York.

This is a work of imagination, surpassingly brilliant in style, and displaying descriptive powers of the highest order. It purports to be the journal of the wife of the Patriarch Japheth, the son of Noah, which the author tells us was accidentally discovered in a cave in the North Syrian Mountains. It is assumed that the sons of God, spoken of in Genesis, who took to themselves wives of the daughters of men, were angelic beings, who became incarnate, forsook the service of God, and mingled in the affairs of earth. From this followed that widespread corruption which brought the deluge upon the world. The journal of Japheth's wife is an attempt to portray character and society as made up of this strange commingling of the human and the superhuman, in a state of sin and rebellion against God. The entering of the ark by the animals and by the family of Noah, the breaking up of the fountains of the great deep, and the utter destruction of the people are described; the life in the ark is depicted, the first launching upon the stormy waters, and its grounding on the top of the mountain when the flood began to subside. It also records Seola's prophetic vision of the spread of the race of Japheth over the Western world, and its wonderful achievements in government, science, religion and art. Based upon a false exegesis of Scripture, it is, nevertheless, a remarkable book. Price, $1 50. For sale by Eyrich, 130 Canal street, New Orleans.

The author gives an interesting description of a trip made by himself in a paper canoe through the inland and coast waters from Quebec to Florida. It was a veritable voyage, interrupted by occasional portages, but mainly afloat from the beginning to the termination of the expedition. The writer gives excerpt of the countries through which he passed, and especially compliments the South in people for their uniform kindness and hospitality. The volume contains many finely-executed maps, and, besides abounding in entertaining incident, it furnishes a large amount of geographical and scientific information. The volume is a 12mo of 351 pages. Type and paper unexceptionable, and handsomely bound. The price is $2 50. For sale by Eyrich, 130 Canal street, New Orleans.

The old-time and well known ditties strikingly illustrated in silhouette; something to charm and interest the youngest readers. Price, 75 cents. For sale by Eyrich, New Orleans.

CLARKE'S REED ORGAN MELODIES. William Horatio Clarke. Boston: Oliver Ditson & Co.

This is a volume of instrumental music designed for the reed organ, comprising selections from many of the most popular composers of the day. A work of much value and merit. Price, $2 50 in boards, and $3 in cloth.

The Lawrence "Mother Goose" (Lee & Shepard, publishers Boston) is the Mother Goose Melodies set to music and containing descriptions, costumes and characters. A help to work for those who wish to amuse the children. Price, 75 cents. For sale by Eyrich, New Orleans.

The North American Review for May and June has the following articles: The Republican Party in Its Death-struggle? The Sovereignty of Ethics; Commercial Relations with France; Discipline in American Colleges; The Army of the United States; Is Man a Depraved Creature? The Irresistible Conflict Undecided; Chinese Immigration; The Phonograph and Its Future; Contemporary Literature.

Appleton's Railway and Steam Navigation Guide for May has been received. A very valuable work for travelers. Price, twenty-five cents.

The Semi-Tropical for May comes to us from the land of flowers—Jacksonville, Fla.—bright and fragrant, like the spring.

The American Agriculturist for May is handsomely illustrated, and packed with useful information.

The Southern Cultivator for May has been received. A valuable work for a Southern agriculturist.

The Sanitarian for May has been received. A valuable periodical.

A Woman Appointed to China.

After months of prayer and carefulness a woman has been found for our China mission, who, as we believe, combines those rare characteristics which will fit her for the work—linguistic talent, which has been tested in the acquisition of English, Latin, Greek and German—mental equipoise and sufficient individuality to enable her to be aggressive—youth, which fits her for learning to speak a new and difficult language, yet experience in the very field which most of all others would prepare her for this work. For two years she has been a teacher in our New Hope Indian Boarding School. Dr. Gulford Jones, Dr. Sullivan, of Saddle Mission, and Bro. Shapard, of the New Hope school, give us every ground for confidence. Above all, when her own letter came its simple reading before the board brought conviction to every mind that "this is the woman." A like effect, it will be seen, was produced on the mind of Bishop McTyeire when the correspondence, with the recommendation of the board, was submitted to him:

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
Nashville, Tennessee, April 12, 1878.

Drs. McFerrin and Kelley, Missionary Secretaries:

Dear Brethren,—It seems to me from the inclosed correspondence which I return to you, that the right person has been found for the China mission—under the auspices of the women's societies—and I am glad to learn from you that pledges have been given for the full amount necessary to send her, and much of the money is already in their treasury. Miss Lockie Rankin seems to combine all the qualities needed—education, experience, consecration. I am not surprised that the board should regard her favorably. Please notify her of her appointment to our China mission, and take measures for her departure at the earliest day practicable. Yours very truly,

H. N. McTYEIRE.

Miss Lockie Rankin is the daughter of a Methodist preacher, has a brother recently a member of the Memphis Conference who has just been transferred to the Pacific Conference, and stationed at Sacramento. Since he has received notice of her appointment a letter comes answering an invitation to visit Nashville, and adds: "Though silent, I am by no means inexpressible respecting the honors and responsibilities of the appointment." This is the tone which indicates both the right Christian view of the work and the right spirit in the writer.

While we have been delaying to decide on the fitness of our various applicants some of our blessed helpers in the Lord the women of Baltimore, have also been engaged in prayer and effort to find the woman wanted. Two days ago an intimation reached us that a woman, a member of a time-honored Methodist family of old Baltimore, has consented, if the church needed her, to give herself to this work. Would God that the women of Baltimore and Virginia and all the Atlantic coast would respond at once, that we might send them out two and two! This is the form most to be desired, on many accounts. With Mrs. Hayes and the group of devoted co-laborers in Baltimore, at one end of the line, and Mrs. Bishop Wightman, in Charleston, at the other end, we believe the additional thousand dollars can be paid before September, the date at which it is desired to have them go forth.

D. C. KELLEY, A. S.

God in all ages has manifested a special interest in and care for the children. We may well call him "Father." At the giving of the law from Sinai the little ones were remembered: "Thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk about them when thou sittest in thine house," etc.—Deuteronomy vi, 7. Oh, that Christians would speak more to each other in their own homes about [illegible] things, and especially in the presence of the children. God manifest in the flesh; took an infinite delight in the children. We can see them in imagination climbing on his knee and nestling in his bosom, while he smiles sweetly on them, and permitted them to feel the heatings of his loving heart. We cannot forget his departing command to Peter, and through Peter to every disciple: "Feed my lambs."

Christianity is the only religion in the world that lovingly cares for the children. Mohammedanism despises them. Brahminism and Hindooism Were wont to leave them to die, or willingly destroyed them, until British law intervened for their protection. Nearly all the superstitions and forms of heathenism treat them with barbarity. The religion of Christ alone lavishes on them tender affection, claims them for God, and seeks to train them for eternity.

The Christian church ought to be the spiritual nursery for the young. She ought to provide for them first, and not last. It is the grandest and most productive work to which the church can lay its hand, and should not be done anyhow or by anybody. It demands the highest and most efficient instrumentality.

But, after all, the home is the place where the young character is molded and formed. And the most potent force in the home is the mother's influence—her teaching, her example, her prayers, not only for, but with her children.—Rev. W. Marshall, London.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.—As is usually the case, a great many petitions and memorials have been sent to the General Conference, suggesting changes, amendments and supposed improvements. We opine the report of the Committee on Revisals will be, in relation to most of these: "Your committee deem the proposed changes unadvisable."

SIMPLICITY OF STYLE.—In a lecture on simplicity in writing and speaking, Joseph Cook, the famous lecturer, quotes several maxims from the French, such as the following:

"Words, like lenses, obscure what they do not enable us to see better."

"The oratorical style has often the disadvantage of those operas in which the music prevents the word from being heard. In this case the word prevents you from seeing the thoughts."

"When a thought is not strong enough to gear a simple expression, that is a reason for rejecting it."

"It is by familiar words that a style bites and takes possession of the reader. It is by these that great thoughts obtain currency, and are assumed to be good metal, like gold and silver stamped with a well-known impression."

"It is not enough to make people understand what you say. You must make them see it. The memory, the understanding and the imagination must all take possession of it."

"Let your mind always be loftier than your thoughts, and your thoughts loftier than your language."—Youth's Companion.

One of the saddest things about human nature is that a man may guide others in the path of life without walking in it himself—that he may be a pilot and yet a castaway.—Julius Hare.

In darkness there is no choice. It is light that enables us to see the differences between things; and it is Christ that gives us light.—Julius C. Hare.

MARRIED.

WHITE—LYONS.—April 30, 1878, at the residence of Dr. W. D. White, in Abbeville, Vermillion parish, La., by Rev. E. B. Foust, Mr. Walter A. White and Miss Mary E. Lyons, all of Vermillion parish, La.

BRUCE—GLOVER.—At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. E. V. Glover, on Sicily Island, Catahoula parish, La., April 25, 1878, by Rev. C. R. Geoffrey, Mr. John H. Bruce to Miss Mittie Glover, both of said parish.

EVANS—JOHNSON.—April 25, 1878, at the residence of the bride's father, by Rev. Joseph S. Oakley, Mr. F. W. F. Evans and Miss Meda Johnson, daughter of Col. J. M. Johnson, of Holmes county, Miss.

PRUHART—HAYS.—April 10, 1878, at the residence of the bride's father, near Tioga, Tex., by Rev. W. H. Phillips, Mr. H. D. Urquhart and Miss E. Katie Hays.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE offers the greatest inducements to Eastern and Northern travelers this season. It should be known to all that this line has been immensely improved during the past year. It has, in fact, been almost entirely rebuilt. It now has a the steel-rail track, and upon new ties, and an excellent road-bed. This enables it to make as fast time as any line to New York with entire safety, and without the appearance of a fast running. Its connections from Chattanooga and Chicago being among the finest lines in the world. Attention is especially called to the fact that the Jackson route runs two daily trains to New York, and all the Eastern and Northern cities. The train leaving at six P. M., one hour later than any other line makes exactly the same time to New York as its quickest rival, and the seven A. M. train makes one and a half hours quicker time to New York than any other "fast train" from New Orleans. There are no changes to New York by any line. The Jackson route has but one change of cars, which is made in Union depot, Cincinnati, at eight A. M.

Passengers direct to New York by the Jackson route pass through the splendid scenery and cool air of the Alleghany Mountains. Thorough-going Chicago passengers have a daylight view of Niagara Falls, and also have no change of cars from New Orleans to New York.

Publisher's Department.

THE MARY HOUSTON.—First favorite boat, with a No. 1 steamboat will during the present summer make trips to Cincinnati every three weeks. She will leave this port for the north on Saturday, the twenty-fifth instant, connecting with the fast railway lines at the junction, the Queen City. There is no more superior boat upon the Ohio and there will be a pleasant way for tourists to travel east and west. She has every accommodation that is needed for comfort and speed and is commanded by that gentlemanly officer, Capt. Miller. The passage has been reduced, and every effort has been made to secure safety and comfort to every passenger.

CARRE'S CARINS.—The business of the late W. W. Carre is still carried on under the same name, and is managed for the estate by Horace U. Beach, a young man of fine business qualifications, who is thoroughly posted in all the details of the business. Lumber of every description is kept for sale, and a specialty is made of the Carre cypress, which have been growing in popularity for years.

LUMBER.—L. Carbo, the well known dealer in lumber, has an advertisement on this page. Lumber of every description, sawed and dressed, is kept on hand at depots. Builders and those contemplating building should call and estimates from Mr. Carbo, as he may be able to sell as much lower prices than others in the same business.

DENTISTRY.—Drs. Kells & Viet have a card on this page. Both of these gentlemen stand high professionally in this community, they having been established here since 1856. The prices charged by the joint firm suitable for first-class work. Those needing the services of good dentists should call at 12 Dauphine street.

TRUNKS.—A. Eysminger, dealer in trunks and waterproof clothing, solicits the patronage of the traveling public. He has a large and fine assortment, which cannot be surpassed in this city. Orders for covering and lettering will be attended to promptly by skilful workmen.

ATTENTION is called to the card of Mrs. J. L. Wight, of Rochester N. Y. Any one wishing to send children North to be educated could not select a better place than the home offered by Mrs. Wight.

TYLER'S.—If you want anything in the jewelry line go to 115 Canal street. This is one of the oldest establishments of the kind in the South, and is perfectly reliable. Supply your wants home to be repaired.

MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS. If any of our readers need anything in the above line they should go or send to that reliable gentleman, George Strong, 138, 140, 142 and 144 St. Charles street.

COOPERAGE.—T. A. Beck, No. 27 North Peters street, has always on hand sugar hogsheads, molasses barrels, half barrels, kegs, etc. Orders promptly attended to.

For everything in the machinery line go to B. J. West's, 115 and 117 Magazine street. He stands well for honorable dealing. Read the advertisement.

W. W. WASHBURN.—This celebrated photographic artist is challenging the admiration of all connoisseurs of the "art preservative," whether among our own citizens or among those persons who have visited the most famous galleries in this or any European country. While Mr. Washburn thus excels in his profession, he still remembers that to obtain the patronage of those who visit his excellent studio he must be reasonable in his charges, and so places the best pictures within the compass of modest purses. If you would like to have your own or your friends' perfect likenesses, go or take them to the corner of Canal street and Exchange Place, and secure an imperishable picture. This is the leading gallery in the South.

THE air of perfection, cleanliness and home-like comfort which is so apparent at the American House, Boston, is one of the characteristic features of that well-regulated establishment. To those disposed to economize this popular hotel offers an opportunity seldom found at so thoroughly a first-class house, having reduced its rates to $3 and $3 50 per day.

WE REFER parties needing steam engines, boilers, mills, gins, presses, etc., to the advertisement of H. Dudley Coleman & Bro., No. 12 Union street, New Orleans, La., they being manufacturers and dealers of well-established reputation.

THE "WONDER DOCTOR," who has an advertisement in the ADVOCATE, wishes it understood that he uses only American herbs in the preparation of his medicines.

CLERGYMEN & PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

There is no doubt that clergymen and orators, while speaking, would derive great benefit from perfuming their handkerchiefs with Dr. Price's Floral Dishes, as its fragrance excites the mind to vigorous action and is gratefully refreshing. For fresh, it every odor no other cologne or toilet-water equals it.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC is adapted to all circumstances and situations, and requires no change of diet, particular regimen, or care against taking cold. For sale by all druggists.

AS A REMEDY FOR INDIGESTION, Liver Disturbance, Nervous Debility, Constipation, Languor, Headache, and all irregularities of the bowels, DR. HARTER'S ELIXIR OF WILD CHERRY stands without a rival in the world. For sale by all druggists.

WILHOFT'S, FEVER AND AGUE Tonic.—For all diseases caused by malarial poisoning of the blood, a warranted cure. No poison, no arsenic, no mercury, no quinine; no bolus of pills or glaring eyes, no burning head or great log-like knees or paralyzed system from disease. It is safe, vigorating and leaves the patient renewed in mind and body, and sound as a dollar. It wipes out all sallowness, and gives a blooming complexion in the place of that sickly, dirt-eating color peculiar to Chills and Splenetic derangements. WICKLOCK, FISLAY & Co., proprietors, New Orleans. For sale by all druggists.

POZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER is acknowledged by thousands of ladies who use it daily, to be the only preparation that does not freshen the skin, clear the sallow or leaden black spots in the pores. Mothers, can apply it to infants who become chafed with a variety of immediate relief. Removes all eruptions. Price, 50 cents and $1 per box. Sold by druggists, and at depot, 607 North Sixth street, St. Louis. (Lindell Hotel.)

STONE IN THE BLADDER

RELIEVED BY THE

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

AFTER THE LIFE OF THE PATIENT WAS DESPAIRED OF BY HIS MEDICAL ADVISERS. THE STONE DISSOLVED IN THREE HOURS IN A GLASS OF THE LITHIA WATER.

POINT COUPEE, LA., April 3, 1878.

MR. THOMAS F. GOODE: By request I give you the following history of my case: Two years ago I began to suffer with severe pain in my kidneys, and to have periodical attacks—about two a week—which caused the most excruciating agony, from which I was able to rally relieved by the discharge of a stone from four to six grains in weight. There was never entire freedom from the pain in the kidneys. In eighteen months I discharged seven large stones, besides quantities of smaller stones and sand. As the result of this protracted and great suffering my general health was reduced so, as how a complete wreck, and I looked for relief only in death. In this state of things, about six months ago Spring No. 2. A week after I began to use it I had a slight attack, in which I passed two small stones. Placing one of these in a glass of the Water, in three hours I found it dissolved, to a fine dust, which gave me confidence, and I persevered in its use. I have had no attack since. The pain in my kidneys has entirely disappeared. I have regained my usual weight, and my general health is perfectly restored. I very cheerfully acknowledge my indebtedness for my life and the comfort which I now enjoy to this great health-giving Water. Respectfully,

C. WOLFF.

This Water, in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles, can be had at the Springs, and of T. F. GOODE, Wholesale Druggist, 42 and 44 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

POULTRY-KEEPING

HOW TO BEGIN.

There is a very general desire to engage in keeping poultry. The business does not require hard work, and is attractive and agreeable. It also promises to be profitable, and profit is the chief inducement to the majority of the novices who desire to attempt it. A few general cautions are needed by those who would undertake the business.

A novice cannot, by the mere use of money, take up poultry-keeping and make a success. On the contrary, he will be more than likely to lose all the money he invests if he supposes that the business consists only in buying some fowls and feed, and in selling eggs and chickens, by simply permitting the hens to produce eggs while he gathers them. Success only comes to the long-experienced poultry-man who knows precisely what is to be done to secure this result. It is best to begin with a few fowls, making their keeping a secondary business, until these can be managed with success and profit. Then the number may be increased, and when the business pays sufficiently, then sole attention may be given to it. It is more profitable to purchase fowls than eggs. This is a simple matter of figuring. If a dozen eggs of choice fowls are procured at a cost of say $5, a year will elapse before any profit can be gained from the three or four pullets that may probably be hatched from them. If a trio of birds are purchased at a cost of say $20 now, a number of eggs will be procured before setting-time arrives, and then each hen may bring out a brood of eight or ten chicks. After these are raised, more eggs will be laid, and if good care is given there may be on the whole twenty dozen eggs, ten pullets and ten cockerels, as the produce of this trio within the same time that it would have taken from the dozen eggs first mentioned, to produce three or four pullets. There is an obvious difference in favor of beginning with birds, both as to profit and time.—American Agriculturist.

SHEEP

ON THE EXHAUSTED COTTON PLANTATIONS OF THE SOUTH.

Capitalists in this country are extraordinarily ignorant of the extensive field now opened for speculation in real estate, or they would take advantage of the present opportunity to possess themselves of the old cotton plantations, and thereon grow mutton and wool, for they could make ten times more by wool than by cotton, and get all the mutton as an extra profit.

I am perfectly certain, if I had the control of a large tract of land, that, without the aid of a single white man, and without any assistance in buying or selling, I could stock these deserted plantations with sheep and put them in charge of the negroes, so as to have sheep husbandry established on forty thousand acres, and in twenty years make more money than A. T. Stewart, Jacob Astor and the Vanderbilts combined; for I would extend till millions would be made annually. There would be a great advantage here over the English colony of Australia, yet there sheep are more numerous than in this much earlier-settled country.

Statistics have proved that in the South during the last three years wool has paid sixty per cent. for growing, while cotton has not paid more than five to seven per cent; and then it must be recollected that the sheep have been managed on such a poor, miserable system that double this amount of profit could be made by an enlightened method of treatment, and mutton of the very best quality sold annually, which would enhance profits far beyond anything the present Western sheep-owners have any idea of. Mutton and wool would produce more millions than cotton ever did.—George Gardner, in Rural New Yorker.

BEESWAX.

The uses of the wax are numerous and important. Its property of preserving tissues and preventing mold or mildew was well known to the ancients, who used cerecloth for embalming, and the wax for encaustic painting, as in the wall-pictures of Pompeii. Wax candles and tapers play an important part in the processions and ceremonies of the Roman Catholic Church. Wax is used by the manufacturers of glazed ornamental and wall papers, and on paper collars and cuffs for polishing the surfaces. It is used in varnishes and paints, and for the "stuffing" of wood which is to be polished, as for pianos, coach work, fine furniture, and parquette floors; electrotypers and plasterers use wax in forming their molds. Wax is an important ingredient in preparations for covering surfaces of polished iron and steel to prevent rust. Combined with tallow, it forms the coating for canvass and cordage to prevent mildew, as in sails, awnings, etc. Artificial flowers consume much wax, and, despite the introduction of paraffine, ceresin and mineral wax, its use appears to be extending. One of the oldest of its applications is in the laundry, and the polishing wood-work.

The product of wax in the United States is stated to be 20 000 000 pounds annually, and is increasing. It is worth in money at least $3 000 000. Of this about $700,000 worth are exported, and about $1,200,000 worth of honey also goes abroad. The total product of honey and wax is worth at present in the United States nearly $5,000 000.—Our Home Journal

LAMENESS IN SHEEP.

The principal part of the body is supported by the heel or back part of the foot. The front part is, from its pointed nature, well adapted to preserve the foothold and prevent slipping, particularly in ascending rocky declivities; and in such situations, and particularly if the animal has to travel, the wear of the horn at the toe is equal to its growth. But in wet pastures or on soft soil the growth of the toe is much greater than the wear, and consequently this part often grows extremely long and irregular, so that it separates from the quick, and dirt insinuates, and lameness and a troublesome wound are the consequence, sometimes leading to foot-rot. This might be prevented by cutting off the superfluous horn with a knife.

The foot of the sheep often becomes sore from traveling, particularly on sandy roads. In this case it is the heels, and the skin between them, that suffer; but timely rest will set the matter right, and a little oil of tar may be applied to the wound.

Sometimes the biflex canal (an inflection of the skin between the digits above the clefts of the hoof) becomes the seat of disease and the cause of lameness; sand may penetrate, or the parts may be chafed by much walking in the dirt, and inflammation and ulceration are the consequence. This part may be cleaned and dressed with tincture of myrrh and tincture of aloes, equal parts mixed. If proud flesh forms, it should be kept down by a few applications (with a feather) of muriate of ammonia.

These various injuries often prove very troublesome, from the circumstances of the sheep being exposed (particularly in the fall of the year) to dirt and moisture, and the vicissitudes of the weather, and sometimes prove the forerunner of a still more troublesome malady—the foot rot.—Prairie Farmer.

How to Boil Potatoes.—Always remember that the sweetest part of the potato is nearest the skin. Select your potatoes all of the same sort, and as nearly as possible of the same size. They must be all of the same sort, because different varieties require different degrees of boiling; they should be of the same size, so as to be cooked in the same time. Thoroughly clean your potatoes by scrubbing them with a hard brush. A knife must never touch them, not even to remove the eyes. Pack them tightly in a sauce-pan, so as to cover them with the smallest quantity of water. Always use clean rain-water for cooking, if you can obtain it. Cover with water, adding a teaspoonful of salt to a quart of water. Bring them to the boil. Set them aside to simmer; potatoes are generally spoiled by quick boiling. Try them with a thin bone skewer. When nearly done finish the cooking by boiling up quickly for one or two minutes. Pour away all the water. Partly remove the lid to allow the moisture to evaporate. Give the sauce-pan one or two shakes. Lay a clean white cloth in a wooden bowl, peel the potatoes quickly, and send them to the table.

"Alfalfa, so highly praised by the Californians, was formerly known among the ancients as lucerne. It seems to be especially adapted to the soil and climate of California. It is a valuable forage plant for warm climates, and especially in those localities where severe droughts are frequent. It requires continuous heat to bring it to perfection. In the long, hot seasons of the extreme Southern States it ought to do well, as it requires continued heat to increase continuous growth, whereas many as three crops can be taken in a single season."

We clip from the Southern Farmer the above notice of alfalfa. We can add that it will do for the Southern States, and do well too; it is the very best clover grown, and crops have been raised in California as high as eight, ten, twelve, and even sixteen tons to the acre. Deep cultivation, thick seeding, and repeated cuttings while young and tender, give an almost perpetual crop.—California Farmer.

Cooking Meat.—The mutton was well washed and drained dry, then put into a very hot oven; in about twenty minutes I basted it well with the fat in the pan; when it was nicely browned, the oven-door (one door) was left ajar till fifteen minutes before dinner-time, when it was again shut. A great many cooks put salt on the meat before cooking, a thing which they make a great mistake. I used to do so, but I have learned better; it makes a roast or fried meat very hard; but, if sprinkled on after cooking, salt will drive and accumulate or gather the juice, making the meat very rich in gravy, while it will not contract and toughen the cooked albumen of the meat. You do not put salt upon a beefsteak before you broil it, and did you never notice how quickly the juice gathers on top of the steak after you have put upon it a trifle of butter, and sprinkled it with pepper and salt? It is the latter which produces this effect.—The Cultivator.

The Phylloxera in Europe.—Phylloxera, that pernicious enemy of the vine, which hitherto had mainly restricted its devastations to the wine-growing districts of France and Switzerland, seems lately to be going on and in Germany. It is announced that it has appeared in a vineyard at Rauschwitz, near Diegau, as well as in a viticultural establishment as Plantieres, near Metz. In the former case the vines had been purchased last spring from one of the numerous horticulturists of Erfurt. The necessary measures are being taken to prevent the spreading of the plague. In France phylloxera seems also on the increase; at Saint Medard and other places of the Gers department the vines are covered by such masses of the insect that the latter can easily be seen by the naked eye, which is generally not an easy matter.

Prussian Dwarf Pears.—The successful culture of dwarf pears depends on four essential requisites, viz: 1. A locality where they are found to succeed, for in some places they fail although this failure is sometimes attributed to unfavorable locality, when it is more the result of neglect. 2. Good cultivation and annual enriching of the soil, especially at the north and east. Where the soil is naturally fertile and the summers hot, less cultivation and manuring are necessary. 3. Pruning, to prevent too many fruit-spurs, and to favor a growth of vigorous shoots. 4. The selection of such varieties only as grow freely on the quince, as Duchesse d'Angoulene, which is the hardiest and most enduring; Louise Bonne of Jersey, Doyenne Boussock, Beurre Superfin, etc. In severe climates mulching for winter is important and essential, and is useful everywhere.

Ashes for Fruit-Trees.—The editor of the Horticulturist says: "We have known quite a number of instances—indeed so often as to make it quite a rule—that old orchards apparently dying out have been brought back again to fruitfulness by the liberal use of wood ashes, also stirring the soil. Potash is the most important element in the successful growth of all kinds of fruit-trees. An old gentleman told a club, not long ago, that he had known a man make and preserve an orchard of apple-trees in a flourishing and productive condition, originally placed on very poor ground, by sprinkling every year around each tree, to the circumference of the extent of its branches, half a bushel of ashes. We consider this a very important item."

Saddle-Galls.—To prevent saddle galls, the saddle should be lined with some smooth, hard substance. Flannel or woolen cloth is bad. A hard-finished, smooth rawhide lining, similar to those of the military saddles, is preferable. Then, if the saddle is properly fitted to the horse's back, there will be no galls unless the horse is very hardly used. Galls should be washed with soap and water, and then with a solution of three grains of copperas or blue vitriol to one tablespoonful of water, which will harden the surface, and help to restore the growth of the skin. White hairs growing upon galled spots cannot be prevented.—Nebraska Farmer.

Transferring Plants.—The editor of the Germantown Telegraph says: "There is no mode that we ever tried so effectual in transplanting tomato, cabbage, cantaloupe or any other tender plants from the hot-bed, or from one place to another, as to prepare a vessel filled with manure water, and rich soil, about the consistency of thin mush, with which the roots of the plants should be well coated and set in a hole made with a sharp, round piece of wood or dibble. After being rather firmly planted, moisten again with manure-water. We have never failed in any transplanting when done in this way, and the trouble is very slight."

Take your stand on the Rock of Ages. Let death, let the judgment come; the victory is yours through him.

WE DON'T CARE!

Some dealers say; Yes, we know that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is the best; but we don't care if others are made of saw dust or arsenic, so long as they afford us a better profit, and we can sell them. The reason why adulterated baking powders are recommended is because Dr. Price's pay less profit.

MEDICAL.

The German Star in Louisiana.

THE SO-CALLED WONDER DOCTOR has arrived safely in New Orleans, with his band and family. He has made a twelve months' tour through the State of Louisiana to show to the public what he can do with his AMERICAN HERB MEDICINES for the diseased blood system and organs. The Doctor is a thorough and experienced German chemist of the herb and vegetable kingdom, and has spent eighteen years in exploring America for the purpose of discovering the most valuable medical herbs growing in America. He has succeeded in discovering the secrets of all Indian tribes in connection with the vegetable kingdom, and thus is enabled, as a practical physician, to prescribe these herbs to his patients. The Doctor has been wonderfully successful in the treatment of his patients, of whom he has had in his charge this winter nine months. These comprised cases of sickness of every description, and of both sexes. All these patients were completely restored to health in a very short time. Everywhere in the State the Doctor had to promise to establish himself in New Orleans, which he has resolved to do and carried out; in order to relieve, as fast as Nature will permit, the long sufferings of so many of his fellow-beings. None but American herbs will be employed by the Doctor in the preparation of his medicines, and all patients who may honor him with their confidence and encourage will be treated with them.

The Doctor has established his office and a Chemical Laboratory, as well as a complete Private Hospital, at No. 161 BOURBON STREET, between Toulouse and St. Louis streets, so as to give to the afflicted from everywhere an opportunity to receive medical attention at his hands. The rooms are all well fitted up, and absolutely under his personal supervision. His terms are moderate. Letters of inquiry (with three cent stamp inclosed) will be answered promptly. Orders to medicines will be filled upon the receipt of the money, and mailed free to any place in the United States. Address

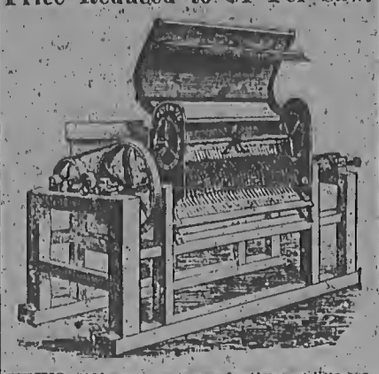
DANIEL PRATT'S IMPROVED

"Revolving Head" Cotton Gin.

PATENTED JULY 15, 1873.

Price Reduced to $4 Per Saw.



THIS GIN has been in use for the past five seasons, and several recent improvements have been added. It obviates all friction at the ends of the cotton box, prevents the roll from breaking, and gives a Larger Yield of Lint from the same Amount of Seed than Any other Gin in use. The Revolving Head lightens the draft and causes the Gin to run faster with less driving power, thus doing a great deal more work within the same time, while consuming steam or animal power than any other Gin. The seed being ginned very close, the length of the staple is increased producing cotton on this account of a greater market value. This improved value, given by length of staple, with extra production of lint, added to increased amount of work done, more than covers the cost of the Gin in every 100 bales ginned. Testimonials sent by mail on application.

SCIENTIFIC.

—The electrical apparatus for illuminating the harbor of Odessa during the Turkish blockade cost about $5 a night.

—It has been noticed that European bees, when imported into Australia, for a year or two keep their hives in good order, and make a very fair amount of honey, but after that time they become idle and wholly unproductive. An explanation of this curious fact would be of great interest.

—Prof. Ramsay has lately endeavored to maintain that the basins of lakes had been scooped out by glaciers. He cites cases where there are lakes near mountain chains which still have furnished glaciers, and pointed out the absence of lakes in many parts of the world where there are no high chains. Some lakes may have been formed in that way, but many were certainly not.

—A party to observe the solar eclipse of July 29 is being organized at Princeton, under the direction of Profs. Young and Brackett, the party being furnished by the trustees of the John C. Green estate and certain liberal friends of the college in this city. The party will consist of ten or twelve persons, and will occupy themselves principally with spectroscopic work, the spectrum being studied visually, photographically and thermometrically. The station of observation will probably be near Denver.—Independent.

The death of Father Secchi, says Independent, will be deeply felt by all who are interested in spectroscopic astronomy. He was undoubtedly one of the most skillful and assiduous of observers, and by his observations and discussions had contributed more than any other living man to our knowledge and understanding of the constitution of the sun. His book, Le Soleil, of which a new edition appeared about a year ago, is by far the most complete work on the subject in existence, and in its typography, illustrations and appearance probably the most beautiful monumental book ever published.

Some highly interesting antiquities were recently found near Wisby, on the Swedish island of Gottland, in the Baltic. Excavations are being made for a new railway, and in a gravel pit, about a foot under the surface, a copper casket was found which contained two sets of bronze scales, each set consisting of five different pieces, and belonging to an Arabic monetary system. Besides these weights there was a pair of magnifying glasses in the box, and on the top of all there were found two balance scales, a larger and a smaller balance beam, the former with chains, the latter with silk strings, which were still present. All the objects were artistically finished and made of bronze.—

We have the best imitation Gold Watch in the market. The metal is a composition of other metals, so closely resembling gold, that the best judges find it difficult to detect the difference, except by a chemical test, and it has the virtues required to make it the best substitute for gold known—Genuine American Movement, Expansion Balance, Beautifully Engraved or Enamel Turned Hunting Cases and equal in appearance to a GOLD WATCH THAT COSTS from $150 to $200. If you wish a watch for your own use, or to make money on, try this. Owing to our large sales we are enabled to reduce the price of them to $4 each, with an elegant Chain attached. They are used on railroads, steamers and in manufactories, and other places where accurate time is required, and give general satisfaction. We send them by mail or express, on receipt of $12, to any part of the country, or it will be sent C. O. D. when the customer desires, and remits $3 on account. These elegant CHAINS weigh about Fifty Pennyweights, and the same pattern in pure gold would cost $50. We sell these Chains at $4 each. But we sell the Watch and Chain for $12, sent by mail in a registered package, post-paid, to any postoffice in the United States.
WE SELL THE WATCH WITHOUT THE CHAIN FOR $10.

MILK OF MAGNESIA
IS THE best preparation known for all disturbed conditions of the stomach. It immediately and certainly cures DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, HEARTBURN, SPRAINOMAH and HEADACHES caused by acidity of the stomach. The pleasant effervescent drink like citrate of this preparation renders it very valuable for infants, requiring no persuasion to force them to take it. It never gives relief, but soothing to the stomach, and will act as a laxative when used as directed. It is also a delightful remedy for females. The combination of this preparation and its perfect solubility are made fully apparent for the following reasons. They represent a teaspoonful of the powder dissolved in a wine glass of water. The first contained Magnesia as usually sold with water. The second the Milk of Magnesia now offered. The difference between them is most striking, for whereas the undissolved precipitates and particles of the drug of inferior Magnesia are exhibited with terrible distinctness, the Milk of Magnesia has all the appearance of a cloudy vapor, entirely free from the objectionable precipitates, and in fact is perfectly dissolved.
Be sure to get Milk of Magnesia. Ask your druggist for it, and do not accept any substitute. It is entirely different from all other preparations of Magnesia. Physicians and others not already acquainted with this preparation will obtain full explanatory circular by addressing

COMMERCIAL.

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
NEW ORLEANS, Tuesday, May 7, 1878.

In provisions and Western produce prices have a downward tendency. The market for other articles is about the same as when our last report was made.

The Supreme Court having decided in favor of the issue of two million dollars of State bonds to aid the New Orleans Pacific railroad, had the effect of bringing State consols from 77¼ down to 75¾ on yesterday. The holders of these securities, however, have come to the conclusion that the State's credit is not injured so very much, after all, and are holding consols to-day at 76@77. We can see no reason why these bonds should not go to 90 or par, and remain at least at the lower figure. Premium bonds have not changed in the last week. Stocks are rather dull.

COTTON.

The inquiry during the day was fair, but in consequence of factors holding off from the market the transactions were restricted to 2,100 bales. The tone of the market is slightly steadier.

The following is the official closing of the Cotton Exchange:

	To-Day.	Yesterday.
Low Ordinary	7⅛	7⅛
Ordinary	7⅜	7⅜
Good Ordinary	9⅛	9⅛
Low Middling	9¾	9¾
Middling	10¼	10¼
Good Middling	11	11
Middling Fair

CAN BEES HEAR?—Sir John Lubbock has sought in vain to discover whether bees possess the sense of hearing. He has placed the violin close to his bees, and has tried a dog whistle, a shrill pipe, a tuning-fork, and shouting, but no noise seemed to disturb them in the least. But a curious circumstance occurred recently at Windsor, which seems to determine the question in favor of their ability to hear. According to the London Daily News, while the Second Life Guards were returning to their barracks, a few days ago, a swarm of bees, attracted by the music, followed the regiment for over a mile, flying about over the heads of the band. On arriving at the barrack-yard the band formed up to play the regiment into the barracks; the bees instantly followed their example, forming up also, and settling on a branch of a tree over the heads of the musicians. They were at once taken prisoners and hived in the barrack-yard. This occurrence appears to confirm the wisdom of the common practice of making a noise to collect bees.

Upon the higher Alps the snow is sometimes piled so high, and is so evenly balanced, that the crack of a whip or the shout of a herd voice may give sufficient vibration to the air to bring down the whole mass upon the travelers below. So in our moral world there are souls just hovering over the abyss of ruin. A word, or even a look from us may cause them to plunge down into the depths from which there is no return, or a helping hand stretched out to them in the moment of peril may lead them back to the safe paths.—Kind Words.

AN INQUIRY.

Is it not better to purchase Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts—Lemon, Orange, Vanilla, etc.—that have stood the test of years, than adulterated, unhealthy articles, because they are cheaper? Good, pure articles have a fair valuation; and Dr. Price's are unequaled in quality and purity.

VOL. 24. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1878. NO. 20.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE M. E. CHURCH SOUTH.

FIFTH DAY.

MONDAY, May 6, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour.

Bishop Doggett in the chair.

The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

The chair called for reports of standing committees.

J. E. Evans, chairman of the Committee on Revisal, presented Report No. 1 of that committee, which was read and adopted, as follows:

REPORT NO. 1 OF THE COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

The Committee on Revisal beg leave to report:

That they have had under consideration a petition from the Salem District Conference of the St. Louis Annual Conference, asking that the number of laymen constituting the District Conference, and the method of their appointment, be fixed by the Discipline, and not left to the discretion of the Annual Conference; and they respectfully recommend that the Conference do not concur.

Also a memorial from the Quarterly Conference of Enterprise circuit, Mississippi Conference, asking for the abolition of District Conferences; and respectfully recommend non concurrence.

Also a memorial and petition, respectively, from the Holston and St Louis Annual Conferences, asking a form to be provided in the Discipline for the public installation of stewards; and respectfully recommend non-concurrence.

Also a memorial from the Hannibal District Conference of the Missouri Annual Conference, asking for the election in every circuit and mission of a "steward at large," to be ex officio district steward; and respectfully recommend that this Conference do not concur.

Respectfully submitted.

J. E. EVANS, Chairman.

T. S. Martin, S. Rodgers and A. Wilson offered a resolution that after Monday, May 13, the call for memorials, petitions and appeals be continued for the remainder of the session of this General Conference.

A motion of E. A. Yates to lay on the table was lost by a vote of 107 for and 116 against.

A motion of A. S. Andrews, to amend by adding the words "of the conferences" after the word "all," did not prevail.

After considerable discussion the resolution was adopted.

Committee on the Name of the Church—O. P. Fitzgerald, W. M. Bush, R. Alexander, A. W. Wilson, Andrew Hunter, C. Murchison, A. H. Andrews, R. K. Hargrove, R. S. Rowley, E. E. Wiley, C. D. Oliver, W. F. Johnson, O. A. Darby.

Committee on the Hymn-Book—C. B. Marshall, S. S. Roszell, E. M. Kennedy, Joseph S. Key, T. M. Finley, A. R. Winfield, A. G. Haygood, John D. Blackwell.

The assistant secretary was instructed to act with the Committee on Appeals.

The Conference adjourned with the doxology and benediction by the Bishop.

SIXTH DAY.

TUESDAY, May 7, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour.

Bishop McTyeire in the chair.

Religious services were conducted by J. B. A. Ahrens.

The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

On motion of the secretary, W. C. Johnson, reserve delegate from the Memphis Conference, was elected an assistant secretary, and also assistant editing the Daily Christian Advocate.

Bishop Keener took the chair.

He called for reports of standing committees.

J. Register, chairman of the Committee on Episcopacy, presented Report No. 1 of that committee, which was read, and on motion of J. E. Evans was adopted, as follows:

REPORT NO. 1 OF THE COMMITTEE ON EPISCOPACY.

The Committee on Episcopacy report:

1. A paper containing resolutions asking for the preparation of a catechism for the baptized children of the church, signed by H. P. Walker and J. W. Elliott, was referred to the committee on Episcopacy, the consideration of which properly belongs to the Committee on Sunday Schools, and it is returned to the Conference that it may be referred to that committee.

2. The paper signed by W. W. Pierce and W. M. Rush, asking for a change in the Discipline to determine when an episcopal district, being without a superintendent from any cause, and he provided for, was fully considered. The committee determined that no legislation was necessary.

3. The paper signed by B. H. Spencer and T. M. Cobb, recommending a change in the Discipline so as to provide for publishing episcopal decisions as an appendix to the Discipline, was duly considered. The committee does not concur in the proposed change.

S. REGISTER, Chairman.

S. S. HUYANT, Secretary.

J. S. Martin, chairman of the Committee on Itinerancy, presented Report No. 1 of that committee, which was read, and on motion of J. E. Evans acted upon item by item.

The entire report was then adopted, as follows:

REPORT NO. 1 OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

The Committee on Itinerancy beg leave to report that they have carefully considered several papers referred to them, with the following results, viz.:

1. In the case of a petition from the Tennessee Conference, asking that the Discipline be so changed as "not to allow any preacher to exercise the office of presiding elder in any one Conference for more than four years consecutively," the committee respectfully recommend non-concurrence.

2. In the case of a memorial from the Tennessee Conference, asking the General Conference "to declare all lay members of financial boards, ex officio members of the several Annual Conferences, with all the rights and privileges of other lay delegates," the committee recommend non-concurrence.

3. In the memorial from the Virginia Conference, asking "that the Bishops be empowered to appoint an evangelist to operate within the bounds of an Annual Conference when, in their judgment, the necessities of the work demand such an agency, and the Conference shall recommend the appointment," your committee recommend non-concurrence.

J. S. MARTIN, Chairman.

C. G. ANDREWS, Secretary.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Missions was presented by the chairman, D. C. Kelley. Read and laid on the table, under the rule.

R. A. Young, chairman of the Committee on Finance, presented Report No. 1 of that committee, which was read, and on motion of W. W. Garland was adopted, as follows:

REPORT NO. 1 OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Your committee would respectfully report that they have had under consideration a resolution signed by D. H. Connally and R. W. Thompson, referred to said committee, as to the propriety of so changing the latter portion of the first paragraph of sec. 5 page 100, of the Discipline, on the organization of the Joint Board of Finance of the Annual Conferences, that it shall read: "To hold their office until the expiration of four Conference years;" and also a resolution of the North Carolina Conference upon the same subject, which was also referred to said committee, and have directed me to report that they recommend non-concurrence therewith.

R. A. YOUNG, Chairman.

J. C. C. WINN, Secretary.

The chair then called for petitions, memorials and appeals.

North Georgia Conference—H. J. Adams presented a memorial from R. W. Higham and others on church papers.

Referred to the Committee on Publishing Interests.

South Georgia Conference.—J. W. Hinton presented a petition from the pastors and members of Methodist churches in Savannah, Ga., asking for the appointment of an agent for the Wesley Monumental Church.

J. D. A. Clark presented a memorial from the venerable Lovick Pierce concerning said church. Both documents were referred to the Committee on Itinerancy.

MEMORIAL RESPECTING THE WESLEY MONUMENTAL CHURCH, SAVANNAH, GA.

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the M. E. Church South.

DEAR FATHERS AND BRETHREN.—The building of a church in Savannah, Ga., to be known as the Wesley Monumental Church, when first proposed, was so universally and heartily approved by the Methodists of the United States and Canada and England that we confidently anticipated its speedy completion. The Methodists of this city were enthusiastic in their indorsement of the enterprise. They subscribed liberally and paid their money freely. Members of other churches here, and men who, making no pretensions to piety themselves, nevertheless venerated the memory of John Wesley, gave cheerfully in two instances to the extent of $500 each. Contributions were received from the North and from England, with the promise of larger amounts in the future. Our hearts were gladdened by the prospect of soon seeing the capstone laid upon what Dr. Punshon calls "this needed and beautiful memorial to Mr. Wesley." But in the midst of our joyful anticipations we were visited by the terrible epidemic of 1876. Many who had subscribed to the building fund, and at the time were perfectly able to pay their subscriptions, were forced to close their places of business, and found themselves without an income.

Sixteen hundred deaths in three months, and the loss of millions of dollars, are the words that express the extent of our losses.

Unfortunately, when our resources were entirely exhausted, the church was in that state that we were compelled to go forward or lose the money and labor already expended. It was necessary to finish the walls and put the roof on, or abandon the work to destruction. Under these circumstances the building committee very reluctantly borrowed the money needed to secure the church against ruin from the exposure of its unfinished walls to the winds and floods of our Southern summer. The debt thus created, with accrued interest, now amounts to $8,000.

As soon as possible after the epidemic, Rev. A. M. Wynn, then pastor of Wesley church, entered the field as agent, soliciting aid for the enterprise. His success was such as promised an early deliverance from our embarrassments. But still feeble from the effects of yellow fever, his health in a little while utterly failed, and he was compelled to abandon the agency. Since this effort, little or nothing has been done outside of Savannah to secure aid for Wesley Monumental Church. It was not expected from the first that the Methodists of this city would be able to build the church without assistance from abroad. Their resources have always been limited, and have been greatly reduced by the prostration of business, resulting from the yellow fever scourge. They have done, and continue doing, all in their power. Every man, woman and child among them is concerned for the success of Wesley Monumental Church. But this building was designed to be a memorial church, erected by the Methodists of the world, in the only city in America where Mr. Wesley lived and preached. This design has been warmly approved by Canadian and Wesleyan Methodists, and by the Bishops and leading men of both the great branches of Methodism in the United States. So numerous and so emphatic have been the expressions of commendation from the representatives of Methodism everywhere that we look upon the enterprise as having been adopted by Methodism itself. In view of these facts we are firmly convinced that an agent sent into the field by your authority would be able, in a comparatively short period, to secure funds to finish the building. Therefore we, the members of the three pastoral charges of Savannah, met in Church Conference, earnestly petition you to appoint or to authorize the appointment of an agent for Wesley Monumental Church.

North Alabama.—A memorial from the Quarterly Conference of Carrollton district, deprecating the change of boundary agreed to by the North Mississippi Conference. Referred to the Committee on Boundaries.

A memorial signed by W. Baker, asking the restoration of the question: "Do you expect to be made perfect in this life?" Referred to the Committee on Revisal.

The following communication from the Hon. N. L. Angier, mayor of the city of Atlanta, was presented by Bishop McTyeire and read:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, ATLANTA, GA.,
May 7, 1878.

To the President of the General Conference, M. E. Church South:

REVEREND SIR.—Feeling our city highly honored and especially favored by the presence of so august an assemblage, it affords me great pleasure to transmit herewith a certified copy of a resolution unanimously adopted by the General Council of Atlanta last night.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. L. ANGIER, Mayor.

COUNCIL CHAMBER, May 6, 1878.

Resolved, by the General Council of the city of Atlanta, As there is now in session, in this city, the General Conference of the M. E. Church South, one of the largest, most influential and intelligent bodies of men that have ever honored Atlanta with their presence, composed, as it is, of ministers of the gospel, statesmen, lawyers, doctors, merchants, etc., that a cordial welcome and the freedom of the city is hereby extended to the members of said assembly, and that his honor the mayor be requested to communicate the same to said body.

Passed in Council.

FRANK P. RYAN, City Clerk.

The following resolution was then offered, read and adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, That we gratefully accept the freedom and the specialties of Atlanta, this day tendered by resolution, communicated from the mayor and General Council of the city, and that the secretary of this Conference be directed to transmit to the mayor and council a copy of this resolution.

P. A. PETERSAN.
C. B. MARSHALL.

The Conference adjourned with the doxology and benediction by the Bishop.

SEVENTH DAY.

WEDNESDAY, May 8, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour.

Bishop Keener in the chair.

Divine service was conducted by T. L. Roswell.

The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

Bishop Palmore took the chair.

W. H. Morrow, lay delegate from the Tennessee Conference, John R. Pace, lay delegate from the Virginia Conference, and Linus Parker, clerical delegate from the Louisiana Conference, appeared and took their seats.

On motion of W. P. Harrison the order of business was suspended to allow him to introduce the following resolution:

Resolved, That the right of a delegate to a seat in this body shall be determined by a majority of the whole Conference, and not by concurrent majorities of the clerical and lay delegates voting separately.

W. P. HARRISON.
W. F. COOK.

Mr. Harrison (clerical, Georgia Conference) urged that a separate vote of the lay and clerical would put it in the power of a minority to determine the seat of a member. He argued that questions of the seating of a member should be taken by a vote of the house jointly.

Mr. Giddings (lay, Texas) claims that in the case of a majority of the Conference voting together a layman (the laymen were always in the minority by non-attendance) might be unseated by the preponderating vote of ministers.

W. L. Nugent called for a separate vote.

E. A. Yates moved the previous question. The motion prevailed.

The call for a separate vote was sustained.

Pending the action, the order of the day, being the action on Report No. 2 of the Committee on Credentials, at the time of adjournment on Monday, May 6, having arrived:

J. W. Hinton, who was entitled to the floor, spoke against recommitment.

Mr. Hinton (clerical, South Georgia Conference)—Mr. President, the first of American orators rising to address a stormy multitude (a delegate: "We cannot hear Bro. Hinton,") said Franklin drew the lightning; but to-be heard he would have to invoke its loudest thunder. I know it is extremely difficult to be heard. The question has been discussed so long, and the brethren are impatient. I therefore throw myself upon the indulgence of the house, and will stick to the text.

Mr. Marshall suggested that the pages keep quiet, or this sepulcher of the human voice would become the sepulcher of good order and decorum.

The president exhorted to silence.

Mr. Hinton argued that the question was a legal one; that seating the member temporarily and under protest took away the prima facie evidence of the right to a seat. It is admitted he joined the church December 30, 1874, and thus he had been a member anterior, and that his membership had been broken.

On a question whether, under the motion for recommit, the speaker could go into the merits of the case, the president said: "I shall give the widest range allowable with order, and Bro. Hinton can go on for his fifteen minutes." So he went on. He said the "six years next preceding" must mean something, and by the accepted law of hermeneutics we must take the plain sense. No man denies that it is binding in the Annual Conference, and is the rule to be less stringent in the General Conference? Shall a man without qualification for the House of Representatives or a justice of the peace be eligible to a senatorship or chief justice of the State? He alluded to the separation of the church, and how the South stood for the law. He had no personal feeling against Mr. Dameron, and he supposed that gentleman would not wish a seat without a good title. A seat by courtesy was out of the question. If the case was recommitted the whole history would come up. He pleaded that all passion might be allayed, and prayed the blessing of almighty God upon the proceedings, that wise and just conclusions might be reached. (Amen.)

He was followed by W. M. Rush for recommitment.

Pending his speech the time expired, but on motion of J. B. McFerrin it was extended.

Mr. Rush (clerical, Missouri Conference) wishes to place himself and friends entirely upon the law. They were as loyal as any men upon the floor, and if Logan D. Dameron is not entitled by law to a seat, then Mr. President, let him be deprived of his place here. He comes not to have a seat by courtesy. He will not sit here by grace. I would emphasize the matter of loyalty, because it has been presented upon this floor by one speaker on the other side, as if they were the champions of loyalty.

Mr. Rush argued that Mr. Dameron was "twenty-five years of age," and had been a member of the church six years. He said the law wished to secure age and experience in the members. With an interim of only two weeks Mr. Dameron had the experience of thirty-five years in the church. There were such irregularities in the trial in which he was expelled as to vitiate the whole proceeding, and we claim that his membership never lapsed at all.

Our position is that Logan D. Dameron was a member six years ago in St. John's church, St. Louis, and from that time to this his membership has never lapsed. There has been no break.

Mr. Rush said they had planted themselves upon the bill of rights in the constitution of the church, which is found in the fifth section of chapter two: "They shall not do away with the privileges, by church or committee, of an appeal." After the right of trial is exhausted, then remains the right of appeal, and both these must be exhausted before membership can lapse, for they are the vested rights of membership.

He proceeded upon admitted facts. He called attention to facts in the trial which would vitiate the proceedings. He was tried upon a charge of immorality, whose specification could not possibly sustain the charge. Also he was denied a commission to take the deposition of Bishop Wightman, although he declared that the testimony of Bishop Wightman was essential to his case. There were many other irregularities, and he called special attention to the fact that Mr. Dameron was denied the right of appeal.

He requested to be present when the verdict might be rendered. He was notified of the finding of the committee, and he notified the preacher in charge of his desire to take an appeal, and requested access to the record. He did in writing appoint the time and place when and where Dameron might have the privilege of making his appeal. He went at the time appointed taking with him a stenographer to take a copy of the record, but was denied access to it in the presence of the stenographer. Nor would Lewis consent to furnish a copy, or permit him to take one himself. This is an admitted fact, and just here the case fell and left Dameron in the church. You cannot deprive him of a transcript of the record for the purpose of making up his case. I hold that just when the record was refused the case fell; just where the record right fell, the appeal being denied, the case fell, and the vested rights of membership not being exhausted, he is a member still.

Two weeks thereafter he presented himself for membership in the Chouteau Avenue church, not as an outsider, and was received into that church. He was not outside but inside the church—a member whose vested rights had not been exhausted. If the verdict had been a righteous one, yet he had the right of appeal. Mr. Rush said he would answer an objection that the membership ceases when the verdict is rendered. Then the right of appeal is not a vested right of membership. He cited Manual of Discipline, page 152. The person appealing is called a "member." His membership does not lapse. It treats him as a "member" of what? Of the church? Take the strongest case in the Manual on the other side page 157, where it says the appeal does not suspend the operation of the sentence. It simply suspends the privileges of the society. The analogy in a civil court is this: a judgment against him, rendered for one thousand dollars. He has one hundred acres of land. The judgment is a lien, but cannot be executed while an appeal is in process. An appellant cannot be sent to the penitentiary while he is an appellant. The finding of the court did not expel Logan D. Dameron. It exhausted only one of his vested rights. They say he appealed, and the appeal is a matter of record, before the trial of appeal he is a member elsewhere.

It was argued that it was irregular to receive him into Chouteau Avenue church. I will not discuss that, but will say that no irregularity, not even maladministration upon the part of the preacher in charge in his reception into the church, can vitiate his membership. Before the Quarterly Conference of St. John's church meets to try his appeal he is a member of Chouteau church, and the Quarterly Conference of St. John's church cannot expel a member of Chouteau Avenue church. In joining Chouteau church he presented the same papers as on the trial. "That he did not intend to injure Dr. Leftwich, but if he had injured him he was sorry for it, and was willing to make any reparation in his power."

Mr. Rush gave an example to show that the membership was not vitiated. Suppose a member of the church in Glasgow, Mo., should go to Sherman, Texas, taking no letter with him, and after remaining in Texas three months he connects himself with the church there. He was a member of the church in Glasgow, is responsible to the church in Glasgow till he was received in the church at Sherman; and being received without a letter, though irregular, does not vitiate his membership. His membership at Glasgow is severed the moment of his connection at Sherman.

Mr. Rush mentioned that an overwhelming majority of the laity in Missouri, and in that section of the country, was in favor of seating Dameron.

In answer to a question, Mr. Rush said that the prosecutor in the church court did enter upon the record of the court his solemn protest against the ruling of the court refusing a commission to take the deposition of Bishop Wightman.

Mr. Clark (clerical, South Georgia Conference) said the question of eligibility overrode everything, and how could they determine that without knowing whether he was a member of the church; and his membership must be found out by the records of the trial. We claim that the General Conference is a court judiciary. Mr. Dameron was elected by the Annual Conference, and he is entitled to a hearing upon the trial. Whether it was just and fair, or with proper forms, the Conference could not determine without the record. Besides, if he did not join de novo, he is still entitled to a seat. There are no words of "next preceding" nor "successive" in the law governing the election to the General Conference. A man might be a member of the church thirty years, and by inadvertence be dropped or illegally put out; therefore his past membership should count for him. It was intended for expelled members. There are provisions for the restoration of members. The law is remedial. The words cited were left on purpose.

According to the record he had read, the trial was irregular and the rulings not according to law.

Mr. Clark affirmed that in the presence of God, and knowing his accountability, he did not believe any twelve brethren upon an examination of the record would pronounce that the trial was fair.

Mr. Dent (lay, Alabama Conference) laid down a few rules giving the construction of civil courts, which would be recognized as guides of interpretation in ecclesiastical law. First, to ascertain the mind of lawmakers, consider the spirit, not the letter—harmonize the whole statute. Is it possible the law maker intends a stricter qualification for the lower than for the higher legislative body?

As to the question of membership, he must attack a judgment of expulsion directly by appeal, not collaterally. One committee by verdict expels a man. It holds good until reversed by the proper tribunal. The decision may be erroneous, but it must hold good till reversed. The expulsion by St. John's church, St. Louis, must hold good till a court with proper jurisdiction passes upon it.

Mr. Dent's time was extended. He said Dr. Rush alluded to irregularities. The speaker read from the pamphlet distributed through the Conference, and cited sentences where he claimed Mr. Dameron had admitted he was out of the church. (Pages 53, 55, 59, 95, 101, 103 and 104 were quoted from.)

What becomes of the argument that when the appeal was suspended it left him in the church, when the Manual of the Discipline says, on page 154, "that appeal does not suspend the operation of the decision or sentence," etc.

Mr. Winfield (clerical, Little Rock Conference) said that Mr. Dameron was legally elected as an alternate, was admitted, and that he was here before the Conference as a court of equity to determine his rights. As to his membership, the question of "six successive years" has been fully answered by Bro. Clark. If a minister is excluded, and the Conference is satisfied he had injustice done him, he is restored, his parchments were restored, and the time he was out is counted to him. The lawyers laid great stress upon the "admissions" of Dameron. Dameron did not know much about ecclesiastical law.

He argued that Mr. Dameron had been refused the record and the deposition of Bishop Wightman, and could not get ready for an appeal. No court in the United States would approve such irregularities in the court below. He asked how the General Conference could decide a question without mature reflection, when "the apostles and Bishops" had decided differently. If the Bishops differ, who is to determine? I believe in the prima inter pares; but when the "primuses" differ, what is to become of "pares?" (Laughter.)

The President—Brethren, govern yourselves.

Mr. Winfield said the Conference had not the record; that Dr. Lewis had said the world had never heard the true story, and he (Mr. Winfield) demanded the record.

Mr. Peterson (clerical, Virginia Conference) thought the question was a purely legal one. What is the question before us? That we, as a court, shall decide the qualification of the brother who claims eligibility—that and nothing more or less. We turn to the law applying to the case, and find these qualifications:

1. A certain age. 2. A member of the church. 3. A member of the church for a specific term of years. The issue is on the last. Was this brother a member for the period such as the law contemplated? Mr. Peterson held that the scheme of interpretation of the statutes did not allow the supposition that the qualification for membership for an Annual was superior to requirements in a General Conference.

The point I wish to make is this: Do we intend, in the settlement of this case, to send out to the world the statement that the General Conference proposes to review and reverse the decision of a Quarterly Conference? I am perfectly willing to concede that the member whose seat is contested was illegally expelled, that every decision rendered and every verdict was in violation of law; yet I maintain, at the same time, that he had exhausted his rights before he reached the General Conference. You cannot go behind the record. Let me say that I am opposed to recommittal, because this committee would go into some of the facts which the report gives, and which are not denied, but admitted and proven.

While Dr. Rush was speaking, I propounded a question, to save time, as to the manner in which the brother became a member of the Chouteau Avenue church. That question has not been answered. He attempted it, but he did not tell how Dameron came into that church. If he came in lawfully, there is no such law in the Discipline. The law prescribes how members shall be received into our societies. He must do one of two things: He must confess and give due proof of repentance, or unless the Quarterly Conference is satisfied, on the basis of new testimony, of the illegality and impropriety of the condemnation. Where is the proof these two conditions have been complied with? It appears from Bro. Rush

THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1878.

ADDRESS OF THE BISHOPS TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

DEAR BRETHREN: After the lapse of four eventful years you have been permitted, in the good providence of God, to convene, as representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in its highest constitutional assembly; invested with "full powers," under certain specified "limitations and restrictions, to make rules and regulations," such as in your godly judgment will best promote its mission in the world.

We greet you in the name of our common Lord. We congratulate you upon the dignity which has been conferred upon you by your respective Annual Conferences, in the exercise of their electoral rights, by whose choice you have been elevated to positions in the only legislature and in the supreme judicatory of our church. And we especially acknowledge, with grateful hearts, the auspicious circumstances which attend our quadrennial gathering. On no previous occasion of this kind have we enjoyed richer evidences of divine favor, or possessed greater elements of power and prosperity as a church.

Since the adjournment of the last General Conference strange and instructive events, affecting the fortunes and destiny of the Christian religion, have occurred in the history of the world. To some of these we may briefly refer as pertinent to this occasion. They are "signs of the times" which it is our duty, as officers of the church, to consider and improve.

The providential government of God is instituted to subserve the behests of the kingdom of Christ. "He is Head over all things to the church." "All judgment is committed to the Son." Every department of evangelical Christendom is an integral portion of the commonwealth of Israel; and the prosperity of each is more or less involved in all those historical stages which signalize the course of human affairs. Contemplated on this wider scale, we are better prepared to realize the relations of our Methodism to the universal church and to humanity, and to project plans for other places and other times than those with which we are more immediately occupied. The connection between these general facts and our present responsibilities is neither obscure nor visionary. The apprehension of it is a part of our wisdom. It will enlarge the circle of our horizon, and animate our zeal for larger conquests.

The financial collapse, for example, which commenced four years ago and which has since pervaded, perplexed and paralyzed the commercial world contains a lesson for the church. As a matter of fact, it has reacted with corresponding force upon all those agencies of Christianity employing the use of money in their operations. Such a crisis ought not to retard, much less arrest, these operations. It is a radical mistake to suppose that the progress of Christ's kingdom is dependent upon the laws of commerce, or is necessarily affected by the contraction or expansion, the scarcity or repletion of the currency. Its abundance, though rarely ever dedicated to God, ought always to be sanctified and sanctified by its consecration to his cause; but the deficiency of the one ought never to hinder the advancement of the other. It is a pretext for apathy and inaction. The resources of the Christian church, notwithstanding the fluctuations in the markets of the world, are equal to its demands; and the combined efforts of its real members, actuated by the constraint of Christ's love, will compensate the deficiency, and even transcend it by the difference of their contributions. Riper scriptural views of the conditions of success, a livelier faith in a living Savior, a more self-sacrificing response to the calls of duty, and a wiser economy in the use of money, will correct the ordinary calculations of the ledger, and leave a surplus for the cause of Christ. The question of personal convenience will be merged into one of Christian obligation, and a new phase of finance will replenish the revenues of the church.

The startling diffusion of new and imposing forms of unbelief, within the period of which we speak, has placed the entire Christian church in the presence of a formidable and self-confident antagonism, which is forcing upon her the vital questions of her true foundation, her essential integrity, her legitimate affinities and her best modes of successful defense. All alike are obliged to accept this gauge of war. We, too, must adjust ourselves to these exigencies.

At the same time, the elements of evangelical Christendom, whether from external pressure or from internal impulse, or from both, have in a remarkable degree manifested a tendency toward unity in the fundamental articles of faith, and in spiritual fellowship. Their approximation on these grounds is a prominent feature of the times in which we live, and deserves the deepest attention. It does not appear to involve a surrender, or even a compromise of peculiar tenets or modes of polity, but to seek only the affiliation of true Christians on the basis of acknowledged essentials. Viewed in this light, the movement should be hailed with joy, as the exponent and vindication, under diversified aspects, of the "one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all," which, in all ages and in all places, underlie the true catholic church of Christ. The preservation of distinct ecclesiastical organizations, and the retention of doctrinal peculiarities, are perfectly consistent with its cultivation and, in fact, necessary to its development.

By an unexpected and mysterious process, in which we devoutly acknowledge the overruling hand of God, our country has recently passed into a state of marvelous tranquillity, eminently favorable to the expansion and energy of Christian enterprise. The contrast between it and that out of which, as a church, we emerged more than twelve years ago, and in the midst of which, more or less, our lot has since been cast, is so astonishing as to justify special thanksgiving to God, and to stimulate our healthiest activity in his service.

In the meantime a war of terrible proportions and destructive severity in the East, whatever may be its merits, has thus far terminated in the humiliation and curtailment of the greatest anti-Christian power upon earth. We may reasonably hope that, notwithstanding its horrors, if has broken, if not removed, one of the fiercest obstacles to the evangelization of the world; and that, together with the temporal disfranchisement of the papacy, it has opened a new theater and started a new period for enlightened Christian zeal in which a massive and corrupt ecclesiasticism shall be substituted by the church in its purity, and the crescent of the Moslem wane before the cross of Christ.

In general, the extent to which all the nations of the earth are now accessible to the gospel, and the manner in which prophecy and Providence are blending in the history of the world, enhance the vocation of the entire church of Christ, and indicate the relation which we, as a denomination, sustain to the grand consummation. Thus has the Lord been preparing a highway for himself, and training his militant hosts for the fulfillment of the apostolic commission: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

During the stirring period to which we refer, and amidst all its changes and complications, the Methodist Episcopal Church South has not only maintained its ground, but has continued to evince the wisdom of its separate existence, and the vitality of its independent organization. The original disruption, how much soever it was deprecated, at the time, by good men on both sides, has insured in a firmer compactness and better conservation of the fundamental principles which distinguish the great Wesleyan movement; and the aggregate results, we have reason to believe, have counterbalanced the incidental evils of that apparently calamitous event. Nothing has occurred during the past thirty-eight years to shake our conviction of the stability of Southern Methodism, or lessen our attachment to its institutions. A more homogeneous ecclesiastical community does not exist on the American continent.

The quadrennial term now expiring has been characterized by almost universal peace and harmony among our ministry and membership, both in respect to doctrine and discipline, and in their cordial subordination to the exercise of legitimate authority. Nothing has been more decisive throughout our wide and varied domain than their unanimity in adhering to the peculiarities of our ecclesiastical system.

What, however, is of unspeakably more value, and cause of profounder gratitude, is the blessing of God which has crowned the agencies of the church, during the past four years, with decided success. The gospel, as received by us, has been faithfully and fearlessly preached. Revivals of religion have extensively prevailed. Thousands have been added to the church, and our borders have been continually extending. Houses of worship, in highly improved styles of architecture, have rapidly multiplied, and offered their comfort and attractions to increasing numbers of worshipers. Parsonages have been erected with unusual frequency, and with better accommodations for the families of our preachers; and appeals for contributions to benevolent objects have been met with a generous response. We rejoice to believe that the church is in a generally healthy condition. Our statistics will show a gratifying progress in its growth and spirituality.

Amidst these cheering evidences of substantial coherence and prosperity, it is not without regret, and even apprehension, that we witness certain departures from the standards and genius of our system, and tendencies to others, which compromise its character and impair its efficiency. Changes of mere economy, adapted to the altered condition of times and places, are sometimes absolutely necessary and eminently salutary; but those which affect the constitution and consistency of the system itself must be guarded with jealous vigilance, lest their incipiency result in a gradual surrender of its vital forces. We refer to several admonitory symptoms, which we take the liberty of urging upon your attention.

We cannot omit from this category the insufficient stress, in our day, laid upon the doctrine of "entire sanctification," as inculcated in the Wesleyan theology, and exemplified in the first age of Methodism. Notwithstanding its neglect on the one hand, and its fanatical distortions on the other, by fleeting leaders, it is nevertheless the clear testimony of the Holy Scriptures. Its experience is the unpresentable privilege of believers, and its enjoyment the full-blown flower and the ripe fruit of the Christian life. The infrequency of its proclamation from the pulpit, and the irregularity of its experimental power in the church, has proven a serious detriment to the robustness of our piety, and to the specialty of our mission: "To spread scriptural holiness over these lands." Let us more than ever reassert this great doctrine.

We refer in this connection also to the decline of an institution, the history of which is incorporated into that of Methodism, and which, more than any other human expedient, contributed to its growth. The memory of the class meeting is fragrant with blessing. Its suspension has been a calamity. Its neglect has not been compensated by any proposed substitute. It has not been abolished. It still survives by law. Its resuscitation in some effective form would vastly enhance our individual and corporate strength.

Methodism has always protested, by explicit warrant of the word of God, against "such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus," especially against those which are designated as fashionable amusements. The Methodist Episcopal Church South has emphatically reiterated this protest. It is lamentable to what an extent it remains unheeded. Many of our members indulge in these forbidden pleasures, and bring reproach upon the church. Parents do not restrain their children from participating in them, and the evil grows by at least constructive connivance. It should be arrested by more decisive action, or it will become unmanageable altogether.

Our inquiries into the spiritual condition of the church constrain us to say that a majority of our people are chargeable with a grave dereliction in respect to family worship. The priesthood, the altars, and the morning and evening sacrifices of the household are the forgotten or neglected duties of many of our Israel. The laxity of domestic piety is entailing its baneful fruits upon the rising generation, and our sons and daughters, unnurtured by its sanctions, are falling into the giddy ranks that throng the road to ruin. Family religion is the imperative adjunct to personal piety, and the unalterable condition of its transmission to posterity.

Our preachers have, for the most part, been more liberally supported during the past four years than at any former period. In many instances, however, their support has been utterly inadequate and shamefully irregular. The deficiency, in these instances, has been unquestionably due, in the main, to the want of competent stewards, and of rigorous fidelity on the part of the Quarterly Conference, and not to the want of additional legislation. Our fiscal plan is, in our judgment, a model of practical skill, elaborated by the best minds of the church, from a long series of experiments and observations. All that is necessary to its effectiveness is the conscientious and systematic execution of its details. Its scriptural authority, its principle of general but voluntary assessment, its boards of finance, its required reports, and the regular review of them by Quarterly and Annual Conferences, render it equally pervasive, uniform and specific in its operations; while it leaves ample margin for the exercise of Christian liberality in providing for the temporal wants of those who "give themselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the word." As ministers of the gospel are required to devote themselves wholly to their work; as "the laborer is worthy of his hire;" as the Lord will take account of his stewards; and as the full measure of cheerful labor is needed by the church, the adequate support of every grade of our itinerant preachers, and furnishing them with comfortable homes, is a sacred and paramount duty, and is essentially necessary to our itinerant system.

Our Sunday school department has fully kept pace with the progress of the church, in every other direction, if it has not surpassed it in all others its indispensable connection with church growth, in the present age has been thoroughly demonstrated in the last four years. It has replenished our membership with its largest numbers and its best materials, and has assumed proportions prophetic of yet grander results. The last General Conference settled, by law, a principle of prime importance when it defined the relation of Sunday schools to the pastorate by conferring upon it the right of nominating superintendents.

Our Sunday school literature has blossomed into great beauty and perfection, equal to the most advanced necessities of the cause, and ought, without exception, to be introduced into all our schools. Its new phase happily inaugurated by Dr. Haygood, has been successfully developed and improved by Dr Cunnyngham, both in matter and form. The adoption of uniform lessons, accompanied with our own interpretation, is, at the same time, an element of Protestant catholicity and denominational strength. The inculcation of our doctrinal views, by the constant use of our catechisms, remains to complete our system of Sabbath school instruction. It is of sufficient importance to justify a special enactment on the subject by the General Conference.

The subject of general education, under the patronage of the church, as a means of success, and a powerful agency for good, evinces its importance with every advancing year of her history. The diffused intellectual life of our times, the rapid advancement of classical and scientific knowledge, and the inexorable demand for scholarly attainments among both sexes, leave no alternative but to meet the emergency with comprehensive and energetic measures, or surrender the well earned renown of the past and the glowing hopes of the future. While our literary institutions have retained their integrity, faithfully discharged their duties, and manfully sustained the reputation of the church during the past four years, we grieve to say that no signal success has attended them. They have not flourished in proportion to their merits or the hopes of the church. The majority of them have been embarrassed by debt, feebly patronized by the public, and have consequently been unable to supply themselves with the needed complement of libraries and apparatus, and furnish the desired support for commanding professional talent. The principal cause for this depression has been the general financial stringency of the country, extending itself through the entire past quadrennium. It is a matter of thanksgiving that they have passed the ordeal so safely, ready to expand with the return of more auspicious times. Yet we are not blameless as a people in this respect. The church, though diminished in resources, is not poor. She is rich enough, with proper effort, to sell afloat and endow every recognized institution among us. The fault is the want of intelligent interest and well-devised plans, and not of ability. The plans of great donations has, perhaps, dazzled us. We do not comprehend the combined value of smaller ones. It behooves the members of this body to take hold of this question with a firm grasp, and arouse the church to appreciate the responsibility which it involves. We think that these institutions require nothing more to insure their prosperity than a working endowment and a generous patronage. We cannot afford to let them perpetuate a struggling existence, and to remit the education of our youth to skeptical or uncongenial institutions.

The Vanderbilt University, the munificent donation of whose founder was gratefully acknowledged by the last General Conference, and subsequently increased by him to $1,000,000, has since gone into operation with gratifying prospects. It is fully endowed, entirely free from debt, comprising all the departments, academical and professional, of a university proper, and possessing all the facilities of the highest education. We trust that, with its superior advantages, it will add efficiency and luster to our educational enterprises.

We regard with deep satisfaction the opportunities which many of our literary institutions afford candidates for the ministry in preparing them for their high vocation. While the church does not require attendance upon them as a sine qua non for admission into the traveling connection, it is her imperative duty to place such opportunities within their reach as will better enable them to enlarge the sphere of their usefulness, and occupy any positions to which the demands of the age may summon them. The stern logic of events is happily meeting with a response. Our colleges and universities, by general culture and our biblical schools, by special training, are concurring with our established economy in supplying us with laborers suited to every post of ministerial duty. The one ought not and cannot truthfully say to the other: "I have no need of thee." We have need of all, of every grade of ability, whether of one talent or of five talents, to occupy until the Lord come.

We heartily approve of the plan of district schools recommended by the last General Conference. They meet the wants of our people, in many localities, for the education of their children. They are the only antidote to that godless feature in the public schools which ignores the Holy Scriptures in the training of youth. They are especially necessary in perfecting our educational system by reaching all classes, and preparing students both for our male and female colleges. We are happy to say that many have been established since the recommendation was made.

Our foreign missionary operations are comparatively limited. They do not represent either our history or capacity with respect to the world's evangelization. The separation of the two principal bodies of American Methodism, in 1844 has, in effect deprived us of the larger part of our missionary record. Before that event Southern Methodism participated proportionably in the missionary work of the Methodist Episcopal Church abroad, and cultivated almost exclusively the vast field occupied by the colored people in the Southern part of the United States. These facts remain in the absence of the record. What we have done since is in addition to the unrecorded portion of our labors in that direction. Our missions in China, in Mexico, and among the Indians and Germans of our own country are in a highly encouraging condition—justify all the expenditures hitherto made in their behalf, and will demand larger appropriations in the future. The mission in Brazil is yet in its infancy. It is judiciously located, and is the nucleus of operations in a vast and thickly-populated region, destitute of the bread of life. It is full of promise, and deserves your fostering care. Among these missions, the sun China and in Mexico are unquestionably of the greatest prospective importance. Both of these are located in the midst of vast populations, perfectly open to us, with foundations of abundant success already laid. That in China has been recently reinforced. It has received a powerful impulse, both within itself and at home, by the seasonable and successful visit of Bishop Marvin, whose official services and whose mature and comprehensive views have placed it before the church in a new and commanding attitude. The mission, among the Mexicans is scarcely second to it in its probable results. It already astonishes us by the richness of its first fruits. Since the last General Conference Bishop Keener has made three visitations to the city of Mexico in behalf of the missions.

Other doors in foreign lands are open to us; and the wail of their perishing millions resounds in the words of their ancient representative in Macedonia: "Come over and help us." We must go or send. The missionary spirit, though operative to the extent indicated, has not yet reached that degree of strength and intensity of interest among us which would arouse the whole church to her responsibilities with respect to the myriads who "sit in the region and shadow of death." The spirit of missions is the life of the church. To repress it is ultimate paralysis and death.

A new element of success in our foreign missionary operations, of great promise and peculiarly adapted to the exigencies of heathen nations, has recently been developed, by a special providence, among our pious ladies. We mean the "Women's Missionary Society." It should, by all means, be incorporated into our present laws on the "support of missions."

Restricting the management of foreign missions exclusively to a general board, remitting the oversight of domestic missions to Annual Conference boards, and separating the collections for each, were steps in the right direction. It was a disentanglement of two very different operations, both in theory and practice. We deplore, however, the encroachment of the claims of domestic missions upon those of foreign missions. The collections for the former are frequently in advance of those of the latter. The number of the domestic missions is fortunately diminishing by their erection or absorption into circuits. And we hope that the confusion of ideas arising from the use of a term common to both, but wholly inappropriate to places of domestic destitution, will pass away forever. The secretary of our Board of Foreign Missions will lay before you a complete and detailed account of its operations since the last General Conference.

The District Conference has demonstrated its utility in promoting the general interests of the church, and developing its social elements, whenever it has been properly conducted. Being an annual review of its practical operations, within each presiding elder's district, its efficiency depends upon confining its inquiries strictly to the schedule assigned it, and keeping it aloof from all irrelevant and irritating discussions. It should not be invested with any other prerogatives than those which it now possesses, nor complicated with any duties pertaining to Quarterly Conferences; and the business pertaining to it should be formulated in analogy with the directions given to Annual, Quarterly and Church Conferences.

While the Quarterly Conferences should retain their present schedule of duties, it would contribute to the completeness of their functions to require that their journals be submitted to the regular review of the Annual Conferences in order to correct administrative and clerical errors, and insure accuracy and uniformity in their records.

The Church Conference, though operative to a limited extent, yet as a connectional institution has not fully realized the object of its enactment. It possesses elements of great utility, and we trust that our preachers and people will earnestly co-operate to make it a blessing to the church.

We report with unfeigned pleasure the success of the measures adopted by the last General Conference with the view of establishing fraternal relations between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The proceedings inaugurating these measures need not now be repeated. They are familiar to all present. At that session the following resolutions were adopted, viz:

"1. That the General Conference has received with pleasure the fraternal greetings of the Methodist Episcopal Church, conveyed by their delegates, and that our College of Bishops be and are hereby authorized to appoint a delegation, consisting of two ministers and one layman, to bear our Christian salutations to their next ensuing General Conference.

"2. That in order to remove all obstacles to formal fraternity between the two churches our College of Bishops is authorized to appoint a commission, consisting of three ministers and two laymen, to meet a similar commission authorized by the Methodist Episcopal Church and to adjust all existing difficulties."

In accordance with the first of these resolutions, Rev. Lovick Pierce, Rev. James A. Duncan and Dr. Landon C. Garland were appointed fraternal messengers. It was a matter of profound regret that the venerable chairman of that delegation was not permitted, on account of bodily infirmity, to participate in that memorable transaction. The previous history and the existing voice of the church seemed to demand his presence. The hand of God denied us the privilege. Though absent, he placed his testimony on record, in a communication worthy of his mission and his fame. With what fidelity and honor the other members of the delegation performed their duty needs no commendation from us. The dignity and the responsibility of the occasion were fully met, and their response has been accepted as the utterance of the church. It casts a shadow of darkness over these pleasant recollections that one of the actors on that occasion, and one of the brightest ornaments of the church, did not long survive his greatest achievement. He was suddenly stricken down by death, while yet in the meridian of his manhood and his usefulness.

In accordance with the second resolution, Rev. Edward H. Myers, Rev. Thomas M. Finley, Rev. R. K. Hargrove, Hon. R. B. Vance and Hon. David Clopton were appointed a commission, on our part, to meet a similar commission appointed by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. These two commissions met, by agreement, at Cape May, August, 1876. After a session of several days, characterized by devout supplication for the divine blessing, a due appreciation of the pending issue, and the exercise of charity becoming Christian candor, they adopted with entire unanimity, as the basis of reconciliation, the true ecclesiastical status of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. This essential factor solved the problem of "formal fraternity," and led to the conclusion which was hailed by the church as the settlement of the questions submitted to their arbitration. The terms authorizing these commissions were fulfilled, and, accordingly their action in the premises must be considered final. The transaction of those commissions, as the historical and official exponent of the present reciprocal relations of the two great branches of American Methodism, is invested with peculiar significance. It illustrates also before the world the genius of the gospel, and especially the filial affection which should ever pervade and animate two families descended from the same parent stock.

It is one of those inscrutable dispensations of Divine Providence which constantly remind us of the contrast between the greatness of his design and the frailty of human instruments and which admonishes us to "rejoice with trembling," that one who performed so conspicuous a part in the formal pacification of Northern and Southern Methodism, and which embalms his memory, should, immediately after its consummation, have fallen a victim and a martyr to his pastoral fidelity. Dr. Edward H. Myers sleeps in an honored grave. His associates survive to recall his piety and his heroism, and to enjoy the approbation which their services deserved. The whole church mourns his loss. "Blessed are the peace-makers, for they shall be called the children of God." The report of our commissioners will be laid before you in time.

The most impressive duty devolved upon the College of Bishops by the last General Conference was contained in the following resolution, viz:

"Resolved, That the Bishops may visit the Pacific Coast during the next quadrennium, if deemed advisable by the College of Bishops, also visit our mission in China, and ordain any native preachers who may be recommended by the missionaries in the field."

We have discharged that duty. Bishop Marvin was selected to perform that arduous and responsible service. Having completed the tour of the Annual Conferences on the Pacific coast, in company with his associate, Rev. E. R. Hendrix, he embarked for his destination, at San Francisco, November 1, 1876. After a prosperous voyage, he arrived at Shanghai, December 14. At a Conference held in the mission in Shanghai, December 22, the Bishop presiding, four native preachers were elected to deacon's orders, and two of the four were elected to elder's orders. On Sunday, December 24, these candidates were ordained by the Bishop to the respective orders to which they had been elected.

This solemn event was a memorable epoch in the history of the mission. It reminds us of apostolic times in its simple grandeur and spiritual power. It was the sealing benediction of the Holy Ghost upon the far-distant children of the Methodist church, through one of her general superintendents. Bishop Marvin visited the several mission stations in China. His presence and counsels were of incalculable benefit to the missionaries and to the converts. The information which he has imparted to the church at home concerning the special field of his visitation, and various others, during his extended tour, has enriched the annals of the church with larger conceptions and a more hallowed appreciation of foreign missionary enterprise. He proved himself fully equal to the extraordinary emergency which called him, and his name is inscribed upon its imperishable monuments.

It is eminently proper that reference should be made in this connection to the trust committed to him and his colleagues by the College of Bishops, the Board of Foreign Missions, and the assumed warrant of the General Conference, that they should, on their return, attend the ensuing session of the British Wesleyan Conference, in the city of Bristol, and represent the Methodist Episcopal Church South in that patriarchal body. We were present at that session, officially recognized, and in an address delivered, addressed the Bishop set forth the claims of Southern Methodism to a co-ordinate position among the Wesleyan families, and requested that a deputation be sent from them to the present General Conference. In lieu thereof, we are informed by a written communication which was sent, which is in due time will be transmitted to you.

With emotions too deep for utterance, it is our solemn duty to announce to you the death of our honored and beloved colleague. His missionary tour we have just reported. He is not here, as we hoped, to recount his own labors. He has finished his course. He has signed his commission into the hands of his adorable Master. Endowed with exalted abilities, a true friend of the cross, a faithful servant of the church, he retired at noon from the battle field, by the command of his Captain, and has gone to the general assembly and church of the first born, whilst we write, to meet in heaven. That so bright and useful a light should have been so soon quenched is one of those mysteries which await solution in the world to come. His death has produced a profound sensation throughout the entire church, and she will not willingly let his memory perish.

The interest involved in the Publishing House, the perils through which it has passed since the last General Conference, and the continued embarrassment, have rendered an object of general solicitude. The Bishops have shared in that solicitude, and have exerted their influence to sustain its reputation as much as its vicissitudes are known and as a complete statement of its affairs will be presented to you by the agent, we will not anticipate his report by any details. Our remarks will be general. We never ceased to attach great importance to the Publishing House as the most available agency for wielding the power of the press in the cause of Christ, for circulating unadulterated views of scriptural truth, and for strengthening the bond of connectional interests in our widely-dispersed dominion. We cannot accomplish our mission as a church, in the present age of the world, or its equivalent, if we would be greater than that of property or financial credit.

With these views, charged with the oversight of the spiritual and temporal interests of the church, though not specifically authorized to co-operate, we complied with a request to meet in consultation with the Book Committee, in the city of Nashville, December, 1876, upon the pending crisis of the Publishing House. After patient investigation, and by request of the committee, we issued an appeal to the church to raise sixty thousand dollars at once for its immediate relief. At our regular meeting in May last, in the city of Nashville, not quite half the amount had been realized. In the subsequent report of the book agent, and of the Book Committee, we indorsed the former appeal. At the ensuing Annual Conferences we individually repeated our efforts in the same direction. We regret to say that the response has not yet met the demand, and that the embarrassment has not been removed. The condition and affairs of the Publishing House will constitute one of the principal subjects for your deliberation. We earnestly hope that such measures will be adopted to relieve the church that great institution and to perpetuate the benefits lications on a firm basis, and on der scale than ever.

ds the graduation of elders, the view of directing the in-
of our young preachers, and cultivating their habits of study. It is a lamentable fact that many of them, after having attained the grade of elders, cease to study altogether, or do it at random, and fail to realize the promise of their earlier years. This course could be profitably adopted as a useful directory, without the exaction of examinations.

5. The law with respect to receiving members into the church is, in many cases, too loosely administered. The door is not sufficiently guarded. Inasmuch as all who are received into the church enter into full status as members, the reasons for the precautionary directions laid down in the Discipline are augmented. Many of our preachers in charge are inexperienced, and others, in the fullness of their zeal, are too anxious to secure the fruits of their labors by inconsiderate and unsuitable accessions. By these and other means improper persons are sometimes taken into the church, the results of which are pregnant with evil.

6. In such changes of the Discipline as you may see fit to make, we would respectfully call your attention to the character of that portion of it which pertains to the organization of your own body. The introduction of lay delegation was a material reconstruction of the General Conference; and involving, as it was believed, constitutional questions, the whole measure was subjected to constitutional treatment. After receiving a majority of two-thirds of the General Conference of 1866, it was sent round to the Annual Conferences, and, receiving three-fourths of all the votes cast, was adopted as a complete system. This fact places the structure of the General Conference, by necessary implication, under constitutional protection and restriction. The relative composition of the body, and the power of its constituent parts, can hardly be regarded as statutory. The conditions and limitations with which lay delegation became an organic law of the church may not be so easily changed as mere statutory laws are changed.

7. By the blessing of God, besides attending a large number of District Conferences, we have been enabled to hold all the Annual Conferences during the last four years. If we should not be expected to attend so many of the District Conferences as heretofore, we see no reason why, with one additional Bishop, the present number of Bishops would not be able to discharge all the duties of the general superintendency during the next four years. With this statement, we leave the subject to your godly judgment.

Allow us to urge upon you the propriety of abbreviating your session. Let us observe the apostolic maxim: "Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." There is, as you are aware, a marked distinction between hurry and haste. What you do, do well. Let us waste no time, but redeem it, because the days are evil. Patiently performing your duties, the church will be benefitted. Delay will curtail the benefit, and deprive your charges of a portion of your valuable time.

And now, dear brethren, "we commend you to God, and to the word of his grace." Great responsibilities rest upon you. You have assembled not as secular bodies, nor as political partisans, but under the solemn sanctions of Christ's kingdom. Not the affairs of State, but those of the church of God, are in a measure committed to your hands. The spiritual welfare of the present and coming generations is the subject of your deliberations. Heaven, earth and hell are spectators of your proceedings. You need an eye single to the glory of God, and a body full of light. You need the presence of Christ, and the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive anything from the Lord."

We are, dear brethren, your servants for Jesus' sake.

PRAYER.—Among the forms of insect life there is a little creature known to naturalists which can gather around itself a sufficiency of atmospheric air, and, so clothed, it descends into the bottom of the pool; and you may see the little diver moving about dry, and at his ease, protected by his crystal vesture, though the water all around be stagnant and bitter. Prayer is such a protector—a transparent vestute. The world sees it not; a real defense, it keeps out the world. By means of it the believer can gather so much of heavenly atmosphere around him, and with it descend into the putrid depths of this contaminating world, that for a season no evil will touch him, and he knows when to ascend for a new supply. Communion with God kept Daniel pure in Babylon.—Dr. James Hamilton.

DOING THE TRUTH.—Doing the truth is one of the great needs of the time. There is a great deal of truth preached and taught, written, printed and circulated; but there is a great lack of doing it, both in the church and in the world. How would souls come to Christ and be saved, how would churches be active and influential, how would business transactions be lifted above suspicion, how would political questions find a righteous settlement, and how would all the channels of society be purified, and the very atmosphere of life have and the very atmosphere of life have, if all were doing the truth! Jesus said: "He that doeth the truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God."—Christian Secretary.

THIRD QUADRENNIAL EXHIBIT

OF THE CONDITION OF

The Publishing House of the M. E. Church South.

ENDING APRIL 1, 1878.

EXHIBIT.

SOUTHERN METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Nashville, Tenn., April 1, 1878.

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

DEAR BRETHREN—I beg leave to submit to you my third quadrennial exhibit of the condition of the Southern Methodist Publishing House.

ASSETS.

Merchandise on hand		$34,428 38
Cash		116 82
Accounts and bills receivable		60,694 24
Real estate		233,534 20
New Orleans Depository		85,515 33
Stereotype plates*		76,848 38
Stereotype foundry		6,400 10
Wood cuts and electrotypes		4,669 40
Type account and fixtures		11,394 06
Engines, presses and fixtures		45,761 27
Mailing and folding machines		1,430 00
Safe and furniture in offices		775 00
Copyrights		1,367 01
Paper, ink and sheet-stock		4,617 67
Two lots in Nashville		1,600 00
Total		$569,091 84

LIABILITIES.

Bonds (new)	$15,100 00
Bonds (old)	100,000 00
Bills payable	134,887 72
Book accounts	20,521 25	—270,508 97
Balance in favor of the House		$298,582 87

ASSETS.

Real estate in Nashville	$43,223 66
Fixtures, presses, type, etc	36,875 00
Stereotype plates	47,539 69
Merchandise	17,058 68
New Orleans Depository	10,326 67
Furniture, desks, tables and safe	275 00
Cash	2,420 55
Total	$158,619 25

LIABILITIES.

Bills payable	$39,227 69
Book accounts	32,225 86	—71,453 55
Balance in favor of the House		$87,165 70

The exhibit of 1866 also contains this statement:

There are also the following amounts due the Publishing House, and, when collected, will be passed to the credit of the same as assets, viz.:

Book accounts, due March 1, 1862	$72,881 23
Bills receivable	37,983 92
Tract Society	32,165 71
Richmond Depository	24,145 89
Nashville subscription	4,387 00
Total	$173,563 75

We also stated that in our exhibit we had "taken no account whatever of the debts due the House by either the Tract Society, Richmond Depository or Nashville subscription, because these debts are entirely worthless, and actually form no part of the assets of the House. Nor have taken any account of bills receivable or individual accounts due the House, only to show you the amount, because most of these can never be collected. In our books we have placed them as suspended assets, and if collected will be quoted hereafter as a portion of the original capital. The church desires to know the true condition of the Publishing House, and our aim is to give them the information desired. We do not claim for this exhibit entire accuracy. It is as correct as we can make it from all the data received. Some claims have already been presented against the House of which we could find no record on the books. There may be other claims in the same condition; but if there should be, this exhibit cannot be seriously affected by them."

The following table is a tabulated statement of the donations, bequests and collections from the suspended assets:

DONATIONS, BEQUESTS AND COLLECTIONS FROM SUSPENDED ASSETS.

June 25, 1867	Donation from Miss Margaret Grimmer		$500 00
April 17, 1867	Bequest, Vanhooten, by H. T. Owen	$500 00
June 10, 1868	Bequest, Vanhooten, by H. T. Owen	2,002 10
May 18, 1870	Bequest, Vanhooten, by Rev. W. P. Barton	500 00
May 17, 1871	Bequest, Vanhooten, by Rev. W. P. Barton	250 00
Jan. 11, 1872	Bequest, Vanhooten, by Rev. W. P. Barton	1,853 93
Mar. 26, 1872	Bequest, Vanhooten, by Rev. W. P. Barton	557 30
April 1, 1872	Bequest, Vanhooten, by Rev. W. P. Barton	500 00
Feb. 19, 1874	Bequest, Vanhooten, by Rev. W. P. Barton	1,500 00
		$8,063 62
	Less amount paid Rev. W. P. Barton for collecting	149 00	— 7,914 62
Jan. 15, 1875	Bequest of Thomas Menner, of Texas, five Texas bonds of $100 each, sold by Third National Bank for		322 65
June 3, 1871	Bequest of J. T. Colvin	2,250 00
Aug. 26, 1875	Bequest of J. T. Colvin	4,500 00
Sept. 21, 1875	Bequest of J. T. Colvin	2,000 00
July 10, 1877	Bequest of J. T. Colvin	7,000 00
July 21, 1877	Bequest of J. T. Colvin	1,000 00
Sept. 26, 1873	From Miss Ann Lamer	1,000 00	— 17,750 00
	Amount received on subscription for rebuilding Publishing House		40,916 41
	Amount received to April 1, 1878, on Bishops' appeal		32,148 32
			$99,512 04
	From collections on suspended assets		11,046 26
	Interest collected on suspended assets		1,521 76
	Total		$112,080 06

After deducting from the $298,582.87 the amount of $87,165.70, balance in favor of the House in 1866, and the amount of $112,080.06 received from donations, bequests and suspended assets, we still have left $99,337.11 as net gain. If we add to this amount $20,000 lost by fire, it increases the gain to $119,337.11.

In addition to the above we have paid, in a little less than twelve years, interest and discount to the amount of $36,078.62, all of which had to be made in the business of the House.

Proper deductions may be made from the above estimate on account of shrinkage in real estate, presses, etc., but this does not affect the facts we have presented. No one can be held responsible for such results.

*To reproduce these plates would cost $39,237.80. After deducting twenty per cent. for use and wear, it leaves $79,871.24 as their present value.

†The assets of 1866 received from Dr. McFerrin, were reported by me at cash valuation—by which I mean that price they cost the House, and not the price at which they could be sold. Dr. Green, a member of the Book Committee, who may be thought the liabilities of the House (twenty per cent. less than they were sold on the floor of the General Conference in New Orleans)." I doubt, if the whole Concern should be closed out at a forced sale whether it would pay the debts."

‡The ledger shows the cash on hand in 1866, which I took charge of the Publishing House, to have been $224.68 less than I reported. It also shows $1,207.60 not included in my report. This amount, however, was included in the suspended assets, and was collected after the report was made.

§It is also proper to state that Rev. W. P. Barton retained ten per cent. on all collections made by him from the Vanhooten estate, in addition to the $149 paid him by me.

We also present you with the following statement of the business of the House from May 24, 1866, to April 1, 1878:

Profit		$27,220 68

It will be seen from the above statement that in a little less than twelve years the profit on the Advocate amounts to $27,220.68.

From all the periodicals published a profit has been derived, except the New Monthly Magazine. The following statement shows the loss at which it was published:

NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE. (Published one year.)

Receipts	$14,215 10
Disbursements	16,371 26
Loss	$2,129 16

It is proper to state that the amount reported to the General Conference in 1870 of $850.15 contributed for stereotype foundry was credited to that account, and the amount of $100 realized from sale of lot in Shelbyville was credited to stock account, neither of which is brought into this statement.

We also reported to the General Conference of 1874 the amount of $4,933.35 received on policy of insurance, February 20, 1872, after the burning of a portion of the Publishing House. As the loss was about $25,000, or $20,000 over and above the amount received on insurance, we do not deem it proper to include that amount in either contributions or collections.

SALARY ACCOUNT.

The amount paid on account of salaries from June 1, 1866, to April 1, 1878, is $227,353.43.

The above amount includes the salaries of A. H. Redford, T. O. Summers, A. G. Haygood, W. P. Harrison, W. F. E. Cunningham, Hugh Carroll, book-keeper, W. P. Turpin, certified clerk, the several clerks employed from time to time in every department, embracing the mailing room, and the foreman in the press-room and the superintendent in the composing-room.

The salary of A. H. Redford, book agent, from June 1, 1866, to June 1, 1869, was $3,000 per year, and from June 1, 1869, it was changed to $5,000, and remained at that amount until January 1, 1877, when it was reduced to $4,000 per year. Dr. Thomas O. Summers, as editor of books and the Christian Advocate, has received at the rate of $3,000 per year from June 1, 1866, to December 31, 1876. For the year 1877 he received from the Publishing House $2,000, the Vanderbilt University paying him $1,000. The salary of 1878 is the same as that of 1877. Drs. Harrison, Haygood and Cunningham received $3,000 per year.

They That Will Be Rich.

Chase and Hathaway, who have lately been added to the list of defaulters, were regarded as exemplary Christians even in New England. Within the last few years many others of like profession and standing have fallen in the same way. The number of professed Christians who have thus made shipwreck of character is small compared with the total, but public attention is more excited by the delinquency of a church member.

We have no reason to suppose that these men who have dishonored their religious calling were not at one time good men. Hypocrites they may have been, but it is not necessary to believe that they were. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." The lesson which their course teaches is measurably lost if it is assumed that they were always dishonest at heart. This, however, is the conclusion that some religious writers seem to entertain in regard to all such cases. They never were really converted, and their fall is not from grace, but from a mere profession. Their history, in such a view as this, is no warning to genuine believers, because it does not exhibit and illustrate the danger to the sincere Christian. The peril to the Christian from the desire to become rich, and from the love of money, is plainly revealed, and we are inclined to believe that in most instances where men of religious standing have gone down in disgrace, in connection with the violation of large pecuniary trusts they have fallen from a state of goodness and integrity. They were not always corrupt and dishonest. Coveting after money, "they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." It seems to us to be as flippant and unscriptural as it is easy to say that these defaulting and embezzling professors never were true Christians. The Bible teaches that men may fall from the very highest attainments in the faith, that there is constant danger of it, and it abounds in personal examples. It is a poor way to vindicate Christianity by assuming that the defaulting professor was never anything else than a liar and a thief. The gospel has power to save, and the demonstration of it is in the thousands who are saved by it. These wrecks, however, coincide with the teachings and warnings of the word of God in exhibiting the perils of the soul under a dispensation of trial and temptation.

While certain religious writers would clear the gospel by affirming that these defaulters were never truly Christians, worldly skeptics and scoffers aver that such examples only prove that the Christian religion is powerless for good. Admitting that these men were Christians, what has their religion done for them? To which we might reply: What more worldlings than Christians have in proportion to numbers, given way under the pressure of the times, and that where scores of Christians have been overcome, hundreds and thousands have maintained their integrity. None will deny that the gospel requires men to be honest, and that if they conform their lives to its precepts they will be honest. Christianity, as a spiritual and regenerating principle, makes men upright and pure. Notwithstanding, there remains a liability to fail. So long as he is in this world, the Christian is on probation, and, in order to stand, he must watch unto prayer.

The leading cause of these lamentable instances of dishonesty in professing Christians has been forcibly pointed out by the inspired word. It is haste to be rich, the determination to be rich. This also explains the failures so common in every department of business. It does not explain all, but it lies at the bottom of more than one-half of the insolvencies and bankruptcies of the times. Men are in haste to become rich—they will be rich—they are bent upon the achievement of great and rapid success. Hence recklessness in the uses of credit, in extending advances, in speculative investments. Once let this covetous principle gain possession of the heart, and all that is needed to complete the ruin is the opportunity. "They that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition." This witness is true, and it was written for the admonition and warning of Christian men. To be rich at all hazards, and to stick at no expedients in order to attain the end, would seem to be the meaning. Those who surrender themselves to this passion are ready to abuse credit, and to risk the funds of others, with little concern about the obligations which they assume. To build up a fortune slowly, by economy, by hard work and industry, and by the use of their own capital as they accumulate, is a very tame method. Few comparatively can get rich at all, and, as a rule, it takes a lifetime to make a fortune honestly and legitimately. The gambling on borrowed money, or on false securities, which passes for business, sometimes succeeds; but there are nine failures to one successful career. It seems to us that the principles and methods of the business of the day are utterly rotten, and that the tendency of them, in the main, is to destroy every vestige of real integrity.

In money-making the only safe course is to make haste slowly, and to learn thoroughly the great lesson: that money cannot be honestly made out of nothing. Capital, labor, skill, are the foundations, and where there is not this real base the superstructure is a bubble and a fraud. Our young men should start out with this principle. We do not say that they should not aspire to be rich, but the aspiration must be made subordinate to honest industry, and to the conscientious purpose never to risk other people's money, and never to pervert trust funds to their own use. Steady industry, thrifty habits and uncompromising integrity will usually bring a competency, and in the long run these will succeed better than reckless indifference to pecuniary obligations. But if it were otherwise—if honesty means for us life-long poverty, continual privation and unremitting toil—the true resolve should be not to be rich, but to live and die an honest man.

Of course one does not correspond with a buried man. The letter we read before dinner will be laid aside as a sample. The rising generation must read and take warning. But let us read something further in that letter for amusement, if nothing more. Perhaps it will lead off into a moral lecture which will have a soothing effect upon us as we get ready for our post prandial nap. See if it has anything of that sort in it, and begin there. Yes, here it begins:

"People say I have buried my talents in these by-ways and hedges. I don't, however, think my friends even pause to reflect upon the meaning of that expression or to look at the facts. If to be useful to my kind is a proper aim to which to exert my talents, I do not think I am buried. If to give cheer and consolation to the despondent and disconsolate, to rouse the sluggish to action, to teach the selfish to love himself last, to instruct the ignorant for the sake of making them wiser—for the sake of the world—if these are laudable pursuits, and sufficient to employ the highest talents and finest qualities of heart in man, then I do not feel that I am buried. If a quick and lively sympathy for the sorrows of others, and unfeigned joy in their prosperity, are evidences of true life, then I do not feel that I am dead or buried; for these I find in myself constantly growing, while malice, envy, prejudice, and all that brood of evil passions, are far less troublesome than they once were. When also I read the history of those men to whom the world now acknowledges its indebtedness, it occurs to me that the distinguishing feature of their characters was an unselfish forgetfulness of those things which seemed either advantageous or prejudicial to their individual interests. They seemed to be men who thought very little about either their sacrifices or their gains, their hardships or their ease. However these might come or go, they were but the accidents of sunshine or cloud in life's day; and as often to the toil-worn and thirsty pilgrim the cloud was more agreeable than the sunshine, so to them their joy rose into songs when the world looked on with pity for their sorrows. They had meat to eat and water to drink whereof the world knew not. So with myself; short though my experience has been, have I realized a freshness and strength that no flattery or blandishment of the world could bestow. When the world was so fondly caressing me I perceived the sickly odors of its breath. I realized that the glow of crimson on its cheek was the blossoming of dissipation changing rapidly into the beetle of the consumptive. The embraces of a languishing beauty, whose lucrative disease would finally communicate its poison to my vitals while I hung upon her caresses, became to me a thought horrible as death itself. Before me rose a gaunt shadow, whose bony arms were extended to embrace me, and whose livid lips were to fasten upon mine; as the blight upon the flower that trembles and blushes at the adder's touch.

"Then out here, amid these wildwoods and the limitless expanse of heaven spread above me I realize that life is not to be pent up behind walls of brick and stone, however magnificent the exterior. It matters little whether a jail be made of polished or unpolished stones, provided it be strong enough to confine me. It matters little whether the fetters that bind me down be of gold or iron, so they do their work and keep me in bondage. Say that I am held as a king in durance, yet the more galling is it to know that while I languish in bondage the people of my kingdom mourn their chief in chains. So I now look back at your city walls, my former prison; and then I bethink me of the joys of freedom to mind and heart, till even these somber pines seem to have caught its inspiration, and from low murmurs their voices swell in the gale to the storm anthem which precludes Jehovah's approach.

"Then, too, I reflect how little was the horoscope while I was there; and from this memory I realize how narrow the minds of those who so readily pronounce upon a man's burial. This feeling becomes one of sadness when I reflect that many of those who so pronounce are thought to be the wisest men upon earth. They seem to think that the glory of a church is in proportion to the compliments which the world pays to it. After all, they act as if to be rated of the world was not to be the mark of true Christianity in modern times, and that ten souls saved from the piny woods would not compensate the loss of one from the halls of elegance or learning. But the great gay world has never yet thought it worth while to write a funeral oration of the Prophet of Nazareth!

"Tears I often shed for my church when I reflect upon the narrow views she entertains of extending her influence. Are the tenets which she holds peculiar to one latitude or race? Is only one order of mind or mode of social life the peculiar soil in which her seeds of truth are to germinate and grow? Are her geographical limits fixed according to density of population or social refinement? Are the messages of peace and good will which she brings all sealed packages, carefully labeled and directed to particular parties? Is there no package marked: 'To whomsoever hath not received the gift of his grace?' If there be such, let me be the dispenser of those bundles. How much more pleasant is it to bring a gift to one who is glad to get anything than to be the bearer of the richest jewels to such as turn up their nose, or receive them ungraciously, with a murmur that it was not what they wanted! I would rather preside at a peanut parching among a crowd of happy children than to be the master of ceremonies at the dining of the Czar of Russia and the Sultan of Turkey. The cordial welcome of the piny woodsman under his humble roof is sweeter than the studied hauteur of the millionaire in his marble mansion, whose walls are no colder or harder than his heart. If here I am buried, it is in the beating hearts of those who love and hate without guile, and curse or forgive without mental reservation—a burial which, if not so grand as that in tombs that money-kings have built, is yet warmer for the life blood that lends it nourishment. But, more than all of that, earth's towers and thrones do not cut off the vision of life's sun as it sinks unclouded in a sea of glory, to rise in new beauty over plains whose dews and flowers are woven into a rainbow arching the throne of God."

T. A. S. A.

General Conference Notes.

MR. EDITOR: The city of Atlanta is the crookedest city your correspondent ever was in. The streets seem to commence anywhere and run in all directions. You start north, and by the time you arrive at your point of destination you have about "boxed the compass." The street railroads would put a complete bewilderment over the skill of a New Orleans street car driver. I have not seen so commonplace a thing as a dray—four wheeled vehicles being used instead.

The Conference occupied the second day in discussing the report of the Committee on Credentials. As far back as the time of Job we have read of people who were full of talk. We have seen legislatures and conventions and public meetings of various kinds, in all of which very much speaking was done, and we have heard reports in our far country of what a General Conference could do in this respect; but "the half has not been told." After full discussion of the committee's report the Conference, by separate vote of clergy and laity adopted it. The adoption of the report decided a question in vulgar fractions, as well as the point before the body. The law of the church says that one-fourth of the lay delegates from an Annual to the General Conference may be local preachers. The case in hand was that of a local preacher from a Conference entitled to only two delegates. The vote of the Conference seated the local brother, and in so doing it decided that one-fourth is equal to one-half. Davies and Ray and Robinson and Venable may now take their seats. The adoption of the report also decided that a man may be a member of one Conference and a delegate from another! The third day the Bishops presented their quadrennial address, which was read by Bishop Doggett. It occupied one hour and a quarter, but was listened to with profound silence. The address reviewed the past four years' work of the church in all its different departments, bringing clearly to the mind of the Conference those means and appliances which have been most efficient in furthering the kingdom of the Lord, and suggesting changes in those things which have been least efficient. It seemed to the writer that the Bishops omitted nothing that was proper to be said. They recommend some changes in the law, and the election of one more to the episcopacy. The session of the fourth day was entirely taken up by the presentation of "petitions, memorials and appeals." Solomon said, "In a multitude of counselors there is safety," and I am sure that under any circumstances it would take a multitude to suggest the number of changes proposed to-day in our excellent Book of Discipline. Dr Sommers, the secretary, announced that there were twenty-eight memorials on his table, and this is only the first call which has been made for them. Standing committees have been formed, and will soon be at work in good earnest. It is to be hoped that they will so arrange their work that it will meet the approval of the Conference upon presentation, and not be subjected to the front and rear and enfilading fire of over three hundred guns.

I do not know if the Sabbath was a "high day" to the people of Atlanta, but it was certainly a "high day" to your correspondent. I attended Sunday school in the Central Presbyterian church, preaching at eleven A. M. in Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church South, by Bishop Doggett; a temperance meeting at three P. M. in the Second Baptist church, addressed by Dr Winfield, of Arkansas, and preaching at eight P. M. in Trinity, by Dr. Bennett, of Virginia. Our veteran senior at Nashville would call that a "tempting bill of fare." If everybody fared as well as your correspondent, Sunday was a high day.

The fifth day's session was occupied in receiving resolutions, memorials, etc., and discussing Report No. 2 of the Committee on Credentials. Several speeches have been made on the legal aspects of a question raised, as to whether a layman's membership in the church should be continuous for six years preceding his election as a delegate to the General Conference. Pending discussion, in which there seemed to be more parliamentary law and usage laid down than Parliament itself ever knew, anything about, the Conference adjourned. The session of the sixth day passed with the usual routine of receiving "petitions, memorials and resolutions," and referring them to appropriate committees. From the indications presented I judge there will not be many changes made in the church laws.

Nature has many perfections to show that it is an image of the Deity; and it has defects, to show that it is but an image.—Pascal.

that he was an expelled member. He joined the church. He was received because he was supposed to be a proper member. Suppose you seat him. What is the effect? Do you not review the proceedings of the court below, and reverse the declaration, and say he never was out of the church? Are you prepared for that? I trust not.

Mr. Jones (lay, Southwest Missouri Conference) rose to an explanation to the effect that Dr. Rush's statement that all the laymen from Missouri were on his side was a mistake, and the eligibility of Mr. Dameron was not a question in the election of lay delegates.

The President—You cannot make argument upon the question.

Mr Rush said he had made diligent inquiry, and that was his opinion.

Mr. McFerrin (clerical, Tennessee Conference) was in the interest of peace. He wanted recommittal for a decision; either way would inflict ruin that twenty five years will not heal, for I am acquainted with the tone and temper of Missouri. There had been diverse opinions of Bishops and we are all cross—

Mr. Bennett—Oh! no, not cross.

Mr. McFerrin—Not cross, but a cro-s—so (crossing fingers)—cross and piles. (Laughter.) He deprecated personalities, and besought all to pause and get all the facts and decide, but not expel the member for some irregularities of a lower court. Let every part of the administration of Bishops and pastors in this case be justified by a general investigation.

Mr Evans (clerical North Georgia Conference) said that Mr. McFerrin had declared that deciding it either way would do harm in the West, and he did not see the gain then in recommitting as it must be decided one way or the other, "unless the committee is a pocket to put the question in and never decide it at all."

Mr. Evans called the previous question but withdrew it.

Mr McFerrin wanted the question to rest till all the facts and questions of administration could be obtained.

Mr. Nugent thought he had the right, as the mover of the resolution, to close the debate.

The President—I do not think you have that right under our rules.

The motion to lay on the table the motion to recommit was lost.

The question as to what sort of "instructions" were to be given to the committee arose.

Mr. Lee (clerical, Virginia Conference) held up a slip of paper, and said the resolution was on that paper, and only to "recommit with instructions."

What instructions?

Mr. Nugent—All the facts.

Mr Evans—I insist upon a vote.

The President—The question recurs upon recommitting with instructions.

Mr. Blue (clerical, Alabama Conference) asked to be excused from serving on the committee, as he did not intend to be involved in an illegal proceeding.

Mr Giddings (lay, Texas Conference)—I move to increase the committee to fifteen or twenty one.

Mr. Holt (lay, Texas Conference)—I desire to be excused from the committee.

A delegate—I hope he will be excused. He was excused.

Mr. Lee—I have written this, to bring all the facts out:

Resolved, That the whole subject be referred to a special committee, with instructions to inquire whether the offense alleged against L. Gan D. Dameron was a gross immorality, and whether he was legally tried for the offense.

I offer it as a substitute.

The time was extended.

The President—The motion is to adopt Dr Lee's substitute.

A delegate—I rise to a point of order. The Conference has just voted to recommit, and this resolution of Dr Lee's refers to a select committee.

Mr. Lee—I will strike out that part.

Mr Clark—Let him make a motion to strike out.

Mr. Cook—I want to amend the resolution of Dr. Lee.

The President—You do not know whether you want to amend or not till you hear it read.

Mr Hargrove—I understand the motion of Bro. Nugent. It was for this committee to report back to the house the case with the record.

Mr. Lee withdrew his substitute.

Mr. Nugent—The report is referred back to the committee with instructions to report all the facts.

Mr. Branch (lay, Virginia Conference, in the aisle and in loud voice)—Mr President—Mr President (laughter) I am a member of that committee. My opinion was made up while on the committee. I cannot sit on that committee any longer.

He was excused.

T. M. Meriwether moved to lay the motion to recommit on the table.

The vote stood 106 for, 119 against.

The following resolution, offered by W. F. Cook, was read, and on motion of S. X. Hall was laid on the table:

Resolved, That the Committee on Credentials be instructed by this Conference to inquire whether a court of equity can review the decision of a lower court when no bill of review has been filed for this purpose.

The following resolution was offered, read, and on motion of L. M. Lee was laid on the table:

Resolved, That the College of Bishops be requested to communicate their opinion upon the point whether it is competent for this General Conference to inquire into the facts of any church trial which has taken place before any inferior tribunal, the decision of which is not before the General Conference in the way of appeal.

P. WITTENMEAD,
W. W. BENNETT.

The following resolution was then offered and read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Credentials be instructed to consider whether the trial of L. D. Dameron was regular, and in accordance with the law of the church.

W. M. RUSH,
B. H. SPENCER.

Pending action on this resolution the time expired, and Conference adjourned with the benediction by the Bishop.

The Music of the Soul.

Mr. Gough was in a church in a strange city once, and the sexton showed into the same pew another person whose looks impressed Mr. Gough unfavorably. The stranger had a face like mottled soap; his face twitched as if a sheet of lightning had run all over it, and every now and then his lips would twist and give utterance to a strange spasmodic sound. I got as far away from him as I could. Presently the hymn was given out, and the congregation rose to sing:

Just as I am, without one plea,
But that thy blood was shed for me.

I saw that the man knew the hymn, and said to myself: "It can't be so disagreeable, after all." I got nearer. He would sing. It was awful; positively awful. I never heard anything like it. And occasionally he would make that strange noise with his lips. Then he'd commence again and sing faster, to get ahead. They came to the next verse. He'd forgotten the first line, and while the organist was performing the interlude he leaned toward me and whispered: "Would you be kind enough to give me the first line of the next verse?" I did so:

Just as I am—poor, wretched, blind,

"That's it," said he, "I am blind. God help me"—and the tears came running down his face, and the words quivered—"and I am wretched and I am paralytic." And then he tried to sing:

Just as I am—poor, wretched, blind.

At that moment it seemed to me that I never heard a Beethoven symphony in my life with as much music in it as in that hymn sung by that poor man, whom Christ-love had made happy in his lot.—John Gough's St. Louis Paper.

Boy Christians.

It is preposterous to assert that "religion is too intricate and difficult a subject for a boy's mind." What nonsense! There are mysteries in God's word too deep for a Calvin or a Chalmers to fathom; but they do not fall within the domain of humanity. The religion of the Bible is simple and clear as the daylight. It is just doing right. Sin is doing wrong. Sorrow for doing wrong and a change to doing right, is illustrated by penitence. Asking God to forgive the wrong, and help the heart to change, and practice the right, is prayer. Believing that God can and will do it, such prayer is faith. Trying to do just what Christ would like to have us do is practical piety. Certainly every lad twelve years old, who possesses average intelligence, is capable of comprehending such ideas as these. But these ideas—repentance, prayer, faith, obedience to Christ's commandments—are the very sum and substance of Bible religion. Just as soon as a child is old enough to do wrong he is old enough to stop doing wrong, and to begin to do right. That is the kernel of conversion. Divine grace is essential to work this change and to make it permanent. The Holy Spirit's agency is just as needful to regenerate a boy of ten as a philosopher of fifty. But parents and teachers should instruct the boy that if he prays for this grace he will obtain it. There is nothing really intricate or abstruse about the core-truths of Christ's religion. If a boy can love his mother, and trust his mother, and do what his mother bids him, then he can surely love and trust and obey his Savior. These three things make up all that is absolutely essential to gospel piety. God's word demands no more.—Rec. & L. Cyclo.

IT IS A SOLEMN THING TO LIVE. Most people say: "It is a solemn thing to die." And so it is. But it takes us from those we love best, the body to the silent grave, it sends the soul into the unseen world. But is it not a great and solemn thing to live?

Of this we may be certain: that people generally die as they live. "Oh, if I had thought I should die as I do, I would not have lived as I did," cried an Eastern king when dying. And if you would know what your last end may be, you need only to look at your present condition. Is sin your delight or your dread? Does a true repentance lead you to forsake every evil way? Under a sense of guilt and danger, are you seeking for pardon and acceptance through him who died to save sinners? And are you, by the grace of the Holy Spirit, showing the sincerity of your faith by a holy life? These will come to these inquiries at last. Let them have your attention now. Learn that life is a sacred trust, and that as you use it so will your eternal condition be in heaven or hell. Be assured that a life of faith in Christ and of obedience to the will of God is the happiest life that can be spent on earth, and is the only way to a life of blessedness hereafter.—The Cuyler.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE. It would seem that busy brains are coining out work enough for the General Conference. In the session of Tuesday, the seventh, no less than thirty-four resolutions were offered looking to disciplinary changes.

THE HOSPITALITY OF ATLANTA. The mayor and aldermen of Atlanta, recognizing the honor of the assemblage of so august a body in their city, officially tendered to the General Conference the hospitality and freedom of the city.

Father, deliver us from all evil, and especially from the evil which is in our own hearts, and which we love so well.

DIM EYES.

Dim, aged eyes,
Gazing across the wreck of broken ties,
What do they see?
Behind—dead leaves that withered fall,
A fading wilderness, where all
Is vanity;
Before—to gladden weary sight,
A glimpse—a promise of the bright
Eternity.
Oh, dim and tearfull aged eyes,
If waiting till that dawn shall rise,
Blessed are ye!

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

NEW YORK, May 7.—The annual convention of the Reformed Episcopal Church met to day in Emmanuel Church. There was a fair attendance of delegates, including Bishops Falkners, Cheney and Nicholson; also Rev. Dr. Davis, fraternal delegate from the Methodist National Conference; Rev. Mr. Harrison of Florida; Cutler, of Boston; William Newton, of Philadelphia, and J Eastham Brown, of Canada. The morning was consumed by religious services, and a sermon by Rev. Marshall B Smith of Passaic.

PHILADELPHIA, May 7.—In the thirty-fourth annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Pennsylvania Bishop Stevens stated he would sail for England on the seventh instant, to attend the Pan-Anglican Council, to be held July 2. The address also strongly denounces the threatened communist movement in this country. The Bishop expresses alarm at the efforts of communistic leaders to bring about a conflict between labor and capital, which can only result in devastation and ruin, and he exhorts the clergy to study the question of social science.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The transit of Mercury is generally reported as a success, making a gain of ten seconds overthe almanacs. This achievement puts the sun some million miles further away from us.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Charles Morgan, a well-known merchant, died to-day aged eighty four years.

NASHVILLE, May 9.—The Southern Baptist Convention was organized, James P Boyce, D. D., of Greenville, president. Every Southern State except Louisiana was represented. The home and foreign mission board reported details of mission work during the year. Over $73,000 were contributed to these boards since last May. The convention sermon was preached to-night by the Rev. B H Carroll, of Texas.

VICKSBURG, Miss., May 10.—Memorial day was celebrated here with more than usual eclat. Two military companies under the direction of Grand Marshal Gen. E S. Bates headed the procession, followed by citizens in large numbers. The leading address, that of Hon. Marcellus Cowan, most happily blended the blue and gray, and reflected the sentiment of the people in behalf of a union of hearts and hands, and not of empty sounds knowing no fulfilment.

The strewing of flowers was generally giving evidence of valor, and common brotherhood in heroism. Confederate and Federal ex-soldiers delighted alike in the memorial rite.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The Senate passed the bill to repeal the bankrupt law, amended so that it should take effect on the first of September, instead of the first of January.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—President Orton, of the Western Union Telegraph Company, has renewed the offer of the late president to furnish the telegrams to test the system of storm and flood signals by the telephone and cannon, to give certain kinds of signals of general warning of coming storms and floods according to the plan suggested by Mr. A. Watson.

JACKSON, Miss., May 11.—The most destructive fire here in ten years occurred last night. Fortunately there was no wind, or the loss would have been five times as great. Robinson & Stevens' grocery store; C. Regan, dry goods and groceries; Weimer Bros., wholesale liquor dealers, and V. Dorness' saloon are a total loss. Several others suffered damage by water and removal. The loss is about $150,000. Fully insured. Reit, the Governor's private secretary, fell from the roof of a building while handling a hose pipe at the fire, and was badly injured internally. His condition is precarious.

NEW YORK, May 11.—It is stated that the subscriptions to-day subscribed over 100 more than a half per cent, making $30,000,000 already taken of the $50,000,000 asked for. The demand from the West and New England for these bonds is increasing.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—House.—The long-threatened resolution looking to an investigation of the alleged cruelty of Grants to Florida and Louisiana was sprung upon the House to-day.

Potter, of New York, was chosen by the caucus committee to lead the fight, and to steer it through all the rocks and quicksands of opposition safely into a harbor. He performed his part of the dirty work with great tact and discretion, although he did not succeed, in consequence of the adverse tactics of the Republicans, in getting his adversaries safely into port.

Joseph Henry, secretary of the Smithsonian Institute, died here to-day. He had been ill for some time with Bright's disease. He died in full consciousness and intelligence. His serious illness was a subject of deep concern, and prayers for his recovery were yesterday offered in many churches in the city.

TROY, N. Y., May 13.—Rev. John Dix, son of the former president of Union College, is dead, aged seventy-two years.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, May 7.—It seems to be the general impression that Prince Bismarck will not be able to resume the chancellorship. The preliminary endeavors are stated to be directed to securing such an understanding between England and Russia as will permit the assembling of the Congress without the certainty of failure. To this end direct communications are passing between the two governments with the view of ascertaining what modifications in Europe and Asia would render the San Stefano treaty acceptable. Without such an understanding there will be no treaty.

The most important Turkish army corps in front of Constantinople is commanded by an Englishman, who is second in command of the Turkish fleet. He has just received a decoration from the Sultan.

The Manchester Guardian's London correspondent says the attempts to create a scare about Russian privateers is done to affect the underwriters, who continue willing to take any quantity of risks on British hulls at seven to ten shillings.

The statements of Sir Stafford Northcote, chancellor of the exchequer, in the House of Commons last evening, are regarded as reassuring. It is also thought that the visit of Count Schouvaloff, Russian embassador at London, to St. Petersburg cannot be otherwise than helpful to the cause of peace, as he can explain the temper and views of the English government and people more effectively than could be done in correspondence. The change in the public opinion of Russia in a peaceful direction is said to be very marked, and to be the result of the recognition of serious consequences that would inevitably follow a new war. The Czar is personally directing negotiations, with the assistance of Baron Jomini. The Czar's predilections are entirely in favor of peace.

LONDON, May 8.—Sir Stafford Northcote, chancellor of the exchequer, addressed a deputation at Oxford to-day. In the course of his remarks the chancellor said that the government was still engaged in difficult negotiations but had hopes, despite all misrepresentations, of arriving at a peaceful settlement.

ALTEN, May 8.—A number of British transports, conveying Indian contingents, passed here to-day.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 8.—The greater part of the Russian provisions and ammunition have been removed from San Stefano to Tchataldja. The commissariat contracts signed to-day, make Adrianople the point of delivery hereafter.

LONDON, May 9.—As a result of the mobilization of the army and militia reserves thirty-five thousand trained and effective soldiers have taken their places in the ranks. There is little apparent decrease at Woolwich arsenal in the activity of war preparations. The labor department has received orders for thirteen thousand casks, to contain each forty-eight pounds of biscuit crackers, to be carried on pack saddles. Fifteen hundred tons of preserved meat have been received from the United States, principally Chicago.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 9.—The Porte has made the evacuation of Shumla conditional upon the withdrawal of the Russians to Tchataldja. The Russian military authorities are stated to have decided to only withdraw to St. George eleven miles northwest of San Stefano. The garrison of Shumla is too weak to defend the place if attacked.

LONDON, May 10.—A special dispatch from Madrid to the Standard says: The government has induced Gen. Martinez Campos to remain in Cuba and direct another campaign against the Cuban insurgents Maceo and Vicente Garcia.

The government has granted him five million pounds for the expenses of his army, a reinforcement of ten thousand men, and power to carry out reforms.

LONDON, May 11.—A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Company from Berlin says: At 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, as the Emperor William was returning from a drive with the Grand Duchess of Baden, several shots from a revolver were fired at him in Avenue Unter der Linden. Nobody was hurt. The person who fired the shots was arrested.

BERLIN, May 11, 11 P M.—Two shots were fired into Emperor William's carriage from the sidewalk without effect. The assassin ran into Middle avenue, followed by a crowd. An attempt being made to capture him, he fired three more shots and threw his revolver away. He was then secured.

The Emperor's carriage was stopped, and the footmen sprang from the box and assisted at the capture. A few minutes afterward another individual was seized in the Middle avenue, in consequence of an alleged attempt to rescue the assassin. The assassin is a tinsmith named Emile Hebirtel. Max Hoedel, said to be from Leipzig. He was taken to the nearest police station, where a preliminary examination was instituted. The accomplice arrested is named Krueger.

Turn were unceasing demonstrations before the palace throughout the evening. Dense masses are streaming in from the remotest suburbs to manifest their loyalty and sympathy, singing national anthems. The Emperor went to the opera and the Royal Theater to-night, and received a great ovation.

LONDON, Saturday, May 11, 1878.—Dispatches from America, reporting apprehensions of a communistic outbreak, are attracting universal attention. The general opinion is that it will be the worse for the Communists. The Times, in an editorial on the subject, concludes as follows: If, as we will not anticipate, the United States is destined to go through a social crisis of this kind, we shall doubtless hear again, as we used to hear fifteen years ago, a good deal about the evil effects of democratic institutions. If, however, it is a weakness of institutions like those of America to give tolerant encouragement to all sorts of experiments in social and political organization, it is their strength to be able to survive them, to profit by their success, and to be little the worse for their failure. The fabric of American society is so strong that it can sustain, with little or no injury, shocks which would be fatal to weaker and more effete constitutions. In the United States freedom of discussion is the safety-valve through which a great deal of superfluous political steam escapes. The Americans have political sagacity enough to distinguish sharply between intemperate or even revolutionary speech and rebellious action. They have unbounded toleration for the one, but have never shown any great patience of the other. We do not doubt that if they have to deal with any dangerous form of communism they will deal with it effectively. The social fabric of the United States is as capable of successfully resisting such an attack as that of any State in the world.

A dispatch to Reuter's Telegraph Company from Rome says: After the publication of Cardinal Cairoli's letter, censuring the Prussian priests, negotiations between the Vatican and Berlin immediately terminated. The negotiations with the other powers have also failed. The Vatican is stated to have resolved upon a policy of resistance.

The Pope's health has improved.

The Post's Berlin dispatch says: The German government has decided to decline the invitation from the United States to attend the international coinage congress.

PARIS, May 11.—Gen. Grant visited the Exposition to-day.

LONDON, May 13.—Special Constantinople telegrams state that in consequence of the peremptory demand of Gen. Todleben for the surrender of the fortresses, accompanied by a threat to occupy Constantinople, the cabinet decided to evacuate all three fortresses—Shumla first, then Varna, and lastly Batoum. The decision was taken rather suddenly, upon the report of Osman Pasha that the Turkish army was not in a condition to resist the occupation of Constantinople.

The Times' correspondent at Constantinople says: As usual, the palace was smitten with terror and was ready to cede anything if the Russians would go away from Constantinople. Gen. Todleben peremptorily urged evacuation, but adroitly offered to fall back if the fortresses were surrendered. The bait was swallowed, and the Russians have promised so my informant assures me, to retire to Adrianople and Dedagatch, and quit Erzeroum as soon as the three fortresses are evacuated. Evacuation will begin at once. There is to be no written convention, and all will be settled by verbal agreement.

The Vienna correspondent of the Times says: There seems to be a growing impression that if Count Schouvaloff makes it clear that the differences between England and Russia are not irreconcilable, the latter will withdraw her opposition to the demand of England—that the whole treaty be placed before the Congress.

The Times' St. Petersburg correspondent confirms this, but says it is felt there that there is no use making any concession unless there is a reasonable chance that war will be avoided.

BERLIN, May 13.—Among the many telegrams congratulating Emperor William upon his escape from assassination on Saturday was one signed by the president of the French republic, MacMahon, which has made an especially favorable impression.

Books and Periodicals.

—We have received the Garner Songs and Hymns for Sunday schools, prayer meetings, temperance and gospel meetings, together with elementary instruction and exercises for music classes, by John R Sweney, M. B. John Hood, 608 Arch street, Philadelphia, publisher. It is quite a large collection, containing many of the favorite and popular songs.

—The Leonard Scott Publishing Company, 41 Barclay street, New York, send us the British Quarterly Review for April. It has ten articles, embracing a wide variety of important subjects, and forty-six pages devoted to the notice and brief review of "Cotemporary Literature."

—Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine, conducted by Dr. Deems, is on our table, burdened with various interesting matter, and profusely illustrated.

The following letter has been received at this office:

REV. ROBT. J HARE Dear Sir: If any one of your many wealthy subscribers wishes to make a poor woman's heart rejoice, they can do so by sending the ADVOCATE to one who appreciates it. She is a Christian Methodist and a widow, well deserving lady, who would not make such an appeal for herself, but would really appreciate the paper as I well know from her borrowing mine whenever she can, as it already serves two families.

WHERE THE SUN DOES NOT SET.—A legend witnessed by some travelers in the north of Norway from a cliff elevated a thousand feet above the sea, is thus described: "At our feet the ocean stretched away in the silent vastness, the sound of its waves not reaching our lookout; away to the north the huge old sun swung low along the horizon like the slow beat of the pendulum in the tall clock of our grandfather's parlor corner. We all stood silent, looking at our watches. When both hands came together at twelve, midnight, the full round orb hung triumphantly over the waves, a bridge of gold running due north, spanning the water between us and him. There he shone in silent majesty which knew no setting. We involuntarily took off our hats; no word was said. Confess, if you can, the most brilliant sunrise and sunset you ever saw, and the beauties will pale before the gorgeous coloring which now lighted up the ocean, heaven and mountain. In half an hour the sun had swung up perceptibly on his beat, the colors changed to those of morning, a fresh breeze rippled over the flood, one songster after another piped up in the grove behind us—we had slid into another day."

MARRIED.

BURKHALTER—SCOTT.—At the residence of the bride's mother, near Delhi, La., April 18, 1878, by Rev. P. H. Moss, Mr. Elisha Burkhalter and Miss Emma S. Scott, all of Ilich and parish, La.

There is more in earnest, heartfelt prayer than is believed; in keeping the heart strong and pure. None who have sought His aid in the perilous hours when beset with sin will doubt its power to impart strength. God may not be changed by it, but we are.

SUMMER TOURISTS.—Leaving the Crescent city by the great excellent and newly-equipped Great Jackson route, we pass through the States of Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky, and, connecting with the famous Pan-Handle at Cincinnati, we travel through the grandest scenery in America. On this latter road, the finest in the country, we pass, with rapid speed and perfect safety, the beautiful towns and villages of the Middle States, passing delightful residences and magnificent farms. Sweeping like a bird over the sublimest mountain scenery in the world, here on the far-famed Horse-Shoe Bend we take our seats in observation cars, built so that the traveler may observe the grandest effort of nature—the Alleghenies.

The Pennsylvania railroad stands second to none on the continent, in every respect, and hasn't ness upon reach New York or Philadelphia in quicker time than by any other route. The genial Col. W. M Walling on is the general Southern agent, and is located at 22 Camp street.

BATES' ADVERTISING AGENCY.—Mr. J. H. Bates, lately senior partner in the newspaper advertising firm of Bates & Locke, at No. 31 Park Row, having succeeded to the business of the firm has rented and fitted up rooms in the Times building, No. 41 Park Row. Mr. Bates is one of the oldest advertising agents in the city, having been in the business for a great many years. He was for a long time a partner with Mr. S. M. Pettengill, with whom he continued until 1873 at which time he formed a copartnership with Mr. D. B. Locke, at that time largely interested in the Toledo Blade newspaper, both as editor and stockholder. The firm was dissolved yesterday, and to-day enters upon its career under the sole proprietorship and management of Mr. J. H. Bates.—New York Times.

PIZZONI'S COMPLEXION POWDER which is advertised in the vopicatest is considered by all who use it a superior article. STONE IN THE BLADDER

RELIEVED BY THE

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

AFTER THE LIFE OF THE PATIENT WAS DESPAIRED OF BY HIS MEDICAL ADVISERS. THE STONE DISSOLVED IN THREE HOURS IN A GLASS OF THE LITHIA WATER.

CASE OF MR. C. WOLFF, of Point Coupee, La.

POINT COUPEE, LA., April 3, 1878.

MR. THOMAS F. GOODE: By request I give you the following history of my case. Two years ago I began to suffer with severe pain in my kidneys, and to have to be relieved at times—about two a week—which passed the most excruciating agony, from which I was only able to be relieved by myself emitting a stone from one to six grains in weight. There was never either free hemorrhage from the pain in the kidneys. In eighteen months I discharged seven large stones, besides sprinkles of smaller stones and sand. As the result of this protracted and great suffering my general health was reduced to such a condition that my physician advised me that I had nothing to hope for from medicine—that my case was a hopeless one—and I took it for better or for worse. In this state of things, about six months ago I was advised by Mr. I. L. Lyons, a druggist of New Orleans, to try the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, Spring No. 2. A week after I began to use it I had a slight attack, in which I passed two small stones, leaving one of these in a glass of this Water. In three hours I found it dissolved to a fine dust, which gave me no distress, and I persevered in using it. I have had no attack since. The pain in my kidneys has entirely disappeared. I have regained my usual weight, and my general health is perfectly restored. I very cheerfully acknowledge my indebtedness for my life and the comfort which I now enjoy to this great health-giving Water. Respectfully, C. WOLFF.

Sabbath School Song Books.

Good News.

(35 cts.) This charming Sabbath School Songster has won a multitude of friends, and needs no praise from those who have heard its sweet melodies. Just call and shout try it—and the pleased little singers are sure to be. "It May Be Far," "Beautiful Gate," and "I Hear Him Calling," are three of the 270 bird songs which make the use of Good News a perpetual joy.

Shining River.

(35 cts.) Is a book of the same nature and general excellence as "Good News" and differs only as the tastes of composers equally good will offer. Let your girls and boys ask for this "shining river," making the way vocal with sweet and pure lyrics like "Beautiful Valley," "Shining Land," or "Like the Stars."

CHORAL PRAISE. (50 cts.) Is a collection of Canons, Songs and short Anthems for Episcopal Sabbath Schools. The beauty of its contents will recommend it to any denomination.

Those who play the Organ for Sabbath School Singing will welcome the new Farm, Garden and Household.

WOOL AND MUTTON.

The consumption of wool in the United States is far ahead of its production; a certain market is therefore offered for all we can produce. For several years past the operation of a tariff has rendered the market for our wool steady and profitable to the growers; and which has helped, if it has not induced, an extension of sheep-culture beyond any precedent, and at the same time greatly encouraged the woolen manufacture. The growth of wool and its manufacture into various fabrics are necessarily closely related industries, and one flourishes or suffers with the other. At the present time our wool manufacturers surpass in excellence those of any other country. The Centennial Exhibition proved this. The finest broadcloth there was made in the State of Maine; but it is mortifying to have to confess that the wool was brought from Silesia, while we are as well able to grow it as are the German farmers. The American cassimeres were not excelled by any from foreign countries. These are made from American fine to medium or merino wool. American flannels are better than similar European fabrics, because they are made from American wool, which is better than any we could import for this purpose. Our blankets are superior to any foreign ones; those made in California and Minnesota surpassed any others that were shown at the Centennial, and the Minnesota blankets are actually exported to Europe for use in railroad sleeping cars. American knit goods of the very best quality are made from our combing wools.

These facts convey an important lesson to the farmer. If he wishes to keep sheep he need not long consider what kind he should select. Any kind of wool will find a market. The coarse, short carpet wools of the poor Texan and low grade sheep; the medium wool of the Southdowns, and the half and quarter Merinos; the fine short and long combing Merino wools; the very fine Silesia wools; the long wools of the Lincoln and Cotswold—all these are used and wanted, and none of them come amiss to the manufacturer. But it must be kept in mind that the best sheep is one that produces both wool and good mutton.

We might strengthen the force of these remarks by a reference to the advantages gained by farmers in the way of improved cultivation, and the increasing fertility of the farm through sheep-culture. Of this we cannot now speak, but they are by no means unworthy of regard, nor do they admit of any question as to their certain effectiveness. It is enough now to show that the farmer has a certain market for whatever kind of wool he may grow, if it is good of its kind, and that the mutton is as readily saleable as the wool. American Agriculturist.

KILLING AND DRESSING POULTRY

The most common mode of killing fowls in the country is by twisting or wringing the neck. It is a cruel and heartless method, seldom instantaneous, and very apt to discolor the flesh, and to cause early putrefaction from the great quantity of coagulated blood it produces. We think it is about time to try and invent some more humane and Christian method. Chopping off the head is perhaps less objectionable, but when this is done and the bird thrown upon the ground, as is commonly the case, to flutter and frisk about for some time, the effect on a spectator, if he has any feelings of humanity in him, is not elevating.

They do this better in France, where experts in this business will kill and pluck a fowl in a minute, or at the rate of sixty per hour, and follow it up right straight along. They make a gash in the throat, or, in the country, stick the bird in the back of the roof of the beak. Either of these ways will cause instant death. The latter is regarded as the cleanest and most desirable. As it requires some skill to know where to strike above the beak and to do it neatly, perhaps, it is well to adopt the method suggested by Dr. Shute in his lecture last winter before the State Board of Agriculture, which is this: Grasp the bird by the legs, place its head upon a block, and strike it a smart, quick blow with a small club, and then immediately sever the head from the body by a sharp ax or hatchet, and hold the body till all fluttering ceases. A sharp blow with a small, heavy stick behind the neck will injure the spinal cord so as to destroy sensation and motion, if it is properly given, when the head is to be severed from the body.

ENGLISH SPARROWS.—A friend asks us whether the English sparrows destroy insects or not. The question is a good illustration of the influence of early education, and shows how hard it is to get rid of false impressions. It used to be generally believed that sparrows were a curse to the country rather than a benefit, and, while hearing the malefactions of many people, they went on destroying insects just the same. Yes, they are insectivorous, and destroy myriads of larvæ etc. Abundant proof of this has been afforded by both American and English authority. The belief that they do not rests on preconceived notions which promise to linger about as long as the belief in witchcraft did. The sparrows are entitled to our welcome and thanks for helping to overcome the insect pests. A pair of sparrows in the breeding season are said, by the highest authority, to destroy about four thousand of the caterpillar larvæ per week. They eat buds and seed also, but amply compensate for this in the destruction of insects.

The shepherd David had five smooth stones in that primitive cartridge-box of his, but it only took one to bring down Goliah. May be if spiritual warriors had more of David's faith they would have need to expend less pulpit ball and powder.—Presbyterian.

WHO IS SHE?

She never sighs;
She never grumbles;
She never cries
When down she tumbles.

She never spoils
Her pretty dresses;
She never spoils
Her silken tresses.

Oh, she's a pearl!
No mischief scheming;
There's such a girl—
Don't think I'm dreaming.

But not to tell
Her name were folly;
You know her well—
Why, she's your dolly.

BIG KATCHINA, WAYNE COUNTY, March 31, 1878.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl twelve years old. My mother takes the ADVOCATE, and I am very fond of reading it, especially the column for the little folks. We have Sabbath school every Sunday. Our minister's name is Fentherstun. We all like him. It was David that Saul tried to kill with the javelin, and Joshua that led the Israelites into Canaan, and it was the wicked King Darius that put Daniel in the lion's den. Your little friend,

GEORGIA W. COOLEY.

NESHOBA, MISS., Feb. 10, 1878.

MR. EDITOR: We are sorry to say we have no Sabbath school. Kish was the father of Saul; it is found in First Samuel ix, 3. The Lord's Prayer is found in the sixth chapter of Matthew. Where is "milk" mentioned in the Bible? What did Moses command the people to do in passing over the Jordan?

L. J. TUCKER.

The Wonderful Lamp.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet."

A ragged little errand boy was carefully printing this text on a gate with a piece of white chalk. So absorbed was he with his work that he never noticed a kind-looking old gentleman who, after walking slowly past twice, returned and stood behind him.

"M—y," said the boy, repeating the letters aloud as he formed them with care. "F—double e—t, feet."

"Well done, little lad, well done!" said the old gentleman. "Where did you learn that?"

"At the ragged school, sir," replied the boy, half frightened, and thinking the old gentleman was going to deliver him up to the police for writing on the gate.

"Don't run away. I'm not going to hurt you. What is your name?"

"Nicholas."

"Nicholas what?"

"Nicholas Lamberl, sir."

"You are an errand boy, I see; isn't that your basket?"

"Yes, sir."

"So you learned that text at the ragged school. Do you know what it means?"

"No, sir," said Nicholas.

"What is a lamp?"

"And what is the word that the text speaks of?"

"The Bible, sir."

"That's right. Now how can the Bible be a lamp and give light?"

"I don't know, 'less you set it afire," said Nicholas.

"There's a better way than that, my lad. Suppose you were going down some lonely lane on a dark night with an unlighted lamp in your hand and a box of matches in your pocket, what would you do?"

"Why, light the lamp, sir," replied Nicholas, evidently surprised that any one should ask such a foolish question.

"What would you light it for?"

"To show me the road, sir."

"Very well. Now suppose you were walking behind me one day, and saw me drop a shilling, what would you do?"

"Pick it up and give it to you again, sir."

"Wouldn't you want to keep it for yourself?"

Nicholas hesitated; but he saw a smile on the old gentleman's face, and with an answering one on his own he said: "I should want to, sir, but shouldn't do it."

"Why not?"

"Because it would be stealing."

"How do you know?"

"It would be taking what wasn't my own, and the Bible says we are not to steal."

"Oh," said the old gentleman, "so it's the Bible that makes you honest, is it?"

"Yes, sir."

"If you had never heard of the Bible you would steal, I suppose."

"Lots of the boys do," said Nicholas, hanging his head.

"Like the lamp!" said Nicholas, seeing now what all these questions meant. "Is that what the text means?"

"Yes; there is always light in the Bible to show us where to tread. But suppose you kept the slide over the lamp, would it be of any use?"

"No; there 'ud be no light, sir."

"Neither will the Bible give us light if we keep the slide down. How can you keep the Bible slide down?"

"By keeping of it shut, and not reading it?" said Nicholas doubtfully.

"That's it. Now, my lad, do you think it worth while to take this old lamp and let it light you right through life?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you think you will be safer with it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Why?"

"Because if I'm honest I shan't stand no chance of going to prison."

"And what else?"

Nicholas thought for a few minutes. "If I minds the Bible I shall go to heaven," he said at last.

"Yes, that's the best reason for taking the lamp. It will light you right into heaven. Good by, my lad. Here's a shilling for you, and mind you keep the slide up."

"Yes, sir," said Nicholas, grasping the shilling, and touching his ragged cap; "I'll mind."—The Christian Advocate.

ORIENTAL PROVERBS.—Do not contemn God by taking his name in vain, lest he contemn you.

Life is a sleep from which man wakes when he dies.

There is no securer refuge than the fear of God.

One is more apt to follow the corrupt manners of his own age than the good examples of former days.

Want of good sense is the worst of all degrees of poverty.

Nothing will better conceal what you are than silence.

Sweet words make many friends.

COUNTERFEIT ROMANISM.—Ritualistic practices seem to be making headway even among dissenters. Methodist revivals in London, it is alleged, are now being termed missions, and silver candlesticks are to be found on the communion table in several metropolitan Wesleyan chapels. At the opening of an organ at a Congregational meeting-house at Reading the collection was made in red offertory bags with an ecclesiastical design worked upon them, while a fresh venture of the Unitarians is announced as a free church dependent upon voluntary subscriptions and the offertory.

EVERGREEN TREE GRUB.—A fly deposits its eggs in the main leader of evergreen trees; grubs are hatched and eat into the heart and live upon the pith, eating upward. When the leaders wither or look sickly, cut them off and split them up, and kill Mr. Grub. It can be seen when such grubs are in the shoots, as there are holes with cut wood, like sawdust, around them and upon the shoots a distance off.

CLEVERLY COUNTERFEITED.

Dr. Price's celebrated Cream Baking Powder is extensively imitated. The genuine may be known from the imitations by the words "Dr. Price's," "Delicate A Pure," and the Head and Cornucopia on the label. These are the trade marks. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is not sold in bulk.

MEDICAL.

The German Star in Louisiana.

THE SO-CALLED WONDER DOCTOR has arrived safely in New Orleans, with his head and hands full. He has made a twelve months' tour through the State of Louisiana to show to the public what he can do with his AMERICAN HERB MEDICINES for the diseased human system and organs. The Doctor is a thorough and experienced German chemist of the herb and vegetable kingdom, and has spent eighteen years in exploring America for the purpose of discovering the most valuable medical herbs growing in America. He has succeeded in discovering the secrets of all Indian tribes in connection with the vegetable kingdom, and thus is enabled as a practical physician, to prescribe these herbs to his patients. The Doctor has been wonderfully successful in the treatment of his patients, of whom he has had in his charge 1,065 within nine months. These comprised cases of sickness of every description, and of both sexes. All these patients were completely restored to health in a very short time. Every where in the State the Doctor had to promise to establish himself in New Orleans, which he has resolved to do and carried out, in order to relieve, as fast as Nature will permit, the long sufferings of so many of his fellow-beings. None but American herbs will be employed by the Doctor in the preparation of his medicines, and all patients who may honor him with their confidence and call upon him will be treated with them.

The Doctor has established his office and a Chemical Laboratory, as well as a complete Private Hospital, at No. 105 BOURBON STREET, between Toulouse and St. Louis streets, so as to give to the afflicted from everywhere an opportunity to receive medical attention at his hands. The rooms are all well fitted up and absolutely under his personal supervision. His terms are moderate. Letters of inquiry (with three-cent stamp inclosed) will be answered promptly. Orders for medicines will be filled upon the receipt of the money, and mailed free to any place in the United States. Address

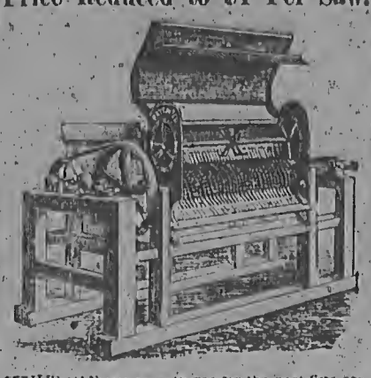
"Revolving Head" Cotton Gin.

PATENTED JULY 18, 1873.

Price Reduced to $4 Per Saw.



THIS GIN has been in use for the past five seasons, and several recent improvements have been added. It obviates all friction at the ends of the cotton box, prevents the lint from breaking, and gives a Larger Yield of Lint from the same Amount of Seed than any other Gin in use. The Revolving Head lightens the draft and causes the Gin to run faster with less driving power, thus doing a great deal more work with the same time, while consuming steam or animal power less than any other Gin. The seed being ginned very close, the length of the staple is increased, producing cotton on this account of a greater market value. This improved value, given by length of staple, with extra production of lint, added to increased amount of work done, more than covers the cost of the Gin in every 100 bales ginned. Testimonials sent by mail on application.

OBITUARIES.

JOHN HOWARD was born in Jackson county, Tenn., August 23, 1820, and died in Tuskegee, Ala., on the morning of Thursday, February 21, 1878. He was married to Lucinda Jennings March 24, 1824. From this union sprang twelve children. Of these, eight preceded him to the spirit-world, and four are following in his footsteps to the better land.

Bro. Howard came to Tuskegee in 1835, where he resided to the day of his death. He was one of our oldest and most highly-esteemed citizens. During his long residence in Tuskegee he made many friends, but no enemies. Faithful alike in all the relations of life, his reputation, like his character, was pure as the driven snow.

For two years I was his pastor, and count it one of the privileges of my life to have been associated with him. He was a Methodist of the old style—one of the preacher's warmest friends, one of the church's brightest jewels. He loved God, and was not afraid to declare it. He loved the church, and was not ashamed to manifest that love. He delighted to talk of the things of God with his soul-and if was one of the sorrows of his heart that those who feared the Lord did not speak oftener one to another.

He was remarkably punctual in his attendance upon the services of the sanctuary enough he had passed his threescore years and ten, and his strength was labor and sorrow, he was seldom absent from the house of God. At all our meetings I expected Bro. Howard. If he was not present I knew he was ill.

For years and years he was a class-leader. He discharged the functions of that called office, and to the edification of his class. He was in his home circle that His piety shone brightest, and diffused its largest measure the aroma of paradise. Night and morning he called his family together, and with prayer and song worshiped the God he loved so well.

His religious experience was rich and full; but he was not exalted above measure. On the contrary, he was clothed with humility. The valley of humiliation suited him well. Here he delighted to walk, to pluck the flowers, and put his feet into the footprints of the blessed Master.

His last sickness was long and wearisome, and not specially painful. He had every attention that sickness requires, sympathy devotion or love exacts. His physicians exhausted the resources of their art, and his loved daughters watched around his bed with tireless patience. All availed-nothing the hour had come.

I was often with him during his illness. He was conscious nearly all the time, and his faith was firm as a granite mountain. As he felt his nerves all unstrung and aged, feeble, and tottering, the mention of Jesus' name would thrill his soul with rapture, and bring the glow of heaven to his face. Often would he say: "Ready, yes, ready" Longing to depart and be with Christ, desiring to go, he was willing to stay. I was with him in his last moments. He was pleased to rebuke the winds and the waves, and he passed over the river of death calmly. One long-drawn sigh and the spirit left its earthly home, to enter the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

E. L. LOVELESS.

MISS LIZZY C. SHAVER daughter Rev. A. T. and P. A. M. Seaver, in her eighth year, has been called now to her home beyond the tolls and tears of earth. She was born at Fort Decatur, in Morgan co., Ala., February 26, 1869, and died in Lone Empire county, Ala., March 16, 1878, on Sunday morning, March 17, the [illegible] which destroyed her young life compelled her to take what proved to be her dying bed. She did not at first seem to have a dangerously ill and for three or four days her best hopes were entertained of her recovery. On Wednesday she fell so much worse that she arose and sat up for a while, while up, in the warm seat arranged something there. But soon she became very sick, and turning to her dear sister, who alone was able to wait on her the rest of the family as Bro. Seaver and mother being sick, said: "Sister please prepare the bed and undress me soon. I am so sick." From that hour she rapidly grew worse, and it was apparent to all who visited her during the last few days that she was near the close of her earthly life. She said but little if anything to any about dying. On Thursday she was heard to say: "Lord, have mercy on me." Friday she said: "Lord Jesus, take me home to rest." Taking her brother by the hand, as he stood at her bedside, she said to him: "Let us both go home together." On Saturday evening, just as the setting sun was gilding the tops of the trees, and shedding a soft and mellow light over everything, and bordering the clouds with fringes of gold and silver, and diamonds of light, as if to prepare the way for the passage of her redeemed spirit to a brighter world, she of her life went down amid the shadows and darkness of death.

Just as the sun of her life was rising above the horizon of her eighteenth year it was quickly eclipsed, and the darkness of death rested upon her. The day closed while the morning dew was yet upon the flowers.

Dear Lizzy was rather reserved in her manners, and inclined to melancholy. But such was the kindness of her heart, the sweetness of her spirit, and the gentleness of her disposition and deportment, that all who knew her loved her most tenderly; and those who knew her best were they who loved her most. She was affectionate toward others, retiring in her nature, tender in her sympathies, and strong in her attachment to her friends. She was reared amid the influences of a religious home, with the example of a sister of Christ before her eyes, in the home of her father, during the tender years of childhood, and the counsels of a pious father to guide her during the brief period of her stay on earth. She has gone, we trust, to join her sainted father and five little brothers, who preceded her to the better land.

JOHN R. PEAVY.

A good name is best won by good deeds. There is no surer way of being well thought of than by deserving it. "If you have a little world around you," wrote Daniel Webster to an early friend; "fill it with good deeds, and you will fill it with your own [illegible]

We have the best imitation Gold Watch in the market. The metal is a composition of other metals so closely resembling gold, that the best judges find it difficult to detect the difference, except by the most severe test, and it has the virtues requisite to make it the best substitute for gold known. Genuine American Movement, Expansion Balance, Beautifully Engraved, or Engine Turned Hunting Cases, and equal in appearance to a GOLD WATCH THAT COSTS from $150 to $200. If you wish a watch for your own use, or to make money on, try this. Owing to our large sales we are enabled to reduce the price of them to $12 each, with an elegant Chain attached. They are used on railroads, steamers and in manufactories, and other places where accurate time is required, and give general satisfaction. We send them by mail or express, on receipt of $12, to any part of the country; or if will be sent C. O. D. when the customer desires and remits $3 on account. The sole agent CHAINS weigh about Fifty Pennyweights, and the same pattern in pure gold would cost five. We sell these Chains at $6 each. But we sell the Watch and Chain for $12, sent by mail in a registered package, postpaid, to any postoffice in the United States.
WE SELL THE WATCH WITHOUT THE CHAIN FOR $10.

COMMERCIAL.

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
NEW ORLEANS, Tuesday, May 14, 1878.

Prices in several lines of goods have improved somewhat in the past week, as will be seen by reference to the quotations in the next column. We cannot say, however, that business generally has improved, though a fair business for this season is being done. Work on the two projected railroads to Texas will now be pushed forward rapidly, which will give employment to a number of laboring men. In the course of a year or two, at farthest, we may expect to receive a large part of the crops of Texas, and freights will be low enough to enable this city to compete successfully with St. Louis in shipping merchandise to that State.

Money is plentiful here, and the rates of discount consequently easy. State consols are holding up well, but are not so strong as some days ago. They are quoted at 77@77½. Premium bonds and stocks are quiet.

COTTON.

In consequence of the good demand as well as the advance at Liverpool and Havre, the market here ruled strong at an advance of ⅛ to ¼ on all grades, with sales of 4,300 bales.

The following is the official closing of the Cotton Exchange:

THE PARDONED SINNER.—He easily looks down from an high on all the empty titles and false images of earthly happiness, and when he is bereaved of them all, yea, and beset on every side with what the world calls misfortunes and tribulations, ceases not to be happy. In sorrow he is joyful, in poverty he is rich, and in chains free; when he seems buried deep, so that not one ray of the sun can reach him, he is surrounded with radiant luster; when overcome with ignominy he glories; and in death itself he lives, he conquers, he triumphs. What can be heavy to that man who is eased of the intolerable burden of sin? How animated was that saying of Luther: "Smite, Lord, smite; for thou hast absolved me from my sins!" Whose anger would he fear who knows that God is propitious to him—that supreme King, whose wrath is indeed the messenger of death, but the light of his countenance is life; who gladdens all by the rays of his favor, and by one smile disperses the darkest clouds and calms the most turbulent tempest.—Leighton.

When Sir John Carr was in Glasgow, about the year 1807, he was asked by the magistrates to give his advice concerning the inscription to be placed on the Nelson monument, then just completed. Sir John recommended this inscription: "Glasgow to Nelson." "Just so," said one of the bailies; "and is the town o' Nelson's close at hand, might we no joist say, 'Glasgow to Nelson, six miles,' an' so it might serve for a monument an' a mile-stone too."

SEWING MACHINES.

THE SINGER AGAIN TO THE FRONT!!

Great Reduction in the Prices

OF THE

WORLD-RENOWNED SINGER FAMILY SEWING MACHINE!

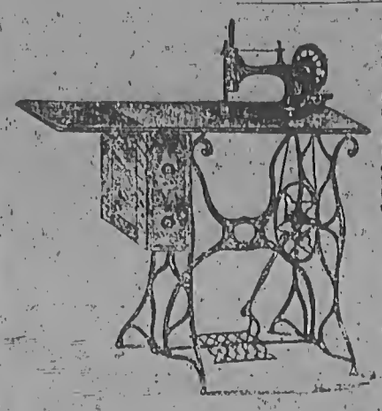
FOR CASH!!



The Singer Manufacturing Company, ever aware to the interest of the public, have determined to put the price of their Machines within the reach of every man, woman and child in the land.

The Genuine Singer Sewing Machine is now Offered at Prices Below the Bogus Ones or Any Other.

The fact that the only Sewing Machine which unscrupulous men have ever attempted to imitate is the Singer is sufficient evidence of its superiority over all others. There is no longer any excuse for buying any of the cheap Machines hawked about the country, with no claim for patronage but their cheapness.

BEWARE OF

Worthless Imitation Machines.

...ur great round sun rims lower to the west—
The days are shorter, and the nights more chill—
The early morning hours of songs bereft,
...sepulchral-like, are dark and damp and still.

...s, too, are passing, my sweet friend; and life,
...which once was sunny as a summer's day,
...is quite hushed, and limned by warning frost,
...Now passes onward into evening gray.

...Farewell, farewell, sweet summer of the year—
...Farewell, farewell, sweet summer of my life;
...Be one again in beauty shall appear,
...The other bloom beyond all mortal strife.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Temporary lights have been established by the Lighthouse Board at the South Pass of the Mississippi river, two at the mouth of the pass on each jetty, twenty yards inside of the end of jetty, and two at the head of the South Pass, one on each side of the upper entrance.

The proposed amendment to the deficiency appropriation bill providing for a line of steamships between New Orleans and Brazil was defeated by a vote of 21 to 32. Sixteen Republicans and seven Democrats voted for it, and eleven Republicans and twenty-one Democrats against it.

NASHVILLE, May 14.—The Southern Baptist Convention adjourned last night, to meet in Atlanta, Ga., next May.

WILMINGTON, DEL., May 15.—The bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church commenced a semi-annual meeting to-day. Bishop Scott presiding. There are eleven in number—Bishops Andrews, Ames, Bowman Foster, Haven, Harris, Merrill, Scott, Simpson, Peck and Wiley—and their jurisdiction extends throughout the world. The session will continue several days.

KNOXVILLE, May 16.—The General Assembly (South) of the Presbyterian Church of the United States convened here this morning. The opening sermon was delivered by Rev. C. A. Stillman, D. D., the retiring moderator.

Rev. Thomas E. Peck, D. D., of the Roanoke Presbytery, Va., was elected moderator, and Rev. James A. Martin, of the Atlanta Presbytery, temporary clerk. Over one hundred and thirty delegates are present, making probably the largest assemblage of this body ever convened.

PITTSBURG, May 16.—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States convened here to-day. In the absence of Rev. Dr. Junkin, the Rev. Dr. E. D. Morris of Lafayette, delivered the opening sermon, taking for his subject: "Our Church—her requirements, her mission and her responsibility."

NEW YORK, May 16.—The syndicate paid over $1,500,000 for gold for the 4½ per cent. bonds yesterday. Members of the syndicate express the belief that the next subscription will exceed the remaining $15,000,000 of original $50,000,000 contract.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—William B. Hunt, of Louisiana, qualified as clerk of the Court of Claims to-day.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—House.—There was a long and protracted struggle in the House over Mr. Potter's resolution for a select committee of eleven to investigate alleged presidential election frauds in Florida and Louisiana, resulting to-day in a victory of the Democrats, and in the adoption of the resolution.

Democratic members who had been counted or paired on Monday last, when the resolution was offered, had since then recalled to the city, had given notice of the termination of their pairs, and to-day there were present in the House, free from paralyzing alliances, 148 Democratic members, including the speaker, and various preliminary movements, comprising a call of the House, the closing of the doors, the issuing of warrants for absentees, some of whom were in the city, etc., final vote was taken on the adoption of the preamble and resolution, when a single Republican member cast his vote recorded, and but two of the Democratic members—Mills of Texas, and Morse, of Massachusetts—voted in the negative. The preamble vote was 115, and the preamble and resolution were declared adopted.

There was a good deal of confusion, roar and excitement throughout the hall, but no demonstrations attended the announcement of the result.

The President sent a message to the Senate recommending an appropriation for the fishery commission award, leaving the disbursement to the executive, Mr. Evarts having raised some technical questions in the matter.

Prof. Spencer F. Baird to-day was elected secretary of the board of regents of the Smithsonian Institute, in place of Prof. Joseph Henry, deceased.

ATLANTA, May 18.—The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South to-day passed resolutions on the death of Bishop Enoch Marvin. Several addresses were made.

Resolutions favoring a Methodist Ecumenical Conference, and a grand centenary of American Methodists, to be held in Boston, December 25, '84, were unanimously passed.

Resolutions of Christian greeting to the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and the General Assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, were passed and ordered to be transmitted to those bodies.

TROY, N. Y., May 19.—It is supposed the Fenians who were encamped near this village departed during the past few days. There has been a large number of strangers in town, and that there is a movement for the invasion of Canada is not questioned. The most intense excitement prevails across the border. The Canadian militia has been supplied with arms and ammunition, and will go into camp to-day.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Senor Seamacona, Mexican minister, is advised that the revolutionists in Mexico have utterly failed.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Mr. Thurman, of Ohio, from the Senate Judiciary Committee, to which was recommitted House bill to provide for admission to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States of any woman who has been a member of the bar of the highest court of any State or Territory for a period of three years, reported it back, together with the amendment of Mr. Sargent, providing that no person shall be refused admission to the bar of any United States court on account of sex, and said he had been directed by the committee to report as they reported before—that there was no law prohibiting a court from admitting a woman to the bar, and therefore there was no necessity for this legislation. After some discussion the bill was placed on the calendar with the adverse report.

The select committee on alleged frauds in the presidential election was announced as follows: Messrs. Potter, of New York; Morrison, of Illinois; Hunton, of Virginia; Stenger, of Pennsylvania; MacMahon, of Ohio; Cobb, of Indiana; Blackburn, of Kentucky; Cox of Ohio; Butler of Massachusetts; Reed, of Maine, and Hiscock, of New York.

ATLANTA, GA., May 20.—The General Conference to-day adopted a long report of the Committee on Education, which looks to the more perfect support of all church educational institutions, and attacks the skeptical tendencies of the day.

Rev. C. D. Foss, fraternal delegate from the Methodist Episcopal Church, took formal leave of the Conference. An appropriate response was made by Bishop Paine. Rev. Alex Clark, Rev. E. H. M. Henderson and Rev. G. R. Barr, fraternal delegates from the Methodist Protestant Church, also took leave of the Conference. In the afternoon session there was a warm debate on the proposed increase in the number of appointments in presiding elders' districts. The district limit was at last changed from fourteen to twenty. The proposed centenary of American Methodism will be held in Baltimore, in 1884, instead of Boston.

VICKSBURG, May 20.—A terrific storm of wind and rain visited this city on Saturday evening at seven o'clock. The velocity of the wind reached fifty-five miles an hour, and continued at that rate seven minutes. Many stores were unroofed, including those of Maurice, Meyer & Co., dry goods; H. Tuck, clothing; M. McManus, Fitzpatrick & Bro., and E. W. Wallis, grocers. The stocks of these firms were damaged by rain.

The Mississippi Valley Bank was badly damaged by the roofing of McManus' store being blown into the walls of the bank building, knocking down the windows and part of the wall.

The law offices in Hornthall's building were flooded by rain-water. Rain-fall, in two hours, over one and a half inches.

KNOXVILLE, May 20.—The Presbyterian General Assembly (South) this morning received Christian greetings from the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at Atlanta, Ga. A resolution was adopted expressing confidence in the workings of the American Bible Society, and urging ministers and churches to co-operate with and aid it by collections.

A delegate appeared from the General Assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, but inasmuch as this Assembly had no official knowledge of such a body, and was not in correspondence therewith, such delegate was not formally received.

BOSTON, May 20.—A special from North Troy, Vt., says: The excitement along the Canadian frontier in regard to a Fenian raid is intense. The country bordering on the line is full of strangers, and appearances indicate that the rumors of invasion are not without foundation.

Every few hours squads often or a dozen men pass through this village toward Canada. Some of them are evidently tramps; and several outrages are reported as committed by them.

FOREIGN.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 14.—Advices indicate that, despite Gen. Todleben's efforts, the Porte will not evacuate Varna and Batoum, Shumla will probably be surrendered, partly as satisfaction to the Russians, and partly because it has ceased to be of great importance since the Russians established themselves on its line of communication with Varna. Moreover, the thirty battalions of regulars now in Shumla are believed to be more useful at Constantinople.

Military critics assert that in case of war, if the British and Turks held Varna and Batoum, the Russians must withdraw from the Thracian Peninsula and from the Enzeroum and Trebizonde line, and that this accounts for Gen. Todleben's insistence, even at the risk of prejudicing the negotiations between London and St. Petersburg. The conviction indeed, is general that the object of appointing Gen. Todleben commander-in-chief was that he might rescue the army from the unsafe position into which the political motive of approaching Constantinople had drawn it.

OTTAWA, CANADA, May 14.—Further important dispatches are said to have been received by the government to-day from their agents along the frontier with respect to the Fenian movement, and some excitement is manifested in this city in consequence.

From orders which were issued by the military departments, and the preparations being made from one end of the dominion to the other for coast and frontier defense it would appear that the intention of the government is to be fully prepared for all emergencies.

Four gunboats, armed with twenty nine-pound guns, and manned with twenty-four gunners have been ordered to the river St. Clair and Lakes Erie and Ontario. All the militia on the frontier is being supplied with arms and ball cartridges, and the interior militia has been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to leave for the front at a moment's notice.

LONDON, May 14.—There was serious rioting at Blackburn. Thousands of the lowest class of operatives, including women, paraded the streets. The residence of Col. Jackson, chairman of the Masters' Association, was burned to the ground. The same mob attempted to burn the Jackson Mill.

The residence of Alderman Hornby was partially wrecked, and the windows of all the mills in the town demolished. A strong force of infantry from Preston has arrived, and troops of cavalry are coming.

The Morning Advertiser says: It is stated that orders have been issued to the first army corps to hold itself in readiness to embark May 28.

A special to the Daily News from Vienna says a group of Berlin bankers made Russia a preliminary advance of fifty million roubles.

MONTREAL, CANADA, May 14.—Col. Fletcher, deputy adjutant general, has received instructions from Ottawa to distribute arms and ammunition to the volunteers along the American border, and to hold the force in readiness.

YOKOHAMA, May 14.—M. Ozoho, minister of the interior, has been assassinated. The murderer was arrested.

HAVANA, May 14.—An earthquake at Cua, Venezuela, killed six hundred persons. Heavy shocks were felt at Caracas.

LONDON, May 15.—The Times' special from San Stefano says: All the troops here will move within a few days into camp on rising ground, two miles and a half nearer Constantinople.

LONDON, May 16.—The Queen will shortly visit Woolwich, and inspect the troops there. This will be the first time her majesty has done so in twenty two years.

LONDON, May 17.—A dispatch to Reuter's from St. Petersburg says: It is believed Count Schouvaloff succeeded in convincing the Emperor that it is to Russia's interest to concede to Europe most of the demands formulated by England. The assembling of a European congress appears consequently assured, despite the difficulties which have arisen at Constantinople concerning the surrender of the fortresses.

A special from Rome to the Standard says: The congregation, convened to consider questions, have decided that under no circumstances can the Pope accept the provision made for him under Italian laws of guarantees. The produce of Peter's pence during the last four months was a third less than during the same period in 1877.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 18.—Russian journals to-day generally express a hope of peace. Even those hitherto warlike have adopted a temperate tone.

LONDON, May 20.—The Times' St. Petersburg correspondent says: While there is reason to believe the foundations of an arrangement have been laid between the cabinets at London and St. Petersburg, a small group of personages who know what has occurred maintain extreme reserve. It is difficult to say how far the various rumors are to be relied on.

The Vienna correspondent of the Times telegraphs that the conciliatory disposition in St. Petersburg was maintained to the end of Count Schouvaloff's visit, despite efforts to the contrary, and the struggle, political and personal, which has been going on for the last week in St. Petersburg, was decided in favor of Count Schouvaloff.

Forty persons were burned to death at the theater at Ahmed Nagger, which burned during a performance.

ANECDOTE OF MENDELSSOHN.—A pretty anecdote is told of Queen Victoria and Mendelssohn. A short time before his death the great composer visited the Queen. He sat down to the piano, and played accompaniments while she sang some of the songs. When Mendelssohn rose to go Victoria warmly thanked him for the pleasure he had given her, and said, "Now, what can I do to give you some pleasure?" expecting him to mention some gift or honor she could confer upon him. Mendelssohn at first declined to mention anything, but when her majesty insisted he frankly told her that he was a lover of little children, and that he desired to see the royal children in their nurseries. The Queen mother was much pleased, and kindly led him through the nurseries, and they spent a pleasant hour talking in a friendly way about their children.—Sunday Magazine.

EIGHTH DAY.

THURSDAY, May 9, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour.

Bishop Paine in the chair.

Divine service was conducted by Linus Parker.

The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

James M. Richards, lay delegate from the Northwest Texas Conference, Robert Paine, Jr., lay delegate from North Mississippi Conference, and E. Y. McMorris, lay reserve delegate in place of Price Williams, from the Alabama Conference, appeared and took their seats.

Leave of absence was granted to A. S. Andrews (to visit a sick member of his church;) and W. J. Swain, lay delegate from the North Texas Conference (on account of urgent business).

The chair announced the names of the members of the Committee on Credentials, as ordered yesterday, to wit:

Committee on Credentials.—S. Register, chairman, W. H. Potter, H. W. Foote, W. H. N. Magruder, H. F. Johnson, L. Parker, W. B. Harrison, Alpheus Wilson, Judge Hamil, R. K. Hargrove, John Rodman, C. W. Miller, J. H. Carlisle, Judge J. D. Giddings, R. A. Hardaway, J. Hardeman, W. F. Easterling, Pat. Whitehead, Thomas Stanford, R. Pollard, E. L. T. Blake.

E. L. T. Blake, at his own request, on account of sickness, was excused from serving on this committee, and another was appointed in his place.

Bishop Paine said: Before I resign my seat I will make a few remarks before you go into the regular order of business. You have a case which has excited you greatly. That is too strong. It has excited attention and interest. I think I express the views and impressions of my worthy colleagues when I say we apprehend serious danger that you will forget your responsibility and duties as the supreme judicatory of the church.

We have different courts in our church, which are for the trial and settlement of the cases specified as coming under the jurisdiction of those courts. These courts which have been established are of the highest authority. You are bound to recognize them and their decisions. You have no right to revise the actions of inferior courts in cases which do not come properly before you by appeals. The rights and relation of preachers and laymen are guarded by great constitutional provisions. The talk of going back and bringing up records from inferior courts, and entering into investigations of them, seems to us to sound very strangely. You are acting under restrictions and laws. If you do not observe them you cannot expect inferior courts to observe them. Let me put you on your guard.

You have a case involving the right of a layman on this floor. Laymen have their chartered rights under the constitution. They are protected by law. Appeals in these cases, as in every other such case, must be to the law. You must adhere to the law. You may differ as to the construction of the law, but you must adhere to the law, and vote conscientiously upon your interpretation of the law governing the General Conference in these cases protecting alike the lay and clerical elements of the church. The brother has full protection under these laws. The church is authorized to see that he who claims a seat here comes according to the law. We wish you to confine your attention to this aspect of the question: What is the law governing the case? That is its proper import. Does it seat him? If you say so, you cannot reject him. Does it exclude him? Then he has no right here, and I presume he has no wish, and ought not to have any wish to retain a seat.

Our church has suffered severely from disregard of constitutional provisions. Shall we commit the great error we have deprecated in others? Shall we not adhere firmly and unwaveringly to the law—to the constitution of the church? The moment we depart from this we have no security for our rights. We are then governed by a mere majority, and the right of every member is in peril. Away with passion and excitement. The man who cannot isolate himself from personality, and stand by the constitution, is not fit for this occasion. The Discipline was made to check questions of this kind.

There is no reason why you might not meet this question fairly and squarely. Whether the harm that will result from a decision is so great as a disregard of constitutional and legal provision is submitted to your serious consideration. This would be a fearful example to set in this body.

I shall never forget the words of Bishop Soule in 1844. When prejudice and passion ruled the hour, that noble and apostolic man stood up there for the defense of the constitution and law. He said, in his calm, deliberate way: "I fear not argument. I invite it. Let a man oppose me—let him do so calmly, logically, kindly, decisively. Let him oppose me. I fear not argument and reason. I fear passion. I fear prejudice."

Excuse me for making these suggestions to you. I beseech you to protect the laws of the church—protect the constitution of the church. Do not go into this matter wildly. Meet this question fairly, kindly, in the spirit of the Master, and may God help you. (Amens.)

Bishop Pierce took the chair.

A letter from the Rev. E. H. M. Henderson, fraternal messenger from the Methodist Protestant Church, was received and referred to the Committee on Introductions.

J. S. Martin, chairman of the Committee on Itinerancy, presented Report No. 2 of that committee; which was read, and on motion of J. B. McFerrin was adopted, as follows:

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

The Committee on Itinerancy respectfully report that they have had under consideration the memorial of the pastors and churches in Savannah, Ga., and that of the Rev. Dr. Lovick Pierce, on the Wesley Monumental Church; and as the result of their deliberations respectfully ask the adoption of the following, viz.:

Resolved, 1. That the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in General Conference assembled, at Atlanta, Ga., May 9, 1878, indorse the Wesley Monumental Church at Savannah, Ga., and commend it to Methodists the world over as an enterprise eminently proper, and meeting our hearty approval.

2. That the Bishops be and they are hereby authorized, when they deem it expedient, to appoint an agent to represent this memorial church to Wesley, and solicit the aid of Methodists everywhere to bring it to an early completion.

J. S. MARTIN, Chairman.

C. G. ANDREWS, Sec.

W. S. Black, chairman of the Committee on Boundaries, presented Report No. 1 of that committee, which was read and lies on the table, under the rule.

REPORT NO. I OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOUNDARIES.

Your committee have considered sundry resolutions, petitions and memorials, and offer the following as the result of their deliberations:

1. That the Territory of Montana be and the same is hereby created a separate Conference, by the name and style of "The Montana Conference."

2. That the part of the town of Texarkana which lies in Arkansas be transferred to the North Texas Conference.

3. That Big Stony Creek appointment, Sinking Creek circuit, Baltimore Conference, be transferred to the Holston Conference, so that the Baltimore Conference line will run as follows: "And thence on a direct line to New river at Popper's Ferry, and by that river westward to the line of Greenbrier county, West Virginia, with the exception of Big Stony Creek appointment."

W. S. BLACK, Chairman.

S. N. HALL, Sec.

Presented and laid on the table, under the rule, Thursday, May 9, 1878.

J. E. Evans, chairman of the Committee on Revisal, presented Report No. 3 of that committee, which was read and laid on the table, under the rule.

REPORT NO. III OF THE COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

The Committee on Revisal beg leave to present as Report No. 3:

That they have considered a memorial signed by C. W. Miller, asking that it be made the duty of the Quarterly Conference at the first session after each Annual Conference session, to make out an accurate list of the local preachers within its bounds, and, while the aid of the presiding elder, to assign to each of them a definite field of ministerial labor for the year; and respectfully recommend non-concurrence.

They have also had under careful consideration a resolution signed by P. A. Peterson and A. R. Winfield, asking that it may be provided in the Discipline that no member elect to the General Conference shall be admitted to a seat in that body if at the time of its session he is a member of an Annual Conference other than that which elected him, and respectfully recommend that this Conference do not concur.

Respectfully submitted,

J. E. EVANS, Chairman.

F. M. KENNEDY, Sec.

Presented and laid on the table for the present, Thursday, May 9, 1878.

MINORITY REPORT NO. III ON REVISAL.

The undersigned, a minority of the Committee on Revisal, being unable to agree with the majority in regard to a resolution referred to said committee, declaring that no person shall be admitted into the General Conference as the representative of an Annual Conference of which at the time of meeting of the General Conference, he is not a member, respectfully submit for adoption the following change of Discipline:

On page 33, chapter 2, section 1, after the word "Conference," in the last line of the first paragraph, add: "But no one shall be admitted to a seat in the General Conference who, at the time of holding said Conference, shall be a member of an Annual Conference other than the one by which he was elected."

P. A. PETERSON,
J. Y. MERRY,
M. H. NEELEY,
H. V. PHILPOTT,
J. W. COMPTON.

Presented and laid on the table for the present, Thursday, May 9, 1878.

REPORT NO. IV OF THE COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

The Committee on Revisal beg leave to present as their Report No. 4:

That they have had under consideration a memorial from the Neosho District Conference, Southwest Missouri Annual Conference, with reference to item one, of which they respectfully recommend that section 3, chapter 2, page 51 of the Discipline be amended by inserting after item four the following: "5. As to the manner in which the records of the Quarterly Conferences have been kept."

With reference to item two, of the same paper, making examination of Quarterly Conference journals part of the presiding elder's duty, they respectfully recommend non-concurrence.

Touching item three of said paper, they recommend the amendment of the answer to question 5, section 15, chapter 3, page 107 of the Discipline, by inserting as a second answer: "2. To send the records of the Quarterly Conference to the District Conference for examination by the first day of the session."

Your committee have also considered a series of resolutions from the Mississippi Annual Conference, relating to local preachers, with the following results: They recommend concurrence with the first resolution, and that answer 2 to question 1, section 11, chapter 3, page 92 of the Discipline, be amended by striking out all between the word "belongs," fifth line from the top, and the word "the," eighth line from the top, and insert the following: "Same course of study as that prescribed for candidates for admission on trial in the traveling connection," so that the whole paragraph shall read as follows: "No person shall be licensed to preach without the recommendation of the church of which he is a member or of the leaders' meeting of the charge to which he belongs; nor shall any one be licensed to preach without first being examined in the Quarterly Conference on the same course of study as that prescribed for candidates for admission on trial in the traveling connection; nor shall any license be valid unless signed by the president and secretary of the Conference."

With reference to the second resolution, proposing the transfer of licensing and recommending preachers to the traveling connection, and the recommendation of local preachers for deacon's and elder's orders from the Quarterly to the District Conference, we respectfully recommend non-concurrence.

With reference to the third resolution embodied in the same paper your committee agree, in the main, and recommend that the answer to question 2, section 11, chapter 3, page 93 of the Discipline be amended by inserting after the word "examination," in the second line from top of page, the words: "On a course of study to be prescribed by the Bishops, as a preparation for deacon's orders;" so that the whole paragraph shall read: "A local preacher shall be eligible to the office of a deacon after he has preached four years from the time he received a regular license, and has obtained a recommendation from the Quarterly Conference, on a proper examination on a course of study to be prescribed by the Bishops, as a preparation for deacon's orders, signed by the president and the secretary; and after his character has passed in examination before and he has obtained the approbation of the Annual Conference."

Your committee also recommend that the answer to question 3, sec. 11, chap. 3, page 93 of the Discipline be amended by striking out all from the word "examination," seventh line from bottom, to and inclusive of the word "secretary," fourth line from bottom, and inserting: "On a course of study to be prescribed by the Bishops, as a preparation for elder's orders; and the fact of passing an approved examination on this course shall be stated in the recommendation, which shall be signed by the president and the secretary of the Conference," so that the entire paragraph shall read: "A local deacon shall be eligible to the office of an elder after he has preached four years from the time he was ordained a deacon and has obtained a recommendation from the Quarterly Conference, on a proper examination on a course of study to be prescribed by the Bishops, as a preparation for elder's orders; and the fact of passing an approved examination on this course shall be stated in the recommendation, which shall be signed by the president and the secretary of the Conference. He shall present to the Annual Conference such recommendation, with a note certifying his belief in the doctrine and discipline of our church—the whole being examined by the Annual Conference; and, if approved, he may be ordained."

Your committee have considered a memorial from the Holston Conference embodying resolutions of like tenor with those from the Mississippi Conference, and recommend concurrence so far as they state the same propositions, and no farther.

They have also considered a memorial from the South Carolina Conference, and recommend non-concurrence in all points not covered by the action already recommended in this report.

They have also considered a memorial from the Memphis Annual Conference, and recommend non-concurrence so far as it advises the action contemplated in this report upon similar papers from the Mississippi, Holston and South Carolina Conferences.

Respectfully submitted

Presented and laid on the table under the rule, Thursday, May 9, 1878.

R. A. Young, chairman of the Committee on Finance, presented Report No. 2 of the committee.

T. M. Finney presented a minority report, and on his motion both were laid on the table for the present.

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Your committee have had under consideration the resolution of Hannibal District Conference within the bounds of the Missouri Conference, and other memorials and resolutions on the same subject, asking the passage of a law that shall be uniform in its action throughout all the churches, and that shall impose an obligation upon each member of every particular charge to contribute to the support of the ministry, and thereby settle the method of raising funds for the support of the preachers in the itinerancy.

And have directed me to report:

That by a large majority, the committee recommend non-concurrence in the matter of said resolutions, etc., as they are of the opinion that chap 9 secs 1, 2, 3 and 4, on page 155 of the Discipline, "On the support of preachers on circuits and stations," if properly carried into effect, contains all the disciplinary provisions on the subject which are necessary or judicious.

MINORITY REPORT NO. II OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE.

On the memorial of the Hannibal District Conference, referred to the Committee on Finance, requesting that a method of raising money for the support of the preachers on circuits and stations shall be more clearly defined and settled, and which shall be made uniform throughout all the churches, the undersigned, a minority of the committee, report concurrence with the memorial, and recommend changes in the Discipline in order thereto, as follows:

In chap 1 sec. F, item 3 page 155, second line from the bottom of page, substitute "may" for "shall," and add to the whole item the following words: "Unless otherwise ordered by the Church Conference, the stewards shall adopt the plan of assessment with consent, as provided in the item next following," so that the whole item shall read as follows:

"3. The stewards shall report to each church meeting the whole amount to be raised, and that part of it which each congregation is expected to pay. The Church Conference may adopt its own method of raising money. Unless otherwise ordered by the Church Conference, the stewards shall adopt the plan of assessment with consent, as provided in the item next following."

Report No. 3 from the same committee was presented, which was read on motion of A. H. Thomas was laid on the table for the present. (See report below.)

From the same committee Report No. 4, which was read, and on motion of W. O. Gray was adopted. (See report below.)

From the same committee Report No. 5, which was read, and on motion of W. G. Veal was adopted. (See report below.)

From the same committee Report No. 6, which was read, and on motion of N. T. Lupton was adopted. (See report below.)

From the same committee Report No. 7, which was read, and on motion of J. S. Grant was laid on the table for the present. Also a minority report.

From the same committee Report No. 8, which was read, and the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That so much of the will of the late J. P. Colvin containing bequests to the Methodist Episcopal Church South be referred severally to the Committees on Publishing Interests, Missions, Sunday Schools and Itinerancy.

J. D. VINCIL.

REPORT NO. III OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Your Committee on Finance have considered a resolution signed by A. P. Warfield and H. A. C. Walker, referred to them by this Conference, on the "support of presiding elders," and "on the mode of collecting presiding elders' salaries," proposing to amend chap. 9 sec. II, art. 2 of the Discipline, and have unanimously recommended a report of non-concurrence in said resolution.

REPORT NO. IV OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Your Finance Committee have carefully considered a resolution of the North Carolina Conference and a resolution signed by John A. Ellis and S. B. Watts, respecting the distribution of the Conference fund by the Joint Board of Finance of the several Conferences, and have instructed me to report that they recommend non-concurrence therewith, as they believe the Discipline upon the subject, and the action of the several Joint Boards of Finance do now, and can hereafter fully accomplish the ends desired to be attained.

REPORT NO. V OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Your committee have carefully considered a resolution, signed by J. B. McGehee and John A. Ellis, instructing the Committee on Finance to consider the propriety "of matturing some plan that will utilize the lay element in lifting the collections ordered in our Discipline," and thereby leave the ministry to give themselves wholly to the great work to which Christ has called them;" and are of the opinion that the lay element is tolerably well utilized when ever the collections ordered in our Discipline are lifted, and have instructed me to report that they consider no action in this behalf required, and that they recommend non-concurrence therewith.

REPORT NO. VI OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Your Finance Committee have had under consideration a resolution signed by G. W. Beard, W. S. Johnson and John L. Wheat, "that there be added to item 2, sec. 1, chap. 9 page 155, the following: "And the board of stewards shall, when there is a parsonage, embrace in their estimate for the support of the preacher the annual rent of the parsonage, which shall be credited quarterly to the charge, and at the end of the year shall be reported to the Annual Conference;" and have instructed a report that they recommend non-concurrence therewith:

REPORT NO. VII OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Your Finance Committee have considered a resolution, signed by J. B. McGehee, T. M. Meriwether, J. M. Matthews and R. W. Lovitt, respecting the too prevalent practice of raising money for church purposes by fairs, festivals, excursions, suppers, theatrical performances, etc., and have directed a report that the subject matter of said resolution has been fully met by the pastoral address of the Bishops and by the Discipline, and they therefore respectfully ask that they be discharged from further consideration of the same.

Presented and laid on the table, Thursday, May 9, 1878.

MINORITY REPORT NO. VII ON FINANCE.

A minority of your Committee on Finance being unable to agree with the report of the majority of said committee as regards the matters contained in said resolution, beg leave to submit the following:

1. No one can appreciate more highly than we do the salutary recommendations contained in the pastoral address of our revered Bishops. But we submit that the matters contained are in no wise, and can in no wise become, the law of the church except by legislative action thereon by this General Conference.

2. We are not aware of any part of our Discipline which speaks either depreciatingly or approvingly, with authority, on these subjects, or on kindred evils now affecting those important questions in the churches.

And in view of these facts we respectfully recommend the passage by the Conference of the following resolution:

Resolved, That in the opinion of this General Conference it is inexpedient and impolitic that money for church purposes should be raised by fairs, festivals, excursions, suppers, theatrical performances, drawings, lotteries, or by chance, in any manner whatsoever.

REPORT NO. VIII OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Your Finance Committee, to whom was referred a resolution of D. H. Connally and R. W. Thompson, making a change in chap. 9, sec. 5, paragraph 2, page 151 of the Discipline, fourth line from top of page, by inserting after the word "chairman" the word "treasurer," so that it shall hereafter read, "They shall elect their own chairman, 'treasurer' and secretary," etc., having duly considered the same, have directed me to report that they recommend that this Conference do concur therewith.

REPORT TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE IN REGARD TO THE COLVIN BEQUESTS.

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the M. E. Church South:

Dear Brethren—Mr. James T. Colvin, who died in Hamburg, Iowa, in 1874 made to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, for the several purposes named, the following bequests, as specified in the tenth clause of his will, which is as follows:

"I give and bequeath unto the agent of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, located at Nashville, Tenn., the several sums in this bequest named, their several uses to be controlled by said agent severally for the specific objects and charities hereinafter named and specified, to wit:

"The sum of $10,000 in cash for the use and benefit of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The sum of $5,000 for the use and benefit of the Sabbath School Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, now under the control of A. G. Haygood, and under the direction of the General Conference of said church. The sum of $15,000 in cash for the use of said Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the sum of $5,000 in cash for the use and benefit of the widows and orphans of the traveling preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church South who die in the traveling connection, said sum to be established a permanent fund for the purpose and object named, and never in any manner to be appropriated or expended, but said fund shall be invested in the most advantageous manner, and the interest and proceeds thereof to be appropriated for the use and benefit of said widows and orphans, under the direction of the General Conference of said church; and I hereby specially direct that all the aforesaid bequests to the said agent of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South shall be applied by said agent for the uses and benefits herein named, under the direction of the General Conference of said Methodist Episcopal Church South, and as they shall judge best calculated to promote the object of these bequests, as herein named."

The will further provides, in article 13, after the payment of his debts, funeral charges, expenses of administration, and the payment of all other bequests named as follows:

"I give and bequeath all the rest, residue and remainder of my personal estate and moneys to the agent of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in manner and form as set out in the tenth paragraph of this will, for the use and benefit of the widows and orphans therein named, to be added to and made a part of the permanent fund for their use and benefit, as therein provided."

I beg leave to submit the following statement:

The sum of $5,500 for the Missionary Society has been paid me by the administrator Mr. Silas Woodward, and turned over to the Board of Missions, for the use and benefit of the society.

The sum of $16,750 has been paid to the Publishing House and Sunday school department, and turned over to the house for the uses specified.

The sum of $5,500 has been paid for the benefit of the widows and orphans of traveling preachers and invested in the Publishing House.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. H. REDFORD, Agent.

The question on which the Conference adjourned on yesterday was taken up.

Mr. Rush—I desire to withdraw my motion, made just before adjournment yesterday.

Mr. Duncan (clerical, South Carolina Conference) submitted the resolutions proposed by Dr. Lee, as follows:

Resolved That the Committee on Credentials be instructed to consider and report:

1. Whether the offense alleged against L. D. Dameron was in itself a "gross immorality."

2. Whether any person can be legally tried and expelled from the church for an offense not "expressly forbidden in the word of God," and not in itself "sufficient to exclude a person from the kingdom of grace and glory."

3. Whether, since the one specification of the first charge, and the two specifications of the second charge, involve the same principles, and rest on the same facts, and all of the said specifications come within the provision of chap. 3, sec. 5 second answer to question 1, page 112 of the Discipline—whether the disciplinary requirements, for such cases of offense "made and provided," were carried out by either the accuser or the pastor of Logan D. Dameron.

Whether the confession and protest of the said Logan D. Dameron, that in the matter of the specifications he "did not intend to defame or injure the accused; that if he had done so, he was sorry for it, and that he was ready and willing to make any proper reparation," met all the demands of the law and the facts of the case, and leave him, the said Dameron, guiltless of the specifications, and in the quiet and undoubted possession and occupancy of all the rights and privileges of membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

L. M. LEE,
J. D. DUNCAN.

Mr. Foute (lay, Mississippi Conference)—I am satisfied the Conference is tired of this discussion. My object is to make a motion to withdraw the reference to the committee of yesterday, call up the minority report, move the previous question upon the whole question, and come squarely upon the subject; have the minority report, which is a substitute for the majority, voted upon, then the question is decided. Upon these I call the previous question.

The motion to reconsider was carried.

The time of this session was indefinitely extended. The vote was then taken on the adoption of the minority report, which favored the seating of Mr. Dameron. The yeas were counted and were found to be 125; the nays were taken and found to be 127; so the report was lost by two votes.

A verification of the vote was then called, but was not insisted upon.

The majority report of the Committee on Credentials was called up, and the previous question was called. The majority report declares Mr. Dameron not entitled to a seat, as he had not been a member of the church for six successive years, as the law requires.

The following are the yeas and nays on the report of the majority of the committee:

YEAS—Clerical: Wilson A. W., Martin, Rodgers, Whisner, Peterson, Edwards, Sledd, Reed, Whitehead, Blackwell, Yates, Sulpp, Duncan, Kennedy, Haygood, Potter, Boring, Evans, Adams, Cook, Allen, Y. P., Gray, Rucker, Crick, Beckwith, Hester, G. B., Harvey, Allen, Harland, Key, Wheeler, Swain, H. C., Taylor, J. E., Giddings, Winch, Henry, Davenport, McBride—133.

The result of this vote is to leave Mr. Dameron in the Conference with a de facto title and it will not probably be disturbed by any future action of the body.

Immediately after the vote Conference adjourned to six A. M. to-day, with considerable confusion.

NINTH DAY.

FRIDAY, May 10, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour.

Bishop Pierce in the chair.

Divine service was conducted by David Morton.

The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

The chair called for reports of committees.

S. Regester, chairman of the Committee on Episcopacy, presented Report No. 3 of that committee, which was read and adopted.

J. S. Martin, chairman of the Committee on Itinerancy, presented Report No. 3 of that committee, which was read and laid on the table, under the rule. (See report on sixth page.)

Also Report No. 4 of said committee, which was read and adopted. (See report on sixth page.)

O. P. Fitzgerald, chairman of the Committee on the Name of the Church, presented Reports Nos. 1 and 2 of said committee, which were read and adopted. (See reports on sixth page.)

The report of the commissioners on fraternity, appointed by the last General Conference, together with the official records of the separate sessions of the commissioners, and the report of the proceedings of the joint commission, was presented by T. M. Finney, and the report was read.

After some discussion as to the proper action to be taken, Bishop Paine stated that the action of the commission was a finality—the Conference has nothing to do but to spread the report on the journal.

The following resolution was offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That the report of our commissioners on formal fraternity be spread on the journal, and the documents presented therewith be deposited in the archives of the General Conference; and that the thanks of the Conference are due and are hereby tendered to the commissioners for the eminently satisfactory manner in which they discharged their onerous and delicate task.

R. N. PRICE.
H. F. JOHNSON.

The report is as follows:

Report of the Commissioners on Fraternity.

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the M. E. Church South:

Dear Brethren—The commissioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, authorized by a resolution of the General Conference, adopted May 24, 1874 and appointed in pursuance thereof by the College of Bishops at their annual meeting in May 1875, "to meet a similar commission, authorized by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church," "in order to remove all obstacles to formal fraternity between the two churches," "and to adjust all existing difficulties," have the honor to communicate to you official information of the result of their negotiations.

We herewith deliver to your body, as our report, the journal of our proceedings in separate session, and also the official records of the joint commission, which held its session in Congress Hall, Cape May city, N. J., August 17 to 23 1876, which contain the terms and details of our action.

The joint commission adopted an address to the two churches whose commissions it executed, communicating to them the results of its session, as having realized harmony of views on vital points and complete unanimity touching the essential principles of fraternization. For the purpose of this report we extract from the proceedings of the joint commission its conclusions in reference to the principal matters which claimed its united consideration, adopting the terms of statement contained in its official address.

At the beginning of our consultations one great question seemed to overshadow all others. It concerns the relation of the two churches to each other and to Episcopal Methodism.

We adopted, without a dissentient voice, the following.

DECLARATION AND BASIS OF FRATERNITY

Status of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and their Co-Ordinate Relation as Legitimate Branches of Episcopal Methodism.

Each of said churches is a legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism in the United States, having a common origin in the Methodist Episcopal Church organized in 1784; and since the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church South was consummated in 1845 by the voluntary exercise of the right of the Southern Annual Conferences, ministers and members to adhere to that communion. It has been an evangelical church, rested on scriptural foundations, and her ministers and members, with those of the Methodist Episcopal Church, have constituted one Methodist family, though in distinct ecclesiastical connections.

It was next incumbent on us to consider the questions concerning conflicting claims to church property, and some special cases that could not conveniently be referred to the operation of a general rule.

There were two principal questions to be considered with regard to the church property in dispute between local societies of the two churches:

1. As to the legal ownership of said property.

2. As to whether it will consist with strict equity, or promote Christian harmony or the cause of religion, to dispossess those societies now using church property which was originally intended for their use and occupancy, and of which they have acquired possession, though they may have lost legal title to it by their transfer from the one church to the other.

We have considered the pieces in all cases that have been brought to our notice. These arose in the following States: Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Tennessee, Louisiana, North Carolina and South Carolina. In respect of some of these cases we have given particular directions; but for all other cases the joint commission unanimously adopted the following:

RULES FOR THE ADJUSTMENT OF ADVERSE CLAIMS TO CHURCH PROPERTY.

Rule 1.—In cases not adjudicated by the joint commission, any society of either church, constituted according to its Discipline, now occupying the church property, shall remain in possession thereof; provided that where there is now, in the same place, a society of more members attached to the other church, and which has hitherto claimed the use of the property, the latter shall be entitled to possession.

Rule 2.—Forasmuch as we have no power to annul decisions respecting church property made by the State courts, the joint commission ordain in respect thereof:

1. In cases in which such a decision has been made, or in which there exists an agreement, the same shall be carried out in good faith.

2. In communities where there are two societies, one belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church and the other to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, which have adversely claimed the church property, it is recommended that, without delay, they amicably compose their differences, irrespective of the strict legal title, and settle the same according to Christian principles, the equities of the particular case, and, so far as practicable, according to the principle of the foregoing rule.

But if such settlement cannot be speedily made, then the question shall be referred for equitable decision to three arbitrators, one to be chosen by each claimant from their respective societies, and the two thus chosen shall select a third person not connected with either of said churches; and the decision of any two of them shall be final.

3. In communities in which there is but one society, rule 1 shall be faithfully observed in the interests of peace and fraternity.

Rule 3.—Whenever necessary to carry the foregoing rules into effect, the legal title to the church property shall be accordingly transferred.

Rule 4.—These rules shall take effect immediately.

We also deliver to your body a copy of "Formal Fraternity," published by the order and under the supervision of the joint commission, and containing the proceedings concerning formal fraternity conducted between the two churches since May, 1869.

The presentation of this report is an impressive and solemn reminder of the absence, of the honored and lamented chairman of your commission, the Rev. Edward H. Myers, D. D., whom we had fondly expected to be our representative in the present transaction. His colleagues desire to bear testimony to the wisdom that selected and designated him for this important position, the delicate and difficult responsibilities of which he discharged with fidelity and distinguished ability, and in the spirit of our holy religion. Scarcely had he fulfilled this trust when, hastening to his pastoral charge for service and sacrifice, then a post of danger as well as duty, he was summoned by the Head of the church to higher honors and to his everlasting recompense. The deep shadow thus cast upon the present hour, to which it looked with eager anticipation, is intensified by the luster both of character and achievement which crowned the end of his days.

The favorable reception of the work of the commission was to the late chairman a source of great satisfaction, and we cannot withhold the expression of our own that its action has received the approval of the church, indicated by the voice of church periodicals and the Annual Conferences, and recently in the gratifying terms of the address of our chief pastors to this body. And we should be untrue to our profound convictions did we fail distinctly and formally to recognize the divine blessing, which, to a favorable conclusion, helped our conscientious efforts.

And now, praying the God of peace to give to these two reconciled branches of Episcopal Methodism an abiding blessing, "the wisdom that is from above," which "is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy," and the fullest realization that "the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace," we complete the duties of the high trust committed to us.

ROBERT K. HARGROVE,
THOMAS M. FINNEY,
DAVID CLOPTON,
ROBERT B. VANCE,
Commissioners.

Conference then adjourned with the doxology and benediction by the Bishop.

TENTH DAY.

SATURDAY, May 11, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour, Bishop Kavanaugh in the chair. Divine service was conducted by J. B. West.

The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

Bishop Wightman took the chair.

The chair called for reports of standing committees.

S. Regester, chairman of the Committee on Episcopacy, presented Report No. 4 of that committee, which was read and adopted.

J. S. Martin, chairman of the Committee on Itinerancy, presented Report No. 5 of that committee, which was read and adopted. (See report on sixth page.)

W. S. Black, chairman of the Committee on Boundaries, presented Report No. 2 of that committee, which was read and laid on the table under the rule. (See report on sixth page.)

D. C. Kelley, chairman of the Committee on Missions, presented Reports Nos. 2 and 3 of that committee, which were read and adopted. (See reports on sixth page.)

W. F. Harrison, chairman of the Committee on Education, presented Report No. 1 of that committee, which was read, and on motion of B. McGehee was laid on the table for the present. (See report on sixth page.)

Also Report No. 2 of that committee, which was read, and lies on the table under the rule. (See report on sixth page.)

R. A. Young, chairman of the Committee on Finance, presented Report No. 9 of that committee, which was read and adopted.

R. A. Young, chairman of the Committee on Finance, presented Report No. 11 of that committee.

W. O. Gray moved the previous question. The call was sustained. Report No. 11 was adopted. (See report.)

T. P. Ellis, from the Committee on Temperance, presented Report No. 1 of the committee, which was read and adopted. (See report.)

Lovick Pierce stated that he had some papers to offer to the Conference, but would postpone their presentation to next week. He made some judicious and characteristic remarks, which were listened to with profound attention by the Conference.

Dr. Lovick Pierce said that he had some resolutions that he intended proposing at an earlier day, but would present at a future time, and hoped they would be adopted; and continuing, while the utmost attention was given, he said: I could not speak clear enough to satisfy myself, especially in this large room, for I am worse to day than at that time, but I hope this is only casual, owing to the atmosphere of yesterday and to day.

I thank you for all the honors you have ever offered me and I am glad I have lived long enough to know the true meaning of the words; that good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor than choice silver and gold.

As to preaching to you "whenever it would be pleasant to me," it is an honor to have the request; but I know these honors are conferred more on account of what I have been than on account of what I am now. But what is left of me is as good as ever. (Applause.)

The object of my speaking now to give notice that I desire to offer some resolutions amending the Discipline, and at that time to give some views in reference to the subject of receiving members into the church.

I do not desire the resolutions to go to the Committee on Revisal, however much I respect them. I cannot now appear before them.

There are several things connected with that subject of exceeding interest to the church; and I am not willing to pass away without giving, in the presence of the Conference, my reasons for wishing these changes to be made.

This is the last day for the public call for resolutions, though I do not suppose the privilege to present such papers will be ended thereby. I hope you will allow me, next week, to put in these resolutions, and give my reasons on them, for I believe it is of importance to Southern Methodism to insert them in the Discipline.

W. A. McCarty and R. A. Hardaway offered a resolution on reporting collections for the Bible House. Referred to the Committee on the Bible Cause.

J. D. Giddings, Jr. C. C. Winch and I. G. John offered a resolution on providing a standing judiciary committee. Referred to the Committee on Revisal.

The following resolution was then offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That on and after Monday next the first business of the Conference, after the reading and correction of the journal, shall be the consideration of the reports of standing committees, which have been laid on the table under the rules, in the order in which they have been presented.

W. L. NUGENT,
E. G. ANDREWS,
S. B. WATTS.

On motion of W. L. Nugent the reports were ordered to be now taken up, and Report No. 2 on Revisal was taken up by items.

W. H. Veal moved to adopt item one.

W. H. N. Magruder moved to amend by inserting "children or adults" in place of "persons."

W. Mooney moved to lay this amendment on the table. The motion prevailed.

W. H. Potter moved to strike out the word "person" and insert "children or adults or both."

On motion of J. W. Rodman this motion was laid on the table.

J. M. Richards moved the previous question. The call was sustained, and item one was then adopted.

Item two was then taken up, and after considerable discussion was laid on the table for the present.

Item three was then taken up, and H. E. Johnson moved its adoption. Item three was then adopted.

Item four was taken up, and on motion of W. W. Garland was adopted.

On motion of S. N. Hall the Conference adjourned with the doxology and benediction by the Bishop.

ELEVENTH DAY.

MONDAY, May 13, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour.

Bishop Wightman in the chair.

Divine service was conducted by E. E. Wiley.

The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

Bishop Doggett took the chair.

W. H. Foster, reserve delegate from the Louisiana Conference, in place of J. L. Scales, and J. H. Richey, lay delegate from the Northwest Texas Conference, appeared and took their seats.

N. T. Lupton and B. Craven offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That after Saturday, May 18, the General Conference hold afternoon sessions from three to six o'clock.

The resolution was adopted.

The order of the day was called.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Revisal, which was presented May 7, and adopted except the second item, was taken up. This item was read and adopted.

Report No. 1 of the Committee on Boundaries was called up and read.

N. H. Lee moved to adopt item one, favoring the formation of the Montana Conference.

J. H. Mahon moved the previous question. The call was sustained.

The question was put on item one and it was adopted.

Items two and three were read and adopted.

The report was then adopted as a whole.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Boundaries was taken up and read.

Item one was read and adopted.

Item two was read.

Mr. Alexander (clerical, Texas Conference) moved to strike out "not," and proceeded to say that the committee was eight to eight, with several absentees. He deferred the matter to this Conference, with the hope that they would be more magnanimous to the "old Texas Conference," organized in 1840, than the Northwest Texas Conference. The Texas Conference had asked for a little more room from the Northwest Texas, and though the treatment of the commissioner was very cordial, they reported not a foot of territory to spare. The fate of old people breaking up the homestead and living among their children was upon the "old Texas Conference." They wished only four counties to make the old Conference more efficient, and were willing to notch out the unanimity which was claimed by the other Conference, and they consented to allow the Northwest Conference to "enjoy the pride of having it in their boundaries," though all had a claim upon it.

He described the condition of things in the old Texas Conference after the war, when "men looked in each other's faces and wept at the desolation."

"Old Cany," once the richest county the eye ever saw, supporting missions to the negroes, and helping others, was now a "young Africa," the plantations and sugar houses in ruins, and supplied with a missionary itself.

A great tide of Germans and Bohemians were filling the center of the Conference, and in some places hardly a corporal's guard of native Americans could be found.

The Conference had but four districts—one, the Galveston, with only seven appointments, the Columbus with but eight, and so on, with a membership of seven thousand; while the Northwest had nine districts and twenty-one thousand members, and was not willing to help the old mother Conference.

They are adding district to district, while "we ask only a little slip not broader than my thumb." We are weak—they are strong—and we appeal to this body to do us justice.

He said the Northwest Conference delegation "had nearly an armful of petitions from the four counties not to be transferred," but everybody knew what they were, and how such petitions were gotten up. They were told the "Texas Conference preachers were not like ours."

Before the men who oppose this had ever made a track in Texas, I traveled all that scope of country for seven years; and the people always received me kindly, and the preachers the Bishop sent them; and if this little territory is given to us I will be responsible that our preachers will be well received.

The preachers and people in the Northwest Conference want it divided. Why not give the Texas Conference a small part?

I beg you to look at this matter impartially, for the promotion of Methodism, to give efficacy to our old Conference. Let us have a chance for our lives.

Mr. Stanford said the Northwest had nine districts, four of them missionary districts. The five had to support the four. It was asked to take away four counties from the supporting districts.

The Texas Conference asks for "room." They now have more room than men, and if they got the counties without the preachers and the preachers would not transfer—they would be worse off than ever.

He argued that the giving away the counties would greatly hurt them in railroad facilities.

As to the division of the Conference, a motion was made by an old superannuate. Few men wished a division.

On motion of A. S. Andrews the time was extended to allow Bro. Stanford to finish his speech.

He showed that the cities and high salaries were now in the Texas Conference, and also valuable church property.

The Northwest Conference had a rich soil and rich spirit. The members were itinerant. It is not a local, stereotyped, but a working Conference.

At the close, T. M. Meriwether moved the previous question. It was not sustained.

W. G. Veal spoke in opposition to the amendment.

W. G. Veal (clerical, Northwest Texas Conference) said there was no vote on division. The motion was withdrawn.

He urged that the petitions of the people and the rights of the preachers should be considered. The pastors would not transfer. The Texas Conference is in need of preachers, and with additional territory they will need more preachers.

Mr. Giddings (lay) said the Northwest Texas had more than they wanted, while the Texas was in narrow bounds, and urged the giving of the counties asked.

Mr. Conner said the Texas Conference could get plenty of territory in the West, but they wanted the best from the Northwest Conference.

The amendment did not prevail.

Item two was then adopted.

The remainder of the report having been recommitted on Saturday, May 11, still lies on the table.

TWELFTH DAY.

TUESDAY, May 14, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour.

Bishop Doggett in the chair.

Divine service was conducted by C. W. Miller.

The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

Bishop McTyeire took the chair, and called for reports of standing committees.

S. Regester, chairman of the Committee on Episcopacy, presented Report No. 5 of that committee, and it was read and adopted.

D. C. Kelley, chairman of the Committee on Missions, presented Report No. 4 of that committee, which was read and laid on the table, under the rule.

J. E. Evans, chairman of the Committee on Revisal, presented Reports Nos. 6 and 7, which were read and laid on the table, under the rule.

C. K. Marshall, chairman of the Committee on Sunday Schools, presented Report No. 1 of that committee, which was read and laid on the table, under the rule.

Also Report No. 2 of that committee, which was read and acted upon by items. (See reports of committees.)

Item one was taken up and read.

On item No. 1 W. H. Potter (clerical, North Georgia Conference) said he supposed the committee thought the enrollment of baptized children already provided for in the Discipline. He was unwilling, however, that the report should go forth as rejecting a resolution to enroll baptized children. He wanted the reasons of the committee's action stated.

H. P. Walker (lay, Louisville, Ky.) opposed the adoption of the item. He contended that the present law was defective, and the proposed amendment was just what is wanted. He hoped the Conference would strike out "now" in the adverse report. The Discipline may allow the enrollment of baptized children, but it has no requirement that they shall be reported to the Annual Conferences.

The resolution on which item one is reported adversely was read for information.

R. Abbey (clerical, Mississippi Conference) explained that the resolution he had offered did not propose to enroll all baptized children on the records of the church. It merely proposed to enroll a certain class of baptized children—those who gave evidence of a knowledge of their religious responsibilities, and their determination to fulfill them in their lives, and that they had been taught to believe in the church from earliest consciousness of such matters. He thought the present law was deficient in some very important particulars, and the resolution proposed to remedy these.

S. W. Moore (clerical, Memphis Conference) spoke in favor of the report on item one. He said the law is now good enough if it is executed.

J. B. McGehee (clerical, South Georgia Conference) favored the report with amendment. He said there was an opinion that the church was weakening on infant baptism. He wished to destroy any such impression. He moved to amend by inserting the words, "In view of the ample provision already made in our Discipline," before the clause recommending non-concurrence in the resolution.

H. J. Adams moved as a substitute for the amendment the resolution of H. P. Walker and J. W. Fitch.

On motion of N. H. D. Wilson the substitute was laid on the table.

J. J. Davis called for the previous question. The call was sustained, the question was put, and the amendment was adopted.

Report No. 2 on Sunday Schools was then adopted as a whole. (See report.)

The order of the day was then called up, being Report No. 3 on Revisal.

Mr. Mahon resumed the floor, and continued his remarks in favor of disagreeing with the adverse report of the Committee on Revisal on the resolution offered by C. W. Miller, clerical, Kentucky Conference. He said he did not think the present provisions of the Discipline were sufficient; and though the change proposed is slight, it accomplishes the amendment which many desire. The resolution makes local preachers responsible rather to the Quarterly Conference than to the preacher in charge. It is best that the Quarterly Conference should give direction to his labors. At present there are defects in the manner in which local preachers are utilized. The proposed change will bring about a better relation between pastors and local preachers, and make the labors of the latter more useful and more pleasant. We must acknowledge that the law as it now stands is inoperative, whatever it may have been once. We are not giving that attention to this ministerial talent that it deserves. When properly utilized it will be a great aid in the pastoral work.

E. Hamil (lay, Baltimore Conference) addressed the Conference on the proposed amendment to the Discipline. He said he had been a Methodist for forty years, and had taken a deep interest in all its offices. As a local preacher he had always sustained cordial and pleasant relations with all the authorities of the church. The ingenious argument of Mr. Mahon did not affect the matter, as he looked at it. He hoped the Conference would not change the present law. The local preachers have all the rights they want. They have some which were conferred without being asked for. The local preachers are content, and ask no further privileges than those they enjoy.

J. Johnson (lay, North Georgia Conference) said he agreed with the last speaker. He prayed the Conference to let well enough alone; leave the control of this matter where it now is—in the hands of the pastor. The pastors best know the wants of the church, and they can best manage the matter. The Quarterly Conference is not competent to put local preachers to their best use. He added his hearty approval to Andrew Hamil's remarks, and hoped the Discipline would not be changed.

J. F. Medley (clerical, West Virginia Conference) said some local preachers would work better if their work was laid off for them, and the best place to get information is in the Quarterly Conference. He favored advance and improvement when possible. He had a very high regard for local preachers, and said they would do efficient work if they were allowed to do so.

A. S. Andrews (clerical, Alabama Conference) spoke in favor of non-concurrence in the adverse report. He stressed the power of local preachers, and said they could be made much more efficient by a system allotting to each a particular and specific work by the Quarterly Conferences. There is a want of activity among the local preachers. The proposed amendment would render them more active and efficient.

J. E. Edwards (clerical, Virginia Conference) said that the law had better be let alone. The local preachers do voluntary service only, and the Quarterly Conference, by appointing them to specific work, might produce friction. The law works very well now.

S. Rogers (clerical, Baltimore Conference) opposed any change in the present law. He said there was no desire in his Conference for any change in the law. He hoped the law would be allowed to remain as it is.

J. A. Ellis (clerical, Mississippi Conference) called attention to a clerical error in the report.

He also said the Conference should pause before adopting the report.

He said the report was too particular in the requirements of applicants for license as local preachers.

W. G. Veal (clerical, Northwest Texas Conference) opposed the report, and said it connected with a later recommendation of the committee's report.

D. P. Fitzgerald (clerical, Pacific Conference) said the present provisions were too vague. The proposed amendment gives a regular course of study, and would remedy the evil.

Bishop McTyeire called the Conference and the audience to order.

J. E. Evans (clerical, North Georgia Conference) said there was no clerical error in the report, and read from the Discipline the words proposed to be stricken out. He read the whole paragraph as it would stand if the proposed amendment was adopted.

A. W. Wilson (clerical, Baltimore Conference) said he saw no need for the particular examination of local preachers which the committee favored.

W. W. Bennett (clerical, Virginia Conference) said already the Discipline required a very full examination of applicants for local preacher's license. It is about the same as that required of applicants for the itinerancy. The requirements now in the Discipline are ample to guard the door of the church.

F. M. Kennedy (clerical, South Carolina Conference) said the advantage of the amendment would be to specify the requirements of the candidate. At present the law is vague, and the candidate does not know upon what to prepare himself.

Mr. Spencer (clerical, Missouri Conference) said the committee was not unanimous in the report, and a large majority would be glad if the report was rejected.

J. O. A. Clark (clerical, South Georgia Conference) read the various points in the Discipline bearing upon the question, and hoped the motion to adopt would prevail.

J. W. Rush (clerical, Alabama Conference) said the question was not merely one of administration. The presiding elder of himself cannot license a man. That must be done by the Quarterly Conference. Under the present style of examination very incompetent and woefully ignorant men are often admitted.

R. H. Mahon, who was entitled to the floor, spoke against its adoption.

S. Rodgers moved the previous question. The call was sustained, the question was put, and item one was adopted.

Item two was read and adopted.

The report was then adopted as a whole. (See report.)

Report No. 4 of the Committee on Revisal was taken up and items one and two were adopted without debate.

Item three was read, when H. P. Walker (clerical, Louisville Conference) moved to strike out "District Conference," and spoke in favor of the proposed amendments. He said the address of the Bishops conveyed some suggestions which his amendment would fully carry out. The District Conference is no place to send these records.

J. E. Edwards (clerical, Virginia Conference) opposed the report, and said the proposed work could not properly be done by the District Conferences. The District Conferences should not be so encumbered.

A. R. Winfield (clerical, Little Rock Conference) said the same question had been agitated by the last General Conference.

A delegate—I call the previous question.

Dr. Winfield—I am the previous question myself now. (Laughter.)

The speaker continued to give his reasons why the District Conference should have the powers asked for. It needs new business. It now has too little to do. This action would dignify the District Conferences. This is a great question, and the report of the committee should be adopted.

W. M. Rush (clerical, Missouri Conference) said the General Conference should think what it was about to do. The District Conferences should be separated from all legislative or judiciary proceedings. They have no business with these records.

S. Black (clerical, Western Virginia Conference) said Father Wesley did not suppose, when he organized class meetings, that he would be the founder of one of the greatest churches in the known world. On this account we are to consider the church as vastly great. And so we are to cramp the District Conferences merely because they are now greater than they were when we organized them. He wished to state a few facts:

It seemed as if the "D. D.'s" were opposed to any change in the matter of District Conferences. Some of the old brethren would remember the old-time District Conferences. Bro. Kavanaugh will remember them—Father Pierce would remember them. They were cramped and they died, and their funeral sermons were never preached. I fear you will kill our District Conferences if you cramp them, and they may never have a decent burial. (Laughter.)

On motion of A. R. Winfield the motion to amend was laid on the table.

P. A. Peterson moved the previous question. The call was sustained, the question was put, and item three was and adopted—113 for and 121 against.

Item four was read, and after some discussion Thomas Branch moved the previous question. The call was sustained, the question was put, and the item was not adopted—112 for and 120 against.

On motion of J. E. Evans the session was extended to allow E. E. Wiley, chairman of the Committee on Introductions, to present a report, as follows:

Resolved, That Thursday next, at ten o'clock A. M., be fixed as the time for receiving and hearing the fraternal messengers from the Methodist Church, in the main auditorium-room of this church.

C. K. MARSHALL,
J. E. EVANS,
J. E. EDWARDS,
T. L. MELLES,
E. E. WILEY,
Of the Committee on Introductions.

W. W. Duncan moved to strike out the last clause. The motion prevailed.

The report as amended was adopted.

Conference adjourned with the doxology and benediction by the Bishop.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

REPORT NO. IV OF THE COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS.

Your committee having carefully considered the memorials referred to them in regard to women's missionary organizations, beg leave to submit the following report, to be inserted as section 2 in the present chapter on Support of Missions in the Discipline. To give the freest scope to these spontaneous offerings of our women, the constitution has been made to embrace the fewest possible provisions, leaving to the Executive Association provided therein all the details of the work.

CHAPTER X.

Section 2. In view of the fact that in most heathen countries women are only accessible to teachers of their own sex, the women of the Methodist Episcopal Church South are hereby authorized to organize special missionary agencies under the following

CONSTITUTION.

Article 1. This society shall be called "The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church South."

Art. 2. The object of this society shall be to enlist and unite the efforts of women in the work of sending the gospel to women in heathen lands, through the agency of female missionaries, teachers and Bible readers.

Art. 3. The operations of this society shall be conducted in connection with the Board of Missions, and subject to its advice and approval. All appropriations shall be made through the treasurer of the board to missions under the charge of the board, for the support of female missionaries, teachers and Bible readers employed under their sanction; nor shall any of the funds be devoted to other purposes without the consent of the Executive Association hereinafter provided for.

Art. 4. This society shall be organized by the appointment of a General Executive Association and Conference societies; said General Executive Association to be constituted by appointment of the Bishops and missionary secretaries, in the first instance, and thereafter as the by-laws and regulations to be adopted by the association shall provide; and Conference societies to be constituted in accordance with the provisions of such by-laws and regulations.

Art. 5. The funds of the society shall in all cases be derived from private efforts, and in no case from public collections during regular church service.

D. C. KELLEY, Chairman.

Presented and laid on the table, under the rule, Tuesday, May 14, 1878.

REPORT NO. VI OF THE COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

The Committee on Revisal beg leave to present as their Report No. 8:

That they have patiently and thoroughly examined sundry papers on the subject of church trials, referred to them, and without specifically mentioning their concurrence or non-concurrence with the suggestions of the several memorials, petitions and resolutions had under consideration, they respectfully recommend, as the result of their deliberations, the following changes in the Book of Discipline, to wit:

1. Strike out all of answer 1 question 2 section 1 chapter 5, page 135, of the Discipline, and insert in place thereof the following:

"2. When a preacher is under report of immorality, in the absence of a bill of charges signed by a member of our church, the preacher in charge shall appoint a committee of three members of the church—local preachers, if they can be had—to investigate the report; and if they judge a trial necessary, they shall see that a bill of charges and specifications be drawn in proper form; and shall select a member of the church to prosecute the case before the ensuing Quarterly Conference; Provided, A copy of the charges and specifications be delivered to the accused a sufficient length of time before the trial to enable him to make all necessary preparations for his defense."

2. On page 130 of the Discipline, so change second paragraph of answer 1, question 1, section 5, chapter 6 that it shall read:

"When a member of the church is under report of immorality, in the absence of a bill of charges, signed by a member of our church, the preacher in charge shall appoint a committee of three discreet members, who shall investigate the report, and if they judge a trial necessary they shall prepare a bill of charges and specifications, and appoint a member of the church to prosecute the case."

3. Substitute last paragraph of answer 1, of same question, on page 112, with the following:

"If, after sufficient notice, the accused evade trial by absenting himself, let the trial proceed as though he was present. Witnesses from without shall not be rejected."

4. Amend answer 2 to question 1, section 5, chapter 6, page 113, by striking out the words "proper humiliation," and inserting, "promise of amendment," so that the sentence shall read: "And if there be an acknowledgment of the fault and promise of amendment, the case may be borne with." Then strike out all of the same answer, from the words "borne with," and insert the following: "Otherwise the preacher must appoint two or three faithful friends, who shall labor to bring the offender to proper repentance; but if he will not hear these, and there be no sign of amendment, the offender must be dealt with as in case of immorality."

5. On page 113 from last clause of third answer, strike out the words, "expelled from the church," and insert in their place, "dealt with as in case of immorality," so that it shall read: "And if he persist in such pernicious practices he shall be dealt with as in case of immorality."

6. On page 114, from last clause of answer 2, question 2, same chapter, strike out "excluded from the church," and insert instead "dealt with as in case of immorality;" so that the clause shall read: "And any person refusing to abide by such judgment shall be dealt with as in case of immorality."

7. From eighth line of answer 3, question 2, same chapter, page 115, strike out the word "expelled," and insert instead, "dealt with as in case of immorality," so that the clause shall read: "He shall be dealt with as in case of immorality, unless the case be of such a nature as to require and justify a process at law."

8. From first part of next paragraph of same answer, on same page, strike out all of the word "signify," and insert the following: "In all cases of suspension or expulsion the accused shall have the right of appeal to the ensuing Quarterly Conference;" so that it shall read thus: "In all cases of suspension or expulsion the accused shall have the right to appeal to the ensuing Quarterly Conference; Provided, He signify to the pastor his intention to appeal, at the time of his condemnation, or at any time thereafter when informed thereof."

Respectfully submitted,

J. E. EVANS, Chairman.
F. M. KENNEDY, Sec.

Presented and read, and laid on the table, under the rule, May 14, 1878.

REPORT NO. VII OF THE COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

The Committee on Revisal beg leave to report that they have had under consideration that clause of the Bishops' address relating to popular amusements, in connection with a resolution, signed by J. B. McGehee and N. W. Dozier, asking that a prominent place in our Book of Discipline be given to the specific rule on dancing, theater-going, etc.; and a resolution on the same subject, signed by A. T. Winsor and J. F. Rucker; with the subject-matter of which they recommend concurrence by amending answer 2, section 5, chapter 6, page 112 of the Discipline so as to read: "But in case of neglect of duties of any kind, improper conduct such as dancing, attending or encouraging dancing parties or dancing schools, attending theaters, circuses and horse-races, card playing, or any other amusement which cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus."

Respectfully submitted,

J. E. EVANS, Chairman.
F. M. KENNEDY, Sec.

Presented and laid on the table, May 14, 1878.

REPORT NO. 1 OF THE COMMITTEE ON SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Your committee have considered several memorials and resolutions submitted for their examination, and report their concurrence in and recommend the adoption of the following:

1. The memorial from the Kentucky Conference on the annual election of Sunday school superintendents by the Quarterly Conferences, signed by H. P. Walker and S. N. Hall, to add, after the words Sunday schools, on page 91, chapter 2, section 1, first line at top of the page, the following words: "At the fourth Quarterly Conference of each year." The entire answer No. 2 to question 1 will then read thus: "To superintend the interests of Sunday schools and the instruction of children; and to elect superintendents of Sunday schools at the fourth Quarterly Conference of each year, on nomination of the preacher in charge."

2. Also the following resolution, signed by E. A. Yates and W. H. N. Magruder:

Resolved, That our Sunday school secretary be and he is hereby instructed to embrace in the present system, known as the "International Lessons," so much of our catechisms as will, in his judgment, furnish proper instruction upon the distinctive doctrines and discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

3. Also the resolution of J. O. A. Clark and J. W. Hinton, proposing an addition to the caption of chapter 1 section 2, page 113, so that the entire caption shall read thus:

"Of the Children of the Church.

Things especially to be noticed in the written report of the preacher in charge to the Quarterly Conference on the pastoral instruction of children."

4. Also the resolution signed by P. P. Ellis and T. M. Cobb, on developing a greater missionary spirit among the Sunday school pupils, and that the following words be inserted on page 122, as the sixth answer to the first question of chapter 5 section 5, which will then read:

"Let every Sunday school, so far as practicable, be organized into a Missionary Society, auxiliary to the Annual Conference Missionary Society."

Respectfully submitted.

C. K. MARSHALL, Chairman.
P. GALLAGHER, Sec.

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Your committee, after the most patient and careful investigation of numerous resolutions and proposed amendments sent to them, beg leave, in view of the existing provisions of the Discipline in relation to these matters, to report their non-concurrence in the following:

1. On enrolling baptized children as members of the church, etc., signed by R. Abbey and W. H. Watkins.

2. Also one on catechisms for and enrollment of baptized children, signed by H. P. Walker and J. W. Fitch.

3. On enlarging the Sunday School Manual, signed by T. J. Magruder and P. P. Ellis.

4. On power in the pastor to remove a Sunday school superintendent, signed by A. T. Winsor and P. P. Ellis.

5. On more urgent inquiries as to the diligence of pastors in Sunday school work, signed by J. B. McGehee and J. D. Giddings.

6. On encouraging Sunday schools to support missionaries, signed by P. P. Ellis and T. M. Cobb.

Editorial Notes from Atlanta.

Until last week we had not seen Atlanta since more than twenty years ago. It was nearly burned up during the war, and from the ashes has arisen a new and beautiful city, now claiming more than thirty thousand inhabitants. The business part is handsomely built, and a thriving business is being conducted. The hotels are large, and seem to be kept in pretty good style, though not to be compared with our St. Charles. The residences are generally constructed with architectural taste, with grounds neatly laid out, and surrounded with flowers and shrubbery. There are not a few homes of palatial dimensions and elegance. The streets are not straight, but they are well set with shade-trees, and the undulating surface gives to them a peculiar beauty. The city seems to be on a ridge, and surrounded by hills and mountains. From our temporary home, looking to the east, we have a view of the famous Stone Mountain, eighteen miles away, which rises like a dome above the intervening heights. Then, turning to the west, we have in sight the Kenesaw Mountain, noted in the annals of the war as the scene of a bloody battle.

We are struck with the number and beauty of the churches, and they have been well filled since the General Conference met. Better still, we are told that they are always well filled. They are a church-going people here, and many of the churches are of imposing architecture, and elegant within. We have thus far seen the inside of only two—the First Methodist and Trinity, both spacious and well finished. On Sunday last we heard Bishop Kavanaugh. He is as strong and eloquent as ever, and shows little sign of the advancing years.

Thus far but little important legislation has been accomplished. The temper of the body is very conservative, and the committees are generally reporting non-concurrence on the multitudinous memorials and petitions referred to them. The publishing interests are still in the hands of the committee, and no report has yet been submitted to the Conference. This matter is the most serious and important and difficult of any that will engage the attention of the Conference. At this time we can scarcely conjecture what will be done.

On Thursday, May 16, the fraternal representatives from the Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. Dr. Foss and Hon. William Cumback, were received and heard. The address of Dr. Foss was very fine indeed, and in every way fitting and worthy of the occasion. Mr. Cumback spoke well and strongly, and his speech was listened to with pleasure and interest. Both representatives alluded to the subject of organic union, but on such terms that we might take it as a matter of pleasantry rather than of serious conviction, if so inclined. Bishop Paine was in the chair, and responded at some length and in appropriate terms. The venerable Dr. Lovick Pierce also made some remarks in his happiest vein. Then the doxology, "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow," was sung, and Conference adjourned. The speakers were applauded, they were warmly and courteously greeted, and the entire occasion was most gratifying. Everything was in due measure, and nothing in excess. We think in this respect the Atlanta Conference stands in favorable contrast with that in Louisville four years ago. The results of the Cape May commission were emphasized by Bishop Paine as a finality, by which both churches are bound for all future time.

The Committee on Episcopacy has reported, recommending that no Bishops be elected at this Conference. The consideration of the report is to come up this (Friday) morning, the seventeenth, and the chances are that it will be adopted. It is thought by many, and by a majority of the committee, that the present number of Bishops is sufficient provided the meetings of the Conferences be more distributed through the year, and the Bishops be released in some degree from attending District Conferences. The question of support has also considerable influence in the present embarrassed state of the country and of the church. Beyond these reasons is the feeling that so much is involved in the office, the risks in strengthening the episcopacy are so considerable, that an election, to be justified, must be called for by an imperious necessity. As we mail this communication the matter has not been decided.

Dr. Lovick Pierce is looking younger and is in much better health than when we last saw him at Louisville, four years ago. We see no reason why he should not live to see his one hundredth birthday. He is erect in his carriage, tolerably firm in his step, and the remains of his fine voice still serve him admirably. Bishop Pierce is thin and worn, but still in working condition. The Bishop presides admirably, his utterance is strong and clear, and his mind seems to be possessed of pristine vigor.

Some are talking of adjournment by the twenty fourth. It cannot be sooner, and it may be delayed some days later. Much depends on the range of discussion on two or three questions. If the majority become restless they will use "the previous question" without stint, and compel rapid work.

The editor has a delightful home in the family of Senator B. H. Hill, and, for companion, the president of Trinity College, North Carolina, Rev. B. Craven, D. D.

Our lack of service to the ADVOCATE has been supplied by C., of the Louisiana delegation, to whom we are under great obligations.

MAY 16, 1878.

Friday, May 17.—On yesterday the Conference, by a decided majority, determined to elect no Bishops. At eleven o'clock the fraternal messengers of the Methodist Protestant Church were received. The messengers were Drs. Clark, Henderson and Burr. Dr. Burr was indisposed and did not speak. The addresses of Drs. Clark and Henderson were exceedingly good, and the speakers were heartily applauded. Bishop Pierce was in the chair, and made a handsome and telling reply.

An Important Lesson.

Our best, richest lessons from God's word are not always found lying upon the surface. They are more frequently in an incidental way than otherwise. They seem to be hid away beneath the surface. They are incased in the history or narrative, or in the delineation of human character, as the finest gems sometimes in a rough coating of earth. The narrative may come in naturally, and be historically correct. It is just the fact stated. But the lesson to us is not so much in the fact stated, or in the history related, as in the things wrapped up in it. It calls for prayerful pondering—a spiritual peering into and beneath to find the gem, and place it in the crown of life. The discovery of new truths, or, rather new illustrations of old truths, must always be pleasant, and bring its own reward. We find these only in careful search.

Of the many instances that might be used as an illustration, let us take the narrative of the lame man at "the beautiful gate" as a case in point. We see the central figures in the piece standing out sharply defined. Peter and John, at the hour of prayer, are going up to the temple. They are near "the beautiful gate." The man, lame from his mother's womb, arrests them. He asked alms. He is a pitiable sight. His lameness and helplessness are manifest. His hunger and anxiety for relief stand out in the face. His trembling hand stretched out is an earnest prayer. He was needy. He was in the right place to receive help. Peter and John were as to time and place, well conditioned to give the needed help. These are some of the leading features of the history. They are seen by even the casual reader. But now the more profitable ones, not so manifest, lie deeper down. Among them let us learn this: that it is not always best for us to be able to relieve physical want. This man thought only perhaps of his bodily wants. He asked for the bread that perisheth. Peter and John had no silver and gold. They had something better, of which, it may be, they did not know themselves until called for. Having the power to do what they did, they could have commanded the power to transmute stones into bread, or gold and silver. Having no gold and silver, they were made to think of something as much better as spirit is better than matter. The Christian heart always pities human suffering. The Christian man always desires to relieve human want. Like Peter and John, the desire cannot always be gratified. Unlike Peter and John, not having silver and gold, spiritual resources are not drawn upon. It is a source of real sorrow to many good men and women that they have not the means to feed the hungry and clothe the naked. Learning well the lesson before us—that it is not always best, neither for the beggar nor the donor, to be able to do this—a greater blessing than silver and gold would come of their poverty.

Another lesson strongly impressed upon us in this history is that silver and gold are not the first and prime wants of the world. It would seem so in this extreme case. He was lame, and in abject poverty and hunger. Worldly wisdom and human benevolence would have said: "Turn the stones at your feet into bread; feed his poor sick body, and then bestow your religious benefits." The trouble in this direction perhaps lies in these two particulars: that in going out of the order of God to make the bread the power to bless would have ended just there, and then the lame man, fed to the full, would have been content to remain as he was. An empty stomach and an empty pocket often conjoin in a grand work for human souls. The poverty of Peter and John, and the disappointment of the lame man, weaning him from earthly trusts, brought to him the bread of eternal life. "In the name of Jesus, arise and walk." This was really what the man needed. In getting this he got also the other. Rising and walking, he has the means not only to get for himself, but to give to others. So he is changed from a beggar to a prince—from a mendicant receiver to a kingly donor.

It is not always best for us that we have the means to relieve suffering humanity.

Silver and gold are not the first prime necessities of suffering humanity.

The life of God in the soul has the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Report No. 2, of that committee, which had been recommitted.

Item three was read, and S. B. Watts moved its adoption.

J. H. McLean spoke against the report.

R. S. Finley called for the reading of the memorial of the East Texas Conference, which was read.

He advocated the adoption of the report.

R. Lane spoke against it.

H. D. Moore moved the previous question. The call was sustained, and the report on item three was adopted. Yeas, 105; nays, 100. (See report on sixth page.)

W. S. Black, chairman of the Committee on Boundaries, presented Report No. 3 which was read and laid on the table, under the rule.

D. C. Kelley, chairman of the Committee on Missions, presented Report No. 5 of that committee, which was read:

J. C. Simmons and others presented a minority report, which was read.

Both reports were laid on the table, under the rule.

J. E. Evans, chairman of the Committee on Revisal, presented Report No. 8 of that committee, which was read and acted on by items.

Item one was read, and T. L. Boswell moved to strike out the prefix "non." T. L. Boswell, Lovick Pierce and others advocated the amendment, and after considerable discussion J. S. Key moved the previous question. The call was sustained, and the amendment was adopted.

Mr. Evans (clerical, North Georgia Conference) said the committee thought the other questions in the Discipline covered this point, and this was superfluous.

Mr. Boswell, (clerical, Memphis Conference) was surprised to find that it was out of the Discipline, which he did in withstanding a preacher in an argument on this subject. The fact that a preacher was arguing that a Christian could not be made perfect in this life was a reason for the retention of the clause. He examined the other questions, and told what kind of perfection is meant. It was necessary to our doctrinal consistency.

Mr. Adams (clerical North Georgia Conference) said they only objected to the restoring because it was a repetition. They were not opposed to the doctrine.

Mr. Towson (clerical, Missouri Conference) thought lameness in this doctrine be come from leaving it out of the Discipline. He said letters had come in praying for the restoration of the clause since the question had been agitated. He thought without this clause there was no difference in the Methodist doctrine on this point from any one else.

Mr. Kennedy maintained that that was no reason for going backward and forward on this matter. It was struck out because the other questions covered the point.

Mr. McFerrin wanted to know when the question was struck out.

Mr. Summers explained that a committee was appointed at the New Orleans Conference to revise the Discipline. He chanced to be of that committee, and Dr. Green among others. The changes were all submitted to the members at the Memphis General Conference, and they adopted them. This clause was left out in that revision as superfluous.

Mr. Andrews (clerical, Mississippi Conference) said he enjoyed Dr. Summers' writings and Wesley's, but the Discipline was the authority. There was no Christian audience who would not answer in the affirmative to the questions now in the Discipline on this subject, but the clause left out was distinctly Methodistic.

Mr. Lee (clerical, Louisville Conference) wished the candidates to answer this question. Reading the doctrine of standards was not enough. The Calvinistic churches believe in the doctrine of Christian perfection. They teach it possible to attain it just before death, or a little after. To realize it at any time after justification is Methodist doctrine, and distinguishes us from other religions. They believe in entire sanctification. He thought the restoration of the clause was of essential importance. Not to insert it again was a tendency to abandon our ground. In fact, when men failed to enjoy the privileges, they began to argue against them.

Mr. Lovick Pierce (clerical, South Georgia Conference) said: Beloved brethren, I do not present myself unasked. I have received a note which expresses a great wish that I would pronounce my voice and give my views upon the subject now before you. First, I am not able to defend these matters as they ought to be defended. I have more common sense than to undertake to do it; but I must, nevertheless, make response to the call upon me with so much respect and deference in the note I have received.

I confess to you that I have regretted ever since these words passed strangely from our good old Book of Discipline. It reminds me of feathers taken from a beautiful bird, one feather this year and a few next, till at last the bird is picked and turned loose, a stranger in the earth. We had no business to pluck the original clause out of the Discipline.

I am glad to say the speaker who preceded me has expressed what would have been my criticism upon this subject. The question, "Are you going on to perfection?" is quite a different thing from "Do you expect to be made perfect in this life." A great many are not sanctified because they do not expect it in this life. For myself, I am glad this subject has met with an unexpected discussion before this venerable body. I want to die—let me be buried—before Methodists are ever bereft of such a choice flower. Glory be to God, we can be made perfect in this life through the power of his love.

I am in favor of the restoration of this word. To the question put to me, I answer in the affirmative.

Mr. Evans said the matter had been presented in his absence, and he had no objection to its restoration.

On motion of A. Hunter, rule 17 was suspended, and item one, as amended, was adopted.

Item two was then adopted.

On motion the report was then laid on the table, to allow Report No. 7 on the Bible cause to be presented.

H. F. Johnson, chairman of the Committee on Bible Cause, presented Report No. 1 of that committee, which was read and laid on the table, under the rule.

The Rev. A. S. Hunt, D. D., corresponding secretary of the American Bible Society, addressed the Conference in relation to the work of the society.

The chair responded in some felicitous remarks to the admirable and impressive address of Dr. Hunt, to which the Conference had listened with profound attention.

Mr. Hunt said:

Mr. President and Christian Brethren:

I must, before delivering my words on the subject committed to me, present my cordial thanks to you for the pause you made in your regular business to allow me to be presented at this time; nor can I proceed without saying that I somehow feel great liberty in speaking to you. Shall I say I have a strange—I will not say it—but a grateful satisfaction in submitting to you the views with which I am charged. I would express to you the feelings of my heart as I stand before you did I not fear I should trespass on the distinguished brethren who speak to-morrow. On my way here your pastors opened to me your pulpits. In Richmond, as I ascended the pulpit stairs, and my eyes gazed upon a tablet inscribed with the honored name of Duncan, "founder and first pastor," my heart was stirred. It was with profound thankfulness to God that I was at liberty to stand for even an hour in that place.

Everywhere on my route, and as I entered your Conference, I have found the hand of fraternal greeting stretched out to me. I thank you for it.

I have been sent by the American Bible Society, representing millions of Christians, to bear greetings to you. This society is not a denominational institution. We hold it as our chief joy to be able to present to the world the exhibition of the union of all who love our Lord Jesus Christ.

I shall not attempt to speak to the report I have in question. It is wisely prepared and well expresses your views. The American Bible Society has prosecuted for sixty-two years its beneficent work. It is no close corporation. It does not pretend to be a part of any single church. Its life and impulse is received from every one who loves our Lord Jesus Christ throughout the land. Its object is to come as near as possible to the beating heart of the individual Christians composing this great nation. The work we are doing is not confined to our own land, but extends through the whole world. Wherever it finds a soul—pagan, Mohammedan or Jew—who will receive the Scripture the hand of the society is open to give. The little volume now held in my hand is the New Testament of our Lord Jesus Christ. If I read the table of prices of this American Bible Society, I see this book described as sold for five cents. This is eloquent beyond anything I can say. The society can now present to the world a copy of the New Testament in our mother tongue for this trifling sum. (Applause.) We give the entire Bible for twenty five cents. To this point we have come through the beneficence, the sympathies and progress of American Christians.

If I had time and could think of detaining you, I would present some considerations concerning the history of a work like this in the vast labors of translations and the perfecting of machinery for printing it in the various tongues, that every man, woman and child may have it. All can purchase a book like that. One of the speakers in Richmond, at the late anniversary—Bro. Granberry—thrilled us by a grand speech in Saint Paul's church, touching every heart in the vast congregation. Another speaker said: "Let no one say I can not contribute to purchase a copy, for many of you every day puff away in smoke twice the cost of this book."

Let me say in connection with this work that from every part of the world we have touching accounts of the value of the book just as it is, without note or comment. God approves the written word. The spirit and the life are in it. I had the pleasure of a statement from the person who now occupies the chair (Bishop Keener) illustrating this fact in the history of the new movement in Mexico. We hear similar reports from Japan, China and Russia from within the lines.

As I have already said, there is no single denomination that can claim a monopoly of this society. It belongs to you as much as to any. We desire from every great body of Christians like this some hearty indorsement of the work of the American Bible Society.

Without the co operation and faith of the churches we cannot proceed with our beneficent work. We desire not to press you unduly in the matter of contributions, but we earnestly desire also that no man, woman or child can say: I have had no opportunity to give even my mite to this society. If you get small collections, spend at least a few moments in your charges describing the work. Let no man say it is not our institution. Its life must touch the heart of the churches. Its center is in New York. Its work reaches everywhere. I am talking so long that I feel a delicacy in proceeding. (Go on! Go on!)

The society divides its work into two departments—the home work and work in foreign fields. The home work has for many years been conducted under the direction of agents. In many of the older portions of the work it has been found desirable to discontinue this over sight.

There are only one or two north of the Potomac and east of the Alleghanies. We have striven to see, however, that the sparsely-settled fields were cared for. We have incorporated two or three States in one district. The pastors and people in some places are taking hold of it heartily. Better still, the society is touching the people one by one. They are feeling that it belongs to them. In Arkansas our colporteurs have visited eighty-six thousand families, and found nearly twenty-four thousand destitute of the Bible.

Dr. Hunt then gave incidents of the Bible work in Progray and in Japan.

He alluded to a letter received from Dr. Lovick Pierce, and concluded by asking for the hearty co-operation of the church in the work of the Bible Society.

The president (Bishop Keener) said: These words are inspiring and have done us good. I am not alone in gratitude to our distinguished visitor for the cheering and blessed messages he has brought us. I may say I have been in some of the fields he has mentioned, and there fell the absolute necessity of the American Bible Society. By the marvelous providence of God, the war with Mexico scattered over the land these Bibles, which were caught up and read by the people.

The Bishop said he could relate many incidents of deep interest in connection with the stray copies of the Scriptures. He said he had heard from the lips of a gentleman who, endeavoring to find his way out of a difficult country, came, as he supposed, upon a company of bandits. He saw them seated in a circle, while a venerable man was reading. They received him politely, and gave him directions as to his route, and put him completely at his ease. To his surprise, he found the old man had been reading a copy of the New Testament, published by the American Bible Society. (Applause.)

The Bishop related the conversion of a man of great bravery in the late war through a Bible carried to a fair by a small boy. This man, Gomez, was now a Protestant minister. The Bishop expressed his hearty indorsement of the society.

A. H. Redford, treasurer of the Bishops' fund, presented his account with the Bishops for the last four years, which was referred to the Committee on Episcopacy.

Conference then adjourned with the doxology and benediction by Lovick Pierce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

REPORT NO. VI OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

The Committee on Itinerancy have patiently and carefully considered all the papers referred to them in regard to changes in the presiding eldership, and respectfully present their deliberate conclusion on the subject the recommendation that no change be made in the Discipline in regard to the presiding elder question.

J. S. MARTIN, Chairman.
C. G. ANDREWS Sec.

Presented and laid on the table Wednesday, May 15, 1878.

SUBSTITUTE FOR REPORT NO. VI OF ITINERANCY.

Let the report of the committee on itinerancy be substituted by the following resolution:

Resolved, That the proviso to answer 8 question 3, section 2 chapter 3, page 70 of our Discipline, on the Duties of Bishops be stricken out, and that the answer shall read as follows: "To see that the districts be formed according to his judgment."

J. E. EDWARDS
J. D. VINCIL.

Presented and laid on the table Wednesday, May 15 1878.

REPORT NO. III OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOUNDARIES.

1. Your Committee on Boundaries, to whom was referred the memorial from the Illinois Annual Conference, and the memorial from the Central District Conference Illinois Annual Conference, have had them under careful consideration, and recommend the formation of the Illinois Annual Conference which shall embrace the State of Indiana.

2. We recommend that Otter Creek appointment, in the Blue Ridge circuit, Baltimore Conference, be transferred to the Western Virginia Conference, and that the line be inserted in the Discipline, page 308 after, Lewisburg district: except Otter Creek appointment.

3. The resolution signed by P. Mighell and Patrick Richardson concerning the boundary between the Holston Conference, has been considered, and we recommend the striking out of the Discipline, page 310, "Thence north with the State line to Island creek and with said creek and the Tennessee River to the State line of Tennessee," and inserting, "Thence with said State line to where the Alabama State line crosses the Tennessee river."

W. S. BLACK, Chairman.
S. X. HALL, Secretary.

Presented and laid on the table under the rule, Wednesday, May 15, 1878.

REPORT NO. V OF THE COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS.

The Committee on Missions [illegible] me to report in considering the division of the constitution of the Missionary Board that they have deemed it wise and expedient to eliminate from said constitution all that pertained to "Domestic Missions." They recommend the insertion of a [illegible] beginning on page 183 to be numbered section 6, as follows:

OF HOME AID.

1. Each Annual Conference shall organize a "Board of Home Aid," such manner as it may [illegible] the object of which shall be to aid weak charges and to establish churches in destitute places, and to provide rules and regulations for the raising of all revenue necessary for the purpose contemplated, subject to the government of said board and the disposition of the fund raised.

2. It shall be the duty of the presiding elders to bring the subject of "home aid" prominently before the general conferences of each and such, and see to it that a vigilant and well-defined method plans be adopted for raising funds for said purpose.

D. C. KELLEY, Chairman.
W. S. JOHNSON Sec.

Presented and laid on the table under the rule, Wednesday, May 15, 1878.

MINORITY REPORT NO. V OF THE COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS AND HOME AID.

Chapter

Article 1. Each Annual Conference shall have entire control of home work within its bounds, and shall organize a Board of Home Aid, the object of which shall be to aid weak charges and to establish churches in destitute places.

Art. 2. The board shall consist of president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer, and as many others as the Conference may determine, to be elected by the Conference triennially.

Art. 3. The board shall estimate the amount necessary to meet the demands of the work annually, and shall apportion the same among the several presiding elders' districts.

Art. 4. The revenue of the board shall be derived from annual collections in every congregation, and from such other plans as may be adopted by the church and congregation to raise money for this object.

Art. 5. The board, the presiding elders, with the president of the Conference, shall constitute a committee for the appropriation of the funds.

Art. 6. The board, through its secretary, shall make a full report of all its work to the Conference annually.

J. C. SIMMONS.
A. R. WINFIELD.
A. T. WARTERFIELD.

Presented and laid on the table under the rule, Wednesday, May 15, 1878.

REPORT NO. 1 OF THE COMMITTEE ON BIBLE CAUSE.

Your committee has had under consideration the resolution of W. J. McCarty and R. A. Hardaway, reporting collections for the American Bible Society, and respectfully recommend concurring in the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That section 11 of chapter 3 page 78 of the Discipline be amended by adding to it the following: "And the amount of contributions received by him for the American Bible Society," so that the clause as amended, will read as follows: "And to report to the Conference annually the amount raised during the year within the bounds of his charge for these several interests;"

mount of contributions received by him for the American Bible Society."

That it shall be the duty of the book editor to publish the contributions to the American Bible Society, thus reported, in a column of the tabulated statistics in the General Minutes.

H. F. JOHNSON, Chm'n.

Presented and laid on the table, under the rule, Wednesday, May 15, 1878.

The Swedes at Home.

The Swedes are a simple-hearted, lighter-living people, and they take as much as possible of their sport summer. Gotehorg abounds in commercial enterprises of every sort, full of ships, canals and factories.—A busy bustle life, relieved on Sundays by theaters and operas, to which everybody goes as a matter of course. I remember a delightful evening passed in one of the gardens, while a band played soothingly, and the long light fell out over luxuriant green rhododendrons and bewildering flowers in a garden full of happy people, full of a sort of old Greek Anacreontic spirit, sweet and sunny as any picnic party in Italy. It is in these brilliant bits of summer that the Swedes get pictures of sunshine for the grand relentless winter—a winter which is a sort of hyperborean twilight illuminated by the dazzling snow-dance of the aurora borealis. The Swedes are constitutionally dyspeptic. There is lurking in their constitution that drop of Siberian light which transforms a dewdrop into a lens—a highly imaginative, sociable, sensuous people, supplementing their bleak climate by a resource of art and culture. Their poetry abounds in rich pictorial effects, and yet it has the silvery spirituality of the most unworldly German ballad.

The part of Sweden in which I sojourned, lies is full of grain and rich fields, and a culture so soft and rich that it reminds one of parts of Italy. The country is mountainous everywhere up the mountains there run curving valleys full of rye and wheat that leave behind outlines of singular and suggestive beauty. There are a South, and a North to Sweden as different as the Land the North with ans. The pine and Finns in the extreme Lapdream of this to them delicious land of the South of Sweden as of a floating fairy-like and unattainable. In the North life is so hard, so hopeless, it is a life shared by wolves, bears and reindeer—a life that reduces people to live on ground bark of trees, grovel in it two-thirds of the year, and be stunned, abject and miserable. For centuries—and centuries nearly near ours—those northern lakes were strongholds of pagans. The vivid hereditary prejudices of the Finns and Lapps crop out in controversies with the Swedes Norwegians. A Swedish or Norwegian woman who marries one of these people has to learn his language, there being sounds in the Scandinavian, simple as these sounds are, unpronounceable to the mouth of a Parisian.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Feeding on God.

The grand endeavor of the Holy Spirit is to communicate God to men. He undertaken to live with them, and do not see that they are living on the bitterness of their own life. It is not as with bodily food, where they have a sure instinct leading them to seek their food where they go after the fat oxen, and fairly filled with these, we scarcely so much as conceiving what the animal was, or how it comes to pass a remarkable fact that so few among the flesh have any conception that God is the necessary food and nutriment of their spiritual nature, without which they famish and die. It has an extravagant sound when they hear it. They do not believe it. How can it be that they have any such high relation to the Lord God, or he to them? It is as if the tree were to say: What can be the trunk of wood, all dark and cold within, standing fast in my roots in the ground, what can I have in common with the free, moving air, and the boundless sea of light that fills the heavens? And yet it is a nature made for these, taking them into its very life-supply and vitalize and nourish every fiber of its substance. And it is that every flame spirit is divinely related to the Infinite, in order to live and move and have its being. It wants the knowledge of this, the eternal manifestation of God, the approbation of God, a consciousness lighted up by his presence, by love of his fullness, to be strong in his might, to rest in his love, and be lifted everlastingly in his glory. Apart from him it is an incomplete nature, a poor, blank fragment of itself, hungry, dry and cold. Oh, alas! It cannot think so, before Christ comes into the world to animate the divine nature, other-wise unrecognized, before it; so to speak, to its knowledge, enter into its faith and feeling, make it its living bread, the food of its life. Therefore of his fullness are we called to feel, receiving of it freely grace for grace. When we have received he restores the consciousness of God, fills the soul with the divine light, and sets it in that relation with God which is life—eternal life.—Dr. Bushnell's Sermons on Life.

A. H. Nelson, the well-known printer and publisher of 57 Camp street, has presented us with a three sheet sample of his work in the shape of a handsomely executed lithographed plan of the Seashore campground. Mr. Nelson informs us that almost all orders for such work are sent to Northern or Western cities; but perceives there is no necessity for doing so, as the work can be as well done at home. These diagrams are executed by G. W. W. Goadwyn, No. 9 Magazine street.

Young Men's Christian Association.

MR. EDITOR: The first Young Men's Christian Association State Convention was held in Baton Rouge, April 26–30, 1878. Rev. Christian Keener, of Alexandria, was chosen president; W. C. Shepard, of New Orleans, vice-president; W. H. Goodale, of Baton Rouge, and Prof. D. M. Rush, of Centenary College, secretaries.

Many topics of practical work were ably discussed, and the sessions of the convention were attended by a deep religious feeling. Mr. Thomas K. Cree, of the International Committee, was present and added much to the interest of the occasion by his Bible readings, praise and promise meetings, gospel meetings, and wise words upon most every subject that came up for discussion. On the afternoon of the first day of the session there was held, on the levee front, the first open-air meeting ever held in Baton Rouge. W. C. Shepard, of New Orleans, led, assisted by Rev. J. W. McLaurin and Ph. Diendorf. This was followed by meetings in the State House grounds and on the corner of Main and Church streets. The Young Men's Christian Association of Baton Rouge have provided for an open-air service every Sabbath at the State House. Very large crowds attend them, and, as a result, I notice the attendance at church of some who have not been inside of church walls for many a long year.

There were thirty-eight delegates in attendance at the State Convention, and we feel sure, from the character of the State Executive Committee appointed, that, though Louisiana is the last State to fall into the movement, yet she will be thoroughly awakened to Young Men's Christian Association efforts for the salvation of young men. The State Executive Committee, as at present organized, is as follows: Rev. John T. Sawyer, chairman; Wilmot H. Goodale, Esq., secretary; Hon. H. Newton Sherburne, treasurer; J. W. Amiss and Alvan E. Read, Esq., of Baton Rouge; W. C. Shepard, Dr. J. M. Watkins, C. H. Chute, F. M. Norman, R. H. Browne and W. C. Raymond, of New Orleans; Rev. Christian Keener, of Alexandria; Rev. J. Y. Allison, of Monroe; Rev. James A. Godfrey and Rev. Leander Piker, of Greensburg, La.

It is felt by many that the future will develop the Young Men's Christian Association of Louisiana into a powerful body of Christian workers, laboring loyally, lovingly and effectively, hand in hand, with the church of Christ, of which it is a part, for the bringing the thousands of young men of our State into the fold of the one blessed Master.

Our Present Convict System. 6. Life of the Prince Consort. 7. Russian Aggression and the Duty of Europe. Cotemporary Literature.

—ADAMITES AND PRE-ADAMITES, or a popular discussion concerning the remote representatives of the human species and their relation to the biblical Adam, by Alexander Winchell, LL. D., professor in Syracuse University, New York, and of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn. This essay of 502 pages is divided into ten chapters, and is from a man of great scientific attainments.

CHRISTIAN UNION EXTRAS.—The Future State.—All ables presented in five essays by distinguished divines. All who are interested—and it would seem all should be—will have ample material with which to construct some sort of theory in relation to the future life.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.—A magazine for the household. Volume 1, No. 6. Springfield, Mass. It comprises 95 pages, double column. Well printed. Twenty articles, prose and verse. Some of the best papers commend it. The articles are signed by their authors.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.—This old and distinguished magazine sustains its well-earned reputation, giving its readers seven prose and three poetical articles, with miscellany. It always contains good reading.

—The Comiplete Preacher for May, 1878, contains five sermons from the pens of Pingbon, Imillow, Dale, Manly and Eulow, on important and interesting subjects.

What Are You at Home?

Strolling around among some members who live on the suburbs of our town, I found two boys playing marbles. The boys play a different game now from what I used to play. We had a ring, with a big marble in the center, and to plump that out from taw was to win the game. Now they had a straight line, with two marbles and "play for keeps." I always stop to talk with boys, and I stopped to have a chat with these. I told them how we used to play, and they told me how they play now. "Well," said I, "boys you don't play for keeps, do you?" One of them cut his eyes in a moment, and said: "Ain't you Joe Hopper's pa?" "Yes," said I "but how did you know it?" "You can't get him to play for keeps. He says it's gambling, and that his pa says so." I was gratified to hear such a good account of one of my boys from a stranger, for it is not always so. But that boy's recognition of me through my little son set me to thinking. He is not at all like me in person, but when I began to denounce a certain game as sin the intuition of that strange boy led him to know me as the father of his playmate. Isn't it often the case that our children are but reprints—a kind of pocket edition—of ourselves? As they sit around the fireside and hear us talking; as they ask us questions, and receive sometimes an inconsiderate answer; as they watch our indoor life, when we are not on guard, and draw their inferences, are we not holding a most solemn position, and unconsciously giving tone and taste and character to those who, of all others, ought to concern us most? You are rich—your children may inherit your riches. You are poor, but your children may be rich. You are talented, and your children may inherit your talents. But you cannot convey to them by will your education, or your principles, or your religion. These are to be impressed upon them not by one act, but by the constant, persevering efforts of your daily life. But under "the grace of God" they may become, and they will become, what we most desire them, and in nine cases out of ten will be reprints of ourselves. Let us learn, then, to "show piety at home."—Christian at Work.

INSENSIBILITY OF SHARKS TO PAIN.—Land and Water gives the following, which shows what an unfeeling creature the shark must be: The Esquimaux are in the habit of catching sharks both with nets, baited with salt meat, and with a hook and line. They are hunted for the sake of the oil which is expressed from their livers, and for a substance very much like spermaceti, which is obtained under pressure from their flesh. Sir Leopold McClintock says the Esquimaux assert that the shark is insensible to pain, and that Petersen, who was his interpreter in the voyage of the "Fox" related how he had plunged a long knife into the head of one which was devouring a white whale entangled in his net, but that the brute continued its repast notwithstanding.

As Sir Leopold remarks, it must be remembered that the brain of a shark is extremely small compared with the size of its huge head, and he says that he himself has seen bullets fired through them with very little apparent effect; but that if these creatures can feel, the cruelties practiced upon them by the Esquimaux must be cruel indeed.—The dogs of the hunters are not allowed to eat either the skin or the head, the former being very tough, and the latter producing giddiness and sickness.

The New Orleans Sunday School Association will hold its first open-air reunion at the United States Barracks, on Saturday, May 25, 1878. It is for adults and teachers. There will be various exercises of prayer, and vocal and instrumental music, interspersed with short speeches from good talkers. It will, no doubt, be an enjoyable occasion. Hours from eleven A. M. to six P. M.

A great many mistake religious sentiment for a religious life. Because they are touched by religious truth they fancy they are religious. Because they are susceptible to religion they think they have it. An impression is to them the same as if they obeyed it; to appreciate right is the same as though they did the right. Weeping over a book of martyrs, they almost think it as heroic as though they died at the stake themselves. They come to take what God has planted in them as a substitute for a practical Christian life.

Among the buildings brought to light at Pompeii, within the last few months, is one supposed to have been a woolen factory, divided into several chambers, the largest of which (probably an unroofed court) contains three ample receptacles, like cisterns, between flues of brick pilasters; on one side of these is a corridor, and in the inner wall, bounding the premises at the same side, are painted several small figures—sportive children and other little beings with large heads, quite caricatures like in grotesqueness.

Douglas Jerrold tells a pleasant story as follows: At a private party in London a lady who, though in the autumn of life, had not lost all dreams of its spring, said to Jerrold: "I cannot imagine what makes my hair turn gray. I sometimes fancy it must be the essence of rosemary, with which my maid dresses the nape of my neck." "Oh, no," replied the dramatist, "that is the essence of time (thyme.")

SUMMER TOURISTS.—Leaving the Crescent City by its most excellent and newly-equipped Great Jackson route, we pass through the States of Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky, and, connecting with the famous Pan-Handle at Cincinnati, we travel through the grandest scenery in America. On this after road, the finest in the country, we pass, with rapid speed and perfect safety, the beautiful towns and villages of the Middle States, passing delightful residences and magnificent farms, sweeping like a bird over the smoothest undulating scenery in the world, between the far-famed Horse-Shoe Bend we have our sea-surrounded cars, built so that the traveler may observe the grandest effect of nature—the Alleghanies.

The Pennsylvania railroad stands second to none on the continent in every respect, and business men reach New York or Philadelphia in quicker time than by any other route. The genial Col. W. M. Wadley of is the general Southern agent, and is located at 224 Carondelet street.

GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Persons going North ought to take the above route, as the entire length of this road is in splendid condition and all new cars, carefully selected for way, etc. The equipment of rolling stock is of the best character, consisting of new, substantial and comfortable coaches for passengers. The general passenger and ticket department is under the watchful sight of that popular gentleman, Mr. F. Chandler, who is recognized as one of the chiefs of his class in the city.

LEMBER YARD.—Going to Europe soon, or at least sending the summer away from the city, should by all means be avoided by those who can afford to go. Many are now preparing for their departure. The situation is one of the pleasantest in Paris, and the locality as well as general. The terms, as will be seen in the advertisement, are certainly low, and excursion tickets can be bought at reduced rates.

BARNES' HOTEL, MISSISSIPPI CITY.—This famous watering place will open June 1. Its character is well known, and appreciated for its hospitable, healthful tone, and the variety of amusements connected with it render it a favorite resort. Mr. John E. Reynolds, one of Tom Corbett's boys, is considered to be one of the best hired help in the South, and knows how to take care of his guests.

THE air of perfection, cleanliness and home-like comfort which is so apparent at the American House Basar, is one of the characteristic features to that well regulated establishment. Everything disposed to accommodate this popular hotel offers an opportunity seldom found at so low rates to Hand to Mouth Buyers.

PHARMACY.—The card of Mr. R. Schmidt will be seen on this page. Mr. Schmidt is well acquainted with the drug business having been employed as assistant by Eppes & Co., Langs and Fenner & Beard's. Those living in his neighborhood should give him their patronage.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED, needing steam engines, boilers, saw mills, presses, etc., to the advertisement of Hoe, Coleman & Bro., No. 12 Park street, New Orleans, La. They have manufacturers and dealers of well-established reputation.

ARTICLES FOR EASTER.—Rodgers' knife is the most desirable article for the child at Easter. Coleman & Rhodes, 8 Magazine street.

SOUTHERN BELL.—Send for circular. Every lady ought to have it. Only $125 per year. See advertisement.

IT IS A FACT.

That the Piano and Organ Emporium of Messrs. Patterson & Co., on Canal street, Range, Rose, Nassau, Hinrichsen, etc., are the finest in the City, for quality and prices. Call and examine their stock before purchasing elsewhere.

USEFUL NOTICES.

WILCOX'S FLY FAN AND AGUE CURE.—This article is used by a distinguished surgeon for the benefit of those whose eyes were destroyed in industrial pursuits. The highest testimonials can be seen at the office. Prepared by the inventor, at the Fair Ground Railroads in the South and West. Wholesale agents are wanted in all towns. In the meantime, orders can be sent to the stock of medicines and will be promptly filled. The efficacy in the cure of fever and ague, and many other diseases, is guaranteed, or money refunded to all who purchase. WILCOX, FISTON & Co., proprietors, New Orleans, La. For sale by all druggists.

HEARING RESTORED.—Great discovery in relation to the ear. Deaf for 15 years. Send stamp for circulars. Dr. Clarke, Lock Box 1, Washington, Ky.

POZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER is acknowledged by thousands of ladies who use it, quite to be the only preparation that does not disclose the skin, or any blemish or fair complexion. Sold by druggists.

STONE IN THE BLADDER

RELIEVED BY THE

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

AFTER THE LIFE OF THE PATIENT WAS DESPAIRED OF BY HIS PHYSICIAN AND FRIENDS. THE STONE DISSOLVED IN THREE HOURS IN A GLASS OF THE LITHIA WATER.

CASE OF MR. C. WOLFF, of Point Coupee, La.

POINT COUPEE, LA., April 3, 1878.

MR. THOMAS F. GOODE: By request I give you the following history of my case. Two years ago I began to suffer with severe pain in my kidneys, and for three periods at times—about two a week—which caused the most excruciating suffering, from which I was thankfully relieved by the discharge of a stone from my bladder six grains in weight. There was never quite two days from the pain to the discharge. In eighteen months I discharged seven large stones, besides quantities of smaller stones and sand. As the result of this protracted and great suffering my general health was reduced to so low a condition that my physicians advised me that I had nothing to hope for from medicine that my case was hopeless and I must look for relief only in death. In this state of things, about six months ago I was advised by Mr. J. L. Lyons, a druggist of New Orleans, to try the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER. Bottle No. 2 A week after I began to use it I had a slight attack, in which I passed two small stones. Finding one of these in a glass of the Water, in three hours I found a dissolved for it, which gave me great benefit, and I persevered in its use. I have had no attack since. The pain in my kidneys has entirely disappeared. I have regained my natural weight, and my general health is perfectly restored. I very cheerfully acknowledge my indebtedness for my life and the comfort which I now enjoy to this great healing Water. Respectfully, C. WOLFF.

This Water, in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles, can be had at the Springs, and of J. L. LYONS, Wholesale Druggist, 43 and 45 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

Reports of Standing Committees to the General Conference.

Report No. 3 of the Committee on Itineracy.

The Committee on Itineracy have considered a resolution, signed by W. A. Tarwater, J. D. Vinell and W. W. Jones, providing for the insertion in the Discipline of the question, "Are you in debt so as to embarrass you?" and do concur with the resolution.

And respectfully recommend that the question, "Are you in debt so as to embarrass you?" be inserted immediately after the question, "Will you recommend fasting or abstinence both by precept and example?" which occurs in the answer to question 2. "What method do we use in admitting a preacher into full connection at Conference?" Sec. 6, chap. 3, page 83, Discipline.

J. S. MARTIN, Chairman.

C. G. ANDREWS, Sec.

Presented and laid on the table, under the rule, May 10, 1878.

Report No. 4 of the Committee on Itineracy.

The Committee on Itinerancy have carefully considered various matters referred to them, with the following results, viz:

1. In a memorial from the Nashville District Conference, asking "that the representative of a charge in the board of district stewards may have a right to appeal from an oppressive assessment to his charge, and in such case the presiding elder shall take a vote, requiring three-fourths majority to enforce the assessment," the committee recommend non-concurrence.

2. In a memorial from the Nashville District Conference, and a resolution to the same effect signed by William Doss and William Wilcher, asking that the Discipline be so changed as to remove the election of stewards from the Quarterly Conference to the Church Conference, the committee recommend non-concurrence.

3. In a resolution signed by T. L. Mellen, C. K. Marshall and others, and in one of similar import signed by S. Black and T. S. Wade, asking that district stewards may be made members of District Conferences, the committee deem no action necessary, as each Annual Conference may determine what laymen shall be members of the District Conference, according to answer 2, question 1, sec. 8, chap. 2, page 70, Discipline.

4. A memorial from Trinity church, Richmond, Va., and a petition of like effect from Centenary church, St. Louis, both asking that the four years' restriction be removed from the pastorate, and the Bishops be allowed to continue a pastor in the same charge as long as they may deem proper, and also a petition from the Iron Mountain District Conference, asking that no change in the pastorate may be made, have each been considered. The committee unanimously recommend that no change be made in regard to the pastoral term.

5. In the item in the resolution signed by S. Black and T. S. Wade, asking that the sixth restrictive rule, chap. 2, sec. 1, page 37, providing that the produce of the Publishing Fund shall not be appropriated to other purposes than those specified, be stricken out of the Discipline, the committee recommend non-concurrence.

J. S. MARTIN, Chairman.

Presented and adopted May 10, 1878.

Report No. 1 of the Committee on the Name of the Church.

Your Committee on the Change of the Name of the Church, to whom was referred a memorial from the Holston Conference, and other papers relating to that subject, have carefully considered the matter, and submit the following report:

The time for such change, if it ever existed, is now past. The masses of our people are satisfied generally with the doctrine and polity of the church, and the name under which it has made a history of which it has no cause to be ashamed. Even on the border and the Pacific coast, where it was supposed the desire for change of name was strongest, and the consequent benefits would be greatest, our people are divided in opinion, with an increasing sentiment against any change.

The passions and prejudices which formerly led to misjudgment concerning the spirit and purposes of our church are happily subsiding. Sectionalism has had its day in Church and State. Sectional catch-words have lost their power. Geographical lines cannot be abolished. They were made by the hand of God. Their political significance in the church can be abolished, and under the guidance of Infinite Providence and the inspiration of the Spirit of grace we may soon hope for this happy consummation.

Under our church name, as it stands, gratifying progress has been made toward the establishment of the equal relations with the leading Methodist bodies of the world. If the general sentiment of our membership is based in the real recognition of us on the part of any, the fact furnishes a reason why they should pray for a better spirit, rather than that we should write a new name in our banner in deference to wicked prejudice or willful ignorance.

Under our church name, as it stands, the most signal manifestations of the divine favor have been accorded to us. At every step we have been guided and supported by the hand of God. The name we have borne during the vicissitudes, trials and sorrows of the last thirty-four years has not repelled the presence of the almighty and ever-gracious Head of the church. The name we have borne under very baptisms of suffering has been consecrated by spiritual baptisms of the Holy Ghost. In no spirit of boasting, but with devout and fervent gratitude, we make the challenge: "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

Under our church name, as it stands, we present to the world a Christian communion remarkable for its agreement in doctrine, the homogeneousness of its constituent elements, and the unity of its purposes and plans. Examples are not wanting in which the substance of essential unity has been sacrificed for the shadow of external uniformity. A new departure in church nomenclature on our part might lead to that which would furnish another warning to such as are tempted to substitute a doubtful expediency for unchangeable principles.

Under our church name, as it stands, all the titles to our church property, involving many millions of dollars, are secure and settled. These titles should not be disturbed by anything short of undoubted and urgent necessity. It has already been shown that no such necessity exists.

This question has already been submitted to and acted on by the church. The General Conference of 1866 submitted the matter to the Annual Conferences. The proposition to change the name of the church was then rejected. In the light of subsequent events, it now seems to us that this action ought to be and will be final.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of the following resolution:

Resolved, That in the judgment of this General Conference the question of the change of church name was finally settled by the action of the Annual Conferences in the years 1866 and 1867, and we recommend that there be no further agitation of this matter.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

O. P. FITZGERALD, Chair'n.

Presented and adopted, Friday, May 10, 1878.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on the Name of the Church.

Your Committee on the Change of the Name of the Church, to whom was referred the memorial of the Illinois Conference of the Episcopal Methodist Church, under the jurisdiction of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, asking permission to change the name of said Conference to that of "Illinois Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South," have had the same under consideration, and unanimously recommend that the request be granted, and that the action requisite for the accomplishment of this object be taken as soon as possible by the Illinois Conference.

O. P. FITZGERALD, Chair'n.

Presented and adopted, Friday, May 10, 1878.

Report No. 5 of the Committee on Itineracy.

The Committee on Itineracy beg leave to submit their Report No. 5, as follows, viz.:

1. They have considered a paper signed by G. Stewart, F. Richardson and T. P. Summers, asking: 1. That the Discipline be so amended as to strike out of answer 6, question 1, section 3, chapter 2, page 41, the words: "Provided no member of the Annual Conference shall vote in said election." 2. To strike out of answer 3, question 1 sec. 2, chap. 2 page 51 the words: "Except such as involves ministerial character." In both of these changes asked for the committee recommend non-concurrence.

2. The committee have considered the request of N. H. Lee, A. H. Redford and B. M. Messick to have questions of law decided as to the meaning of the words "lost sight of by removal or otherwise," under the directions given to Church Conferences, and also as to whether attendance upon class meeting is still a test of church membership. The committee respectfully report that decisions of law do not come within their province.

J. S. MARTIN, Chairman.

C. G. ANDREWS, Sec.

Presented and adopted, Saturday, May 11, 1878.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Boundaries.

The committee have had before them the resolution, signed by H. A. Walker, S. X. Hall, J. W. Fitch and J. S. Gaunt, from the Kentucky Conference; also a resolution signed by N. H. Lee, A. H. Redford and C. H. Hays, of the Louisville Conference, concerning the boundary line between those Conferences. The committee recommend that no change be made.

2. That the memorial from the Texas Conference, asking to have transferred Leon, Robinson, Milam and Williamson counties, in the Northwest Texas Conference, to the Texas Conference, be not granted.

3. That the prayer of the memorialists of the East Texas Conference be granted, so that the north boundary line of the East Texas Conference shall commence at the Louisiana State line in Cobb Lake, thence up said lake to the mouth of the Little Cypress river, thence up said river to the line of Upshur county, thence with the south boundary line of said county to the Texas and Pacific railroad, thence west with the line of said railroad to the east fork of the Trinity river, thence down said river to its confluence with the main Trinity river; provided, that all towns and villages which are now on said railroad, or shall hereafter be built, shall belong to the East Texas Conference.

S. X. HALL, Secretary.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Missions.

The Committee on Missions have instructed me to report, in connection with the bequest of James T. Colvin, as follows:

By the last will and testament of said Colvin, a bequest of $10,000 was made or given to the agent of our Publishing House for the use and benefit of the Missionary Society of our church, to be controlled by said agent for this specific charitable use, and applied thereto, under the direction of the General Conference, and as they shall judge best calculated to promote the object indicated. Of the said sum $8,500 has been paid by the executor of said will. Two thousand dollars is now in part deposit awaiting the action of this Conference; $6,500 has, in advance of any direction as required by said will, been applied to the missionary work intrusted by the Discipline to the said Missionary Society, whether in ignorance of the provisions of said will or not your committee have not deemed it necessary to inquire. As the said sum has been devoted in good faith to the charitable use intended by the testator, your committee recommend that the said application be approved, and that the residue of said bequest, with that on hand, be paid over to the treasurer of the Board of Missions, and expended on account of the mission work in China. To that end the accompanying resolution is submitted for adoption:

Resolved, By the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, assembled at Atlanta, that the application of $6,500, part of the bequest to the agent of the Publishing House, by James T. Colvin, of Iowa, made by the Board of Missions to the missionary work under its charge, in advance of direction by this Conference, be and the same is hereby approved, ratified and confirmed; and that all the rest and residue of said bequest, amounting to $3,500, be paid to the treasurer of the Board of Missions, and applied by said board to the missionary work in China.

Report No. 1 of the Committee on Education.

Your committee, to whom was referred a paper relating to the education of the colored people, have duly considered the same, and respectfully submit the following report:

The education of the colored people is both a religious duty and a political necessity. In the minds of thinking men of all shades of political opinion grave apprehensions have been excited by the fact that the suffrage has been extended more rapidly than the means of popular education. Ignorance is the hot bed in which everything vile flourishes. When ignorance is the fountain of political power, its stream must be impure. These truisms bear directly upon this question of the education of the colored people. They have the right of suffrage. Neither the wish nor the power exists to take it from them. Our own concern in the matter is that this privilege may be exercised intelligently and beneficially to the body politic. Therefore, as Christian citizens, we rejoice in the fact that considerable progress has been made in providing the means of education for the colored race in the Southern States. Experience has shown that in proportion to the growth of intelligence among this people is the measure of their protection against the counsels of unprincipled adventurers from abroad and demagogues at home. The intelligent colored voter and the intelligent white voter cannot fail to see that their interests are the same, and that he who would sow the seeds of discord between them is an enemy to both. Hence the education of the colored race is a matter of vital importance. We therefore recommend our people everywhere to encourage, by all means in their power, the mental and moral culture of the millions who have so recently been invested with the responsibility of the ballot.

But there are higher than merely civil interests involved in this question. It involves the religious interest and eternal destiny of the colored people in these States. The guiding hand and transforming spirit of the church must be felt in the work of education. From the date of its organization to the present hour the Methodist Episcopal Church South has been thoroughly alive to the moral and religious welfare of the African race. It is not claiming too much when we affirm that for whatever is praiseworthy in their conduct during the trying ordeal through which they have passed, for whatever is gratifying in their present condition, and for whatever is hopeful in the prospect of their future, the colored people of the Southern States are more indebted to the Methodist Episcopal Church South than to any other agency. Political changes have wrought no change in the heart of the church. It is still ready to work for the salvation of this people to the full measure of its ability and opportunity. We therefore deem it proper to give this expression of our interest in their behalf, and respectfully submit the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the education of the enfranchised colored people of the South is demanded alike by Christian duty and enlightened patriotism.

Resolved, That in all efforts that may be made by the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America to establish educational institutions for the moral and religious training of the colored race we bespeak the cordial sympathy and practical aid of our people.

Respectfully submitted.

W. F. HARRISON, Chair'n.

Presented Saturday, May 11, and laid on the table for the present.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Education.

Your committee, to whom was referred a paper, signed by W. H. N. Magruder and J. J. Wheat, in regard to certain duties of preachers in charge of circuits, stations and missions, recommend the insertion of the following paragraph in the Discipline as answer 15, section 4, page 78:

"16. To urge upon parents the importance of educating their children, and advising them to patronize, as far as practicable, those institutions of learning under the care of our church."

Respectfully submitted.

W. F. HARRISON, Chair'n.

Presented May 11, and laid on the table, under the rule.

A groceryman in Hoboken failed the other day. "How much can you pay?" asked a friend. "Do you think you can give fifty cents on the dollar?" "Fifty cents? Mein friend! No, that's too much. In New York they are only paying twenty-five per cent."

"I meant to have told you of that hole," said a gentleman to his friend, who, walking in his garden, stumbled into a pit of water. "No matter," said the friend, "I have found it."

STRICTLY PURE.

It is well known that while Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder has been made for many years without reducing its standard of perfect purity, there is not another baking powder in the market that can stand the test for purity. Chemists and physicians use Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder in their own families.

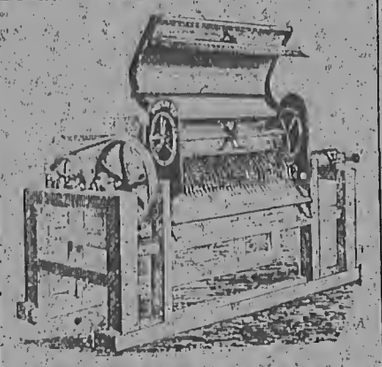
MACHINERY, TIES, ETC.

DANIEL PRATT'S IMPROVED

"Revolving Head" Cotton Gin.

PATENTED JULY 15, 1873.

Price Reduced to $4 Per Saw.



THIS GIN has been in use for the past five seasons, and several recent improvements have been added. It drives all fractions at the ends of the cotton box, prevents the fall from breaking, and gives a Larger Yield of Lint from the same Amount of Seed than any other Gin in use. The Revolving Head lightens the draft and causes the Gin to run faster with less driving power, thus doing a great deal more work with the same time, while consuming less fuel or animal power than any other Gin. The seed being lint very close, the length of the staple is increased producing return on this account of a greater market value. This improved value, given by length of staple, with extra production of lint, added to increased amount of work done, more than covers the cost of the Gin in every bale ginned. Testimonials sent by mail on application.

MEDICAL.

The German Star in Louisiana.

THE SO-CALLED WONDER DOCTOR has arrived safely in New Orleans, with his bona fide family. He has made a twelve months' tour through the State of Louisiana to show to the public what he can do with his AMERICAN HERB MEDICINES for the diseased human system and organs. The Doctor is a thorough and experienced German chemist of the herb, root, vegetable kingdom, and has spent eighteen years in exploring America for the purpose of discovering the most valuable medical herbs growing in America. He has succeeded in discovering the secrets of all Indian tribes in connection with the vegetable kingdom, and thus is enabled as a practical physician to prescribe these herbs to his patients. The Doctor has been wonderfully successful in the treatment of his patients, of whom he has had in his charge 1,688 within nine months. These comprised cases of sickness of every description, and of both sexes. All these patients were completely restored to health in a very short time. Everywhere in the State the Doctor had to promise to establish himself in New Orleans, which he has resolved to do and carried out, in order to relieve, as fast as Nature will permit, the long sufferings of so many of his fellow-beings. None but Americans by birth will be employed by the Doctor in the preparation of his medicines, and all patients who may honor him with their confidence and clientage will be treated with them.

The Doctor has established his office, and a Chemical Laboratory, as well as a complete Private Hospital, at No. 168 BOURBON STREET, between Toulouse and St. Louis streets, so as to give to the afflicted from everywhere an opportunity to receive medical attention at his hands. The rooms are all well fitted up and absolutely under his personal supervision. His terms are high rate. Letters of inquiry (with three cent stamp inclosed) will be answered promptly. Orders for medicines will be filled upon the receipt of the money, and mailed free to any place in the United States. Address

BREECH-LOADERS.
WE take this opportunity of informing our customers and friends that the first installment of our large stock of these goods, unexpectedly delayed a few weeks, has arrived and is ready for inspection. The Brass Loading Shells, forms, shapes and assortment in store comprises upward of 30 different sizes and patterns, running through every calibre and grade. These fresh importations, being of a later pattern, are much handier to load, and, owing to present exchange, are offered at a saving of 25 per cent. below the regular wholesale value. Sample lots have been placed on the counter, and we invite a call from sportsmen to examine for themselves, whether or not they wish to buy now or not.

We have the best imitation Gold Watch in the market. The metal is a composition of nickel and silver, resembling gold. Only the most judges could tell the difference except by a chemical test, in fact it has the virtues requisite to make it the best substitute for gold known. Genuine American Movement. Expansion Balance. Jewelled in Engraved or Enamel Hunting Cases and equal in appearance to a GOLD WATCH THAT COSTS from $150 to $200. If you wish a watch for your own use, or to make money on, try this. Owing to our large sales we are enabled to reduce the price of them to $1 each, with an elegant Chain attached. They are used on railroads, steamers and in manufactories, and other places where accurate time is required, and give general satisfaction. We send them by mail or express, on receipt of $12, to any part of the country, or it will be sent C. O. D. when the customer desires and remits 25 per cent. These elegant CHAINS weigh about Fifty Pennyweights, and the same, pattern in pure gold would cost $50. We sell these Chains at 12 each. But we sell the Watch and Chain for $12, sent by mail in a registered package, postpaid, to any postoffice in the United States.
WE SELL THE WATCH WITHOUT THE CHAIN FOR $10.

MILK OF MAGNESIA
IS THE best preparation known for all disordered conditions of the stomach. It immediately and certainly cures DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, HEARTBURN, SOUR STOMACH and HEADACHES caused by acidity of the stomach.
The pleasant taste and milk like smoothness of this preparation renders it very suitable for infants, requiring no persuasion to induce them to take it. It does not only prevent but nursing of the stomach, and will act as a laxative when used as directed. It is also specially recommended for Ladies. For sale by druggists generally. Pamphlets containing testimonials and full particulars can be had free by mail on application. Dr. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is taken with water. The special feature of Dr. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is now ordered. The difference between it and its most striking, for whereas the undissolved tablets and pellets in the drop of calcined Magnesia are exhibited with terrible distinctness, the Milk of Magnesia lies all the appearance of a cloudy vapor, entirely free from the objectionable precipitation; in fact perfectly dissolved.
Be sure to get MILK OF MAGNESIA. Ask your druggist for it, and take none else. It is entirely different from all other preparations of Magnesia. Physicians and public generally are not already acquainted with this preparation can obtain explanatory circular by addressing

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
NEW ORLEANS, Tuesday, May 21, 1878.

There has been some activity in the markets for the past week, though no movement of consequence has been reported. Stocks and bonds have been almost without movement. From this time until the fall stocks generally suffer a decline in consequence of the small demand during the summer months. Consols will no doubt hold up pretty well until the July interest is paid. We give below the quotations of the Stock Exchange of some of the principal stocks:

Tone of Market to-day, firm; yesterday, barely steady.

There is a very touching little story told of a poor woman with two children, who had not a bed for them to lie upon, and scarcely any clothes to cover them. In the depth of winter they were nearly frozen, and the mother took the door off the cellar, off the hinges and set it up before the corner where they crouched down to sleep, that some of the draught and cold might be kept from them. One of the children, whispered to her, when she complained of how badly off they were: "Mother, what do those dear little children do who have no cellar-door to put up in front of them?" Even there, you see, the little heart found cause for thankfulness.

I envy no man that knows more than myself, but pity them that know less.—Sir T. Browne.

VOL. 24. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MAY 30, 1878. NO. 22.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—The committee of the House on public buildings and grounds have agreed to report favorably on the Senate bill that the Memphis, Tenn., custom-house shall be constructed of Tennessee marble.

PHILADELPHIA, May 22.—The British vice-consul at this place stated, in an interview with a reporter, that the English government was fully advised of all purchases of vessels made by agents of Russia in this country, and said there was no authority to prevent the purchase of vessels in this country by either Russia or England under treaties, unless the purpose was to arm them in this country, and then there would be opposition expected of the American government. There was no proof that the vessels already purchased were to be used for cruising purposes, without there was no interference would be offered.

Bishop Thomas Bowman, D D, of Lecompton, one of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, sailed in the steamship Nederland for Antwerp this morning. Bishop Bowman will make a tour around the world to inspect the missions of the church.

GALVESTON: May 22.—A News special from Clarksville says: A fire on the morning destroyed nineteen business houses in that place. The loss is each $150,000. There is scarcely any insurance.

BALTIMORE May 23.—The annual decoration of the graves of Confederate soldiers and sailors at Loudon Park Cemetery, took place this evening, under the auspices of the Maryland Society of the Army and Navy of the Confederate States. Bishop Pinkney made a prayer, and Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, of Virginia, delivered the address. The afternoon was pleasant and bright. About five thousand persons were present. The committee decorated the monument to the Union dead in the same cemetery.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 23.—The coroner's jury returns a verdict that the explosion disaster occurred from an explosion of mill dust, which was ignited by a spark from stones running together. Evidence shows no negligence on the part of any one.

CHICAGO, May 24.—About six o'clock last evening a tornado struck the settlement about three miles from Evanston, a Chicago suburb, and traversed the country for a radius of several miles. The farm house of William Barnes was completely demolished. Mrs. Barnes instantly killed, and two young children carried through the air by a whirlwind, were found dead to the ground, a distance of twenty rods away. A laborer was killed from his feet, and on striking the ground his legs were broken by the shock. No other damage to life is reported, but the destruction to property is considerable. Many freaks of last night's storm are reported from various points, but nothing serious, except in this city and at Mineral Point.

FRANKFORT, May 25.—In the Presbyterian General Assembly to-day, the official case of Dr. E. P. Baird against the Synod of Virginia was concluded late. His complaint was sustained. A narrative was read, which speaks of good things and discouragement. The Assembly will probably adjourn to-night.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Details of the tornado come in slowly. It was particularly severe in Wisconsin. Fatalities reported reach about twenty.

CHICAGO, May 25.—The number reported from the tornado at Mineral Point is eleven.

FOREIGN.

VIENNA, May 21.—By the earthquake in Venezuela, which occurred April 14, the town of Cua, eighty miles from Caracas, was entirely destroyed, with surrounding farms. The river Tuy became heated to such a degree that fishes sought refuge on the side of the water. Shocks were felt in Caracas, and the heaviest since 1812. The property damaged in Caracas amounted to $100,000.

LONDON, May 22.—Pacific news received from St. Petersburg, Berlin and Paris.

The Standard's Berlin dispatch says Count Schouvaloff expressed to Lord Odo Russell, British ambassador, the hope that negotiations between England and Russia would lead to a peaceful arrangement.

The Times' Vienna correspondent, however, says: In order to appreciate the exact value of the announcement a speedy meeting of the Congress must be mentioned that it emanates from financial sources. As for official and diplomatic circles, they are more silent and reserved than ever.

HALIFAX, May 22.—At the old colliery mine explosion three brothers named Sullivan, succeeded in rescuing thirteen of the entombed who were overcome by gas. They were unconscious for some time, but are slowly recovering. Sixteen pallid corpses were at work here. In the south side of the mine a large number of men were at work, but all escaped uninjured. One of the Sullivans was suffocated while searching for the dead, but was fortunately rescued by a brother. The works will be idle for a few days only.

BERLIN, May 22.—Semi-official correspondence anticipates favorable result from Count Schouvaloff's efforts. It says that the latest declarations of the British ministry, as well as the views manifested at St. Petersburg, are full of wishes and hopes at the renewed consolidation of European peace.

LONDON, May 23.—It is authoritatively stated that Count Schouvaloff brings from the Czar counter proposals, couched in conciliatory terms, proposing that all questions pertaining to European Turkey be submitted and treated by the proposed congress, and that the questions relating to Turkey in Asia be made the subject of a separate convention between England and Russia alone.

The Vienna correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says: Count Andrassy and his colleagues have gradually come round to England's views about the terms on which the Congress should meet, as well as on many other points.

TORONTO, May 23.—The pleasure steamer Empress of India, with a party of eighteen aboard, went over the dam on Grand river, at Galt, Ontario. One body was recovered, and diligent search is being made below for others.

LONDON, May 25.—The cabinet council held long sessions yesterday and to-day. The prospects for peace are certainly brighter to-day than for some time past. The Czar is resolute in regard to the retrocession of Bessarabia, but has made considerable advances in regard to the limits of Bulgaria. There need be no surprise if Russia, under pressure, consents to reduce her indemnity one-half, or even more.

LONDON, May 25.—Accounts received from every capital in Europe concur as to the main feature of the political news namely: The certainty of an early meeting of the Congress, but considerable anxiety is still apparent about the military preparations and situation before Constantinople. The attitude of Austria especially creates apprehensions at St. Petersburg, and these will not be allayed by the occupation of Arakalos, which is Austria's first overt demonstration against Russia's settlement of the Eastern question. Russia having promised that island to Servia, Servia is certain not to get it unless the Congress awards it to her. Great secrecy is still maintained at St. Petersburg about the progress of negotiations.

A Landseer had a celebrated picture representing a congregation of Scottish shepherds with their collies or dogs seated each by his master in the pew. A clergyman from a distant part of Scotland once came to officiate to one of these shepherd congregations. It is usual in the Presbyterian kirk for the people to rise when the minister pronounces the final blessing. The shepherds continued seated. The strange minister was scandalized, and he sharply exclaimed: "What, is there not one pious devotional spirit among you to make you rise to receive the blessing?" An old shepherd mounted the pulpit stairs and whispered in the preacher's ear: "Meenister, it's just to cheat the doggies." It appeared that whenever the congregation rose to receive the final blessing the collies thought the service was over, and rushed through their masters' legs with mighty yelpings out into the church-yard.

GLENN—SILLERO.—At Grove Hill, Ala., May 7, 1878 by Rev. Jesse C. Chapman, Rev. R. C. Glenn to Miss Sallie K. Sillero, of Washington, Ala.

Mr. EDITOR: We have just closed a meeting that has resulted in good to our church. We received eight members, which makes a total of thirteen since Conference. Bro. A. H. Widney and Dr. Linfield assisted us, and did efficient work in the pulpit and congregation.

J. M. WEEMS.

GAZEBOO, Miss., May 6, 1878.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.—There will be a meeting of the board of trustees, on the camp ground, on Thursday, the sixth day of June, 1878. All persons desiring lots or tents are requested to be present.

By order of the board.

W. H. FOSTER, Pres't.

P. HALLAHAN, Sec.

A note from Rev. H. F. White, Franklin, La., informs us that his charge is blessed with a revival. Eleven accessions to date, and the meeting still in progress.

When the mind, like a pure, calm lake, reflects back the light which is shed from heaven, the range of that is upon it commensurate with its capacity, for the tiniest drop of dew arranges forth the tints, though not the full radiance of the sun.—Bethune.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE M. E. CHURCH SOUTH.

FOURTEENTH DAY.

THURSDAY, May 16, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour.

Bishop Keener in the chair.

Divine service was conducted by W. H. Potter.

The minutes were read and confirmed.

Bishop Paine took the chair.

J. M. Lewis presented a petition from the official boards of the St. Louis churches, praying for a union of the St. Louis and Southwest Missouri Conferences. Referred to the Committee on Boundaries.

The order of business was suspended to allow the following resolution to be offered and read:

Resolved, That after to-morrow (Friday, the seventeenth instant) no resolution, memorial or petition proposing a change of the Discipline shall be entertained, except by a two-thirds vote of the Conference.

P. A. PETERSON,
PAUL WHITEHEAD.

W. G. Veal moved to amend by substituting Saturday. This motion did not prevail.

The resolution was adopted.

S. S. Bryant presented a remonstrance against the change of the boundaries of the Southwest Missouri Conference. Referred to the Committee on Boundaries.

The chair then called for reports of standing committees.

On motion of H. F. Johnson they were received and laid on the table without reading.

J. E. Evans, chairman of the Committee on Revival, presented Reports Nos. 9 and 10 of that committee. (See reports on sixth page.)

C. K. Marshall, chairman of the Committee on Sunday Schools, presented Reports Nos. 3 and 4 of that committee. (See reports on sixth page.)

R. A. Young, chairman of the Committee on Finance, presented Reports Nos. 12, 13 and 14 of that committee. (See reports on sixth page.)

P. P. Ellis, chairman of the Committee on Temperance, presented Report No. 2 of that committee. (See report on sixth page.)

Bishop Pierce presented Report No. 2 of the Committee on Appeals, as follows:

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON APPEALS.

Appeal of Tyre B. Harbin, elder, Illinois Conference—suspended. Decision of the Illinois Conference reversed. G. F. PIERCE, Pres't.

A. G. HAYGOOD,
Secretary of General Conference.

ATLANTA, GA., May 16, 1878.

S. Register, chairman of the Committee on Episcopacy, presented Report No. 6 of that committee, which was read, and on motion of J. S. Key was made the order of the day for Friday next, at ten o'clock, a motion of H. F. Johnson to strike out the order of the day not being adopted.

The order of the day having arrived, A. H. Colquitt, chairman of the Committee on Introductions, introduced the Rev. Cyrus D. Foss, D. D., and the Hon. William Cumback, fraternal messengers from the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to the presiding Bishop, who introduced them to the College of Bishops and the General Conference, which received them standing.

The chair then delivered to the secretary the credentials of the messengers, which were read to the Conference, as follows:

Address of the General Conference of the M. E. Church to the General Conference of the M. E. Church South.

To the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

Dear Fathers and Brethren—The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church acting under the authority of the late General Conference, have appointed the Rev. Cyrus D. Foss, D. D., one of our ministers, and the Hon. William Cumback, one of our lay brethren, as fraternal delegates to your Conference. These honored brethren, who occupy a prominent rank in our church, will represent to you our affairs, and will convey to you the expressions of our warmest regard and sympathy.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Bishops.

WM. L. HARRIS, Sec.

NEW YORK, April 12, 1878.

Lovick Pierce then presented to the chair the fraternal address of the British Conference.

The chair delivered it to the secretary to read.

Lovick Pierce stated that the address had been forwarded to him with the accompanying letter to Bishop Marvin, which he never lived to see. Both the letter and address were read, as follows:

35 FRIEND'S SQUARE, LONDON, S. E., ENG., October 2, 1877.

My Dear Bishop Marvin,—I beg to place in your hands the address of the British Conference to the next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, United States. As I am ignorant of your address, I direct this to the care of Dr. Lovick Pierce, whose address Dr. Punshon has kindly given to me. I shall be greatly obliged by a few lines from you, acknowledging the receipt of it. With kind regards and pleasant reminiscences of my intercourse with you in Bristol, I remain, my dear Bishop Marvin,

Yours very truly,

H. W. WILLIAMS.

To the Rev. Bishop Marvin, Methodist Episcopal Church South, United States.

Address of the British Conference of 1877 to the next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, United States of America.

Reverend and Dear Brethren: It has afforded us no ordinary pleasure to receive among us, at our Annual Conference, the two brethren, who were accredited to us as your representatives, Bishop Marvin and the Rev. E. R. Hendrix. Our interest in the occasion and object of their visit to the Old World would of itself have insured them a cordial welcome as messengers of the churches; but a still deeper feeling has been awakened by the earnest and affectionate salutation borne by them from your church to ours, and by the tidings which they have brought of your prosperity. Most heartily, dear brethren, do we reciprocate your Christian greeting, and join in your thanksgivings for the success that has followed your labors.

We rejoice in the many tokens of a broad and deep Christian culture among the members of your church, in the prosperity of your educational institutions and in the earnestness of your endeavors to maintain and diffuse pure and elevated literature. Above all, we were filled with thankfulness as we heard your representatives speak of the happy results of the trials through which your country has passed, the deepened piety of your church at home, and the revival of zealous effort in missionary labors abroad. May he who has thus blessed the times of trouble and distress send far more abundant blessing in these times of peace!

The accounts which Bishop Marvin has given us respecting your missionary work in Mexico, in Brazil, in China, among the Germans in Texas and among the Indians were to us full of interest. We look forward to great results from your labor in these fields, some of which are open to yourselves alone. We are persuaded that with you, as with ourselves, zealous missionary effort abroad will ever be fraught with blessed influence on churches at home.

As to ourselves, we gratefully acknowledge that during the past year the good hand of the Lord our God has been upon us. In many places we have been permitted to witness a remarkable revival of religious power. Our annual returns show that, though our losses by death and by emigration have been very great, the number of members in our societies has been increased by nine thousand during the year. The number of candidates offering themselves for the work of the ministry has been larger than in any former year of our history. Our theological colleges are filled with earnest young men preparing for home and foreign spheres of labor. Our foreign missions have been well sustained, though the range of our operations has not been greatly enlarged during the year. The working of our various educational institutions has been successful, and in every department of Christian labor we have, through the divine blessing, to record encouraging results.

Many circumstances have concurred to impress us very deeply with a sense of our responsibility for maintaining in its purity, and for declaring with increased fervency and force the "message" of truth which from the beginning the Methodist Churches have received and proclaimed. The pretensions of an infallibility which claims to occupy as its own the fields of philosophy and of science, the organized conspiracy of Ultramontanism against our liberties and our faith, the ritualistic and sacerdotal spirit that widely prevails, and the insidious errors that are finding their way into many churches of our land, fill us with solicitude, and impel us to greater zeal in the diffusion of sound doctrine. We are satisfied, dear brethren, that in these feelings and resolves you are one with us. Recognizing with equal fullness of conviction these peculiar and weighty responsibilities, you will unite with us in fervent prayer to the "one Lord" that all our churches may be knit together in "one faith."

Having this end in view, we would gladly strengthen the bonds of fraternal intercourse with all that "hold the Head," and especially with all branches of the Methodist Church. We greatly rejoice that in your own land the churches of the North and the South are coming into closer fellowship. We shall gladly embrace every opportunity of proving the reality and the depth of our brotherly feeling. There are many difficulties which prevent us from acceding to your request that we should appoint a representative to attend your Conference next year. We trust that in the future such an appointment may be found practicable.

You will have our earnest prayers, dear brethren, that a special blessing may rest on your General Conference. With warm Christian affection and high esteem, we commend you to God and to the word of his grace.

Signed on behalf and by order of the Conference.

HENRY W. WILLIAMS, Sec.

BOSTON, August 10, 1877.

The following resolution was then offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That a committee of five on fraternal correspondence be appointed by the chair, to whom shall be referred all matters pertaining to the communications just made to this body, and all similar communications. A. M. SHIPP.
O. P. FITZGERALD.

The chairman then presented the Rev. Dr. Foss, who made a truly fraternal address to the Conference, at the close of which the chairman presented the Hon. William Cumback, who followed in a similar strain. Both addresses were received with great applause, and are as follows:

Mr. President and Fathers and Brethren, Honored and Beloved in the Lord:

It gives me great joy to be present with you, and to have the unexpected delight of receiving with you this greeting from the mother of us all, the Wesleyan Church. It comes to me, and I have no doubt to you, like a mother's kiss of peace to her reconciled children. (Applause.)

If I felt myself equal to the duty of this hour I should esteem it the most joyful hour of my life; but he would indeed be a bold man who should suppose himself able to give fit expression to the greetings about to be exchanged between the two largest branches of Methodism in the world; long and sadly estranged from each other; during the recent years earnestly, honorably, frankly trying to remove the causes of this estrangement, or to bury them a thousand fathoms deep in the whelming tide of Christian love; and now, for the first time able to strike glad hands over "formal fraternity" as an accomplished fact. Two and a quarter millions of Episcopal Methodists feel the joyful thrill of this day's greetings; so many in God's militant host, led to his feet by Wesley and Asbury and their successors; and let us not doubt that the countless myriads of God's triumphant host also share in the solemn joy of this great hour; for

"One family, we dwell in him,
One church, above, beneath,
Though now divided by the stream,
The narrow stream of death."

Would that he to whom we trace whatever is distinctive in our ecclesiastical order might break the long silence which has elapsed since his never-to-be-forgotten parting blessing: "The best of all is God is with us;" and speak to us from his high seat in glory, words of congratulation and counsel to-day. (Applause.) I recall this vain wish and offer a more practical one: Oh, that his Lord and ours (who left this world with his hands extended over his chosen to bless them, saying, just as he ascended: "Lo! I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world,") may breathe into every heart his spirit of ineffable love, and send us forth from this festal day, as never before, to cordial co-operation in the sublime endeavor which has been our common watchword from the beginning: "To spread scriptural holiness over these lands." (Applause.)

Mr. President, what is this precious heritage of Methodism, in which millions of men have cause to rejoice? What is it without, and what within? What has it done to challenge the attention and respect of the Christian world, and what is the secret of its power? It has been declared as "Christianity in earnest." May it ever more and increasingly deserve that definition! (Amen.) Its best historian speaks of it on his title-page as "The Religious Movement of the Eighteenth Century called Methodism." A "movement" it certainly was at the beginning both in England and in America. It made a commotion wherever it went. The customary greeting which met its itinerants everywhere was: "These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also." And they justified the expectation thus created. They had the faith of the rough Yorkshire preacher, on this text, who announced as the points of his sermon: "1. The world is wrong side up. 2. It must be turned upside down. 3. We are the chaps to do it." (Laughter and applause.)

It was also a "religious" movement. Men might call it fanatical, as many did, but all were compelled to admit that it was pre-eminently religious. It was incontestably that, and nothing else. And compared with all other movements in the country, it was "the religious movement of the eighteenth century." But it has long since outgrown its swaddling clothes. During the first three-quarters of the nineteenth century the robust infant has become a stalwart youth. The statistics of Methodism have long since arrested the eye not only of the ecclesiastical historian, but also of the philanthropist and the statesman. Its pre-eminence among the religious forces at work on this continent is frankly admitted.

But Methodism is not confined to America. Two of its Bishops, one of yours and one of ours, have recently given visible demonstration of its old motto, "The world is my parish," by actually going round the world in the discharge of the duties of their office. (Applause.)

I know not how it may be here with you, but in the North we are sometimes taunted with "the decline of Methodism." At the declination of one of our largest churches in Brooklyn, an eloquent Presbyterian minister, who was invited to make one of the addresses, referred to this subject, not, however, in this spirit of criticism. He said that for many years, in order to keep himself abreast with the religious knowledge of the time, he had been a regular reader of some one religious weekly of each of the great denominations; and that in all these years no single line had given him such pain as one he saw a few weeks before at the head of an article in the Christian Advocate published in New York. It was this: "The Decline of Methodism!" It reminded him of a carpenter, who, while working in his shop, could watch his son playing round his door yard, and who feared that the little fellow would some time fall into the well. Suddenly missing him one day, he ran hastily to the curb and, seeing something in the water, he shouted: "My boy, are you dead?" "Yes, father." "What a relief to get it from his own mouth!" (Applause and laughter.) The speaker added: "We outsiders have heard nothing of the decline of Methodism except from Methodism itself."

Sitting behind him in the pulpit was Bishop Janes, that singularly devoted man, for whose entrance, on a grand career of apostolic labors in the bishopric we were indebted to Southern votes. (We gratefully acknowledge this debt.) He was wont to say that after his abundant opportunity for knowing whereof he affirmed he could confidently assert that the church was never more pure, and never so intelligent and powerful for her work as now. (Applause.)

We may and must see and lament whatever elements of weakness render Methodism, in point of fact, at all inferior to its grand ideal as a world-embracing system of evangelical propagandism; but let us not forget to thank God that his blessing has made it the largest and most effective branch of his church on this continent, and has caused its distinctive ideas to overflow its ecclesiastical limits and leaven every other branch of the church. (Applause.)

The Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby, who brought to our General Conference the fraternal greetings of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in 1872, said:

"I rejoice to believe that when God sent the Methodist Episcopal Church into America, that church was called and elected to conquer this country, in order to put fervor and activity into the Presbyterian Church, and it has made its calling and election sure. (Applause.) And I believe further, brethren, that you have, in many details of Christian activity, taught us very many lessons which, though we may have been slow to receive, we have been sure to accept in the end."

It requires an effort of the imagination to realize the immense responsibility devolved on us by what God has accomplished through our fathers. Why does this august body, gathered from many States, pause in the midst of its important business to listen to this fraternal delegation? Not for what we are, nor for what we can say, but because we stand in front of 1,000,000 warm Methodist hearts, and give you their greeting in the Lord. (Applause.) We represent a body of Christians closely akin to you, having $70,000,000 invested in church property, having the immense responsibility of training a million and a half of Sunday school scholars, taught in 20,000 schools by 200,000 teachers.

It would not become me to make to you any particular statement of your own statistics; but the world knows your church membership is rapidly approaching a full million, and that your pastors are now responsible for the religious instruction of several millions of the people.

Dr. Punshon says that when, in 1769 Richard Boardman and Joseph Pilmor were sent out to America, the first missionary collection was taken in the British Wesleyan Conference, and $200 was put into their hands. On their way to their farewell meeting was held at York, and a collection of $2.50 was taken up. (Laughter.) Tradition says a special prayer meeting was called for at five o'clock the next morning "to return God thanks for such unexampled liberality." (Great laughter.) That was 109 years ago, and now there are 22,718 itinerant ministers connected with the various branches of Methodism in this country, and 3,293,169 members. "What hath God wrought?" Oh for floods, floods, floods upon the dry ground! May God make us a thousand times as many more as we now are, and bless us as he has promised. (Amen.)

Let me pass rapidly to the interior view of Methodism, and inquire, with similar brevity, after the secret of its power. That secret, I conceive, consists partly in its doctrinal system, partly in its peculiar ecclesiastical polity, but chiefly in its religious experience. Its doctrinal system is not new, though the manner of its proclamation is. From the beginning till now the Methodists, we think, have been less inclined than any other branch of the church to forget the inspired apostolic commandment in opposition to novelties in doctrine. "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have heard, let him be accursed."

In the course of the ages the old doctrines of the Bible had been buried beneath the rubbish of forgetfulness and sacerdotalism. Wesley seized them, lifted them up, shook from them the dust of ages which covered them, kindled them at the altars of God, rushed forth, and held them up as blazing torches before the eyes of the people. (Applause.)

Our fathers taught that sin was not a peccadillo, not merely a misfortune, but a dark, quietly-dawning fact. They thought salvation was not a proposal of help restricted to a certain part of the human race to be conferred at some time, no man can tell when; but to every guilty penitent it was a proclamation that he might now be saved, fully saved, saved to the utmost, and have the witness of the Holy Ghost to the fact of this salvation. (Applause.) No wonder the people listened, for at that time these truths came with the force of a new revelation to the masses of men.

I think I shall not be accused of an unjust criticism on our Christian brethren, not of our faith, if I cite the early Methodists' sarcastic representation of the teachings prevailing in the communities in which they went. It was this: "Religion—if you seek it you won't find it; if you find it you won't know it; if you know it you haven't got it; if you get it you can't lose it; if you lose it you never had it." Great laughter.) The Methodists reversed every clause of this description, and made it run: Religion—if you seek you will find it; if you find it you will know it; if you know it you have got it; if you get it you may lose it; if you lose it you must have it. (Applause.)

All the doctrines our fathers asserted were old, but they made them new, fresh, vivid and powerful.

I cannot illustrate one doctrine, misconceived by many, better than by an incident of the days of the French Revolution. An attempt was made by a brilliant Frenchman, M. Lepaux, to establish a new religion—a sentimental Rousseauism, which he termed Theo philanthropy. After making the effort he found the trial a failure, and went to that great master of State craft, Talleyrand, and asked his advice. Talleyrand said: "Monsieur Lepaux, you have undertaken a very difficult task. It is not easy to establish a new religion. I don't know how you can be successful. I venture to give you one piece of advice. 'I advise you to be crucified and rise the third day.'" (Applause.)

I take it that one of the distinctive features of Methodism has always been the necessity of a profound and unwavering faith in the sanguinary, vivacious death of our Lord Jesus Christ, and his resurrection on the third day as the only grounds on which a sinner can build his hope of salvation. Our early preachers had keen eyes. They had no foot square audience lying on the pulpit to keep their eyes off from their real congregations. And so if they saw on any face the signs that the Spirit was moving in the heart, they went to that man and took his hand. They did not ask: Do you believe in the thirty-nine articles? or: Do you believe in three orders in the ministry? or: Do you believe that we are the true church? but do you desire to flee from the wrath to come and be saved from your sins? If the answer was yes, he would say: "Here's Bro. Jones, the class-leader. Come next Tuesday night to his class." Mr. Wesley, according to Macaulay, I think, was equal to Richelieu, yet he invented not a single one of our peculiarities; every one of them is a child of Providence.

The itinerancy is the foundation of our polity. The early itinerant preacher went to the people. He ever felt, as a burlesque at his back, Christ's unapproachable marching order to his ministry: "Go." Wherever the people had gone he went, and he went often before them. (Applause.)

But the religious experience of Methodism was the great secret of its power. My brethren, God's way in making any truth powerful among men has always been to translate it into the vernacular of earth by incarnating it—(applause)—by putting it into a human soul. I detract not a word from the statements of my dear friend, the secretary of the Bible Society, who addressed you yesterday, I read him Chillingworth's great maxim: "The Bible, the Bible, the religion of Protestants." But it is not merely the Bible written; it is the Bible incarnated—lived, wrought into the fabric of souls—which is mighty for the salvation of the world. (Applause.) God incarnated himself in order to reveal himself.

The universality of the gospel offer is one of the truths distinctly revealed, but never understood until God incarnated it. The impartial angels had sung: "Glory to God in the highest; peace on earth, good will to men." Jesus had given the great commission for "all the world," "for every creature."

But the apostles themselves did not understand this command of Jesus. They lingered in Jerusalem until persecution scattered them, years after Peter was still so bound by Jewish bigotry that he needed a miracle and an angel's visit to loose his bonds; and then, as though he had found a new revelation in the house of Cornelius, he said: "I perceive God is no respecter of persons." Within a century, within the lifetime of our honored father here (Dr. Lovick Pierce), in a Baptist ministers' convention, in which the great Dr. Ryland presided, the discussion dragged a little, and the young men were invited to propose subjects for discussion. William Carey said: "Mr. Chairman, I propose this question: 'The duty of the Christian church to evangelize the heathen world.'" Dr. Ryland said: "Sit down, young man, sit down; when God gets ready to convert the heathen he will do it without your help or mine." And that within the past century. God hid the truth on this subject in the hearts of Dr. Coke and John Wesley, Judson, Carey and others. We see the fruits.

I will allude to one more doctrine—the witness of the Spirit. God has given Methodism the honor of making millions of men understand it. This was almost a dead letter in God's holy book when John Wesley arose.

Mr. John Wesley in that Moravian meeting, and while reading Luther's translation, felt his heart strangely warm. In that hour Methodism was born. (Applause.) That strange warmth of John Wesley we have here to-day. Yet the teaching lay plainly on the very surface of the Bible. Enoch "had this testimony, that he pleased God." David had his feet taken "out of a horrible pit and out of the miry clay," and a new song put into his mouth. Paul and Peter and John told the same blessed story. But I doubt if a thousand men in all England could there have said that they knew their sins were forgiven one hundred and fifty years ago.

Thus have I hinted at the special reasons we have as Methodists for striking glad hands in fraternal greetings. If we were less nearly akin we should still be drawn together in Christian charity by the common bond which touches every member of the body of Christ.

Every Christian in the world is tugging at the very heart-strings of every other Christian, whether he knows it or not.

If we have Christ's image, we must love that image everywhere. Wesley is drawn to Fenelon and Thomas A'Kempis. The highest and thickest walls cannot keep out love any more than they can bar out gravitation. Let the relationship be a little closer, like that between the various evangelical churches in this land, and you witness such scenes as adorned this goodly city a few weeks ago, when Christians from all parts of the United States and Canada met in the International Sunday School Convention; and, presided over by the honored and excellent Methodist Governor of this eminently Methodist State of Georgia (applause), never thought of each other as Presbyterians or Methodists or Baptists, but as one in Christ Jesus—fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God. (Applause.)

Let the kinship be still closer. Let millions of Christians have the same type of belief, polity, experience. Let them rejoice in a common history, and that unique, heroic, sublime; and yet let it occur that a sharp wedge of separation rends them asunder, and that alienation and estrangement succeed! If the spirit of Christ abides in both parts of the dismembered body, there must be regret, sorrow, longing, yearning and at last an all-conquering and resistless tide of Christian love. The closeness of the kinship and the felt necessity of a real reconciliation may require a degree of hesitation and time for the full consideration of all difficulties, in order that they may be put aside forever. (Applause.)

I confess to a sincere respect for the reserve with which you met early advances. When, in 1869, our Bishops proposed steps looking toward organic union yours replied thus:

"Permit us to say, in regard to 'reunion,' that in our opinion there is another subject to be considered before that can be entertained, and necessarily in order to it—we mean the establishment of fraternal feelings and relations between the two churches. They must be one in spirit before they can be one in organization. Concord must be achieved before any real union. Heart divisions must be cured before corporate divisions can be healed."

The next year Bishop Janes and Dr. (now Bishop) Harris appeared by appointment before your General Conference, and were very kindly received. After considering their communication you adopted resolutions, the first of which declared:

"We earnestly desire to cultivate true Christian fellowship with every other branch of the Christian church and especially with our brethren of the several branches of Methodism in this country and Europe;" and the last: "We express our sincere desire that the day may soon come when proper Christian sentiments and fraternal relations between the two great branches of Northern and Southern Methodism shall be permanently established."

Four years ago you thrilled our whole church with delight by your genuinely cordial reception of our fraternal delegation. But then justly recognizing the difficulties in the way of complete and lasting fraternity, you appointed a commission to meet a like one from us to remove these difficulties, and a fraternal delegation to inform us of this action, and to bring us your Christian salutations. Only one man was thought of to be first named on that delegation—the venerable and honored patriarch of this Conference. (Applause.) When the time came, to our deep regret, he was detained by illness, but he sent us his address; and among his wise and loving words we found these: "We do not believe that these difficulties ought ever to be discussed in either General Conference at large. They are delicate, sensitive things, never to be settled by chafing speeches, but, as we believe, can be speedily prayed and talked to death by a joint board of discreet brethren intent upon Christian peace." (Applause.)

Such a "joint board" was appointed, the terms of their appointment being, in your words, which our General Conference also adopted, "In order to remove all obstacles to formal fraternity between the two churches, * * *, and to adjust all existing difficulties." Could they do this work? Or would their Conference only reveal insuperable obstacles to fraternity? How could Gen. Vance and Gen. Fisk agree? How could Dr. Myers and Dr. Fuller sign the same report; for had not both written books on the subject? (Laughter.) They reached Cape May. Before they met there was a cannonade of frank and loving letters. At their first meeting they adopted this resolution:

"In view of the greatness of the responsibility imposed upon us, and in view of our utter dependence upon divine guidance in a matter of so much importance, a half hour shall be spent in earnest prayer at the commencement of each daily session of the commission."

That is hopeful, for God is "a very present help in trouble." The "impossible" became actual. Our commissioners declared this great church "an evangelical church reared on scriptural foundations," and "a legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism in the United States." Both commissions unanimously agreed to the "Declaration and Basis of Fraternity" founded on this statement. Five hands seized five other hands. Ten hearts melted and flowed together. Ten voices sang:

"Bless be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

while angels bent to listen, and the divine Redeemer looked down with a benignant smile on that scene, so germane to the very genius of the gospel he had died to found. (Great applause.)

When the action of the joint commission reached me I was on a long and wearisome journey. I picked up a secular paper and found the report complete. I devoured it with tears of gratitude, and at the close I said aloud to myself: "It is an inspiration of the Holy Ghost." To this day, sir, I have not once swerved from that conviction.

Some minor points of difficulty may yet remain, but the Mahkoff has fallen. We can "love as brethren," "with pure hearts fervently." In that spirit we can confer. Let there be no strife between us anywhere, and no emulation save the holy emulation to help each other in our common work for our one Lord. Let us fervently send up from all our borders the united prayer which inspiration has prepared for us: "May the Lord of peace himself give us peace always by all means." Oh, that that "perfect love" to God and man, which it was the chief glory of Wesley and of Methodism so to emphasize as to enable the world to understand it better than ever before, may have abiding exemplification in the relations existing between the two great branches of Episcopal Methodism. (Applause.)

As for organic union, I, for one, sir, am not anxious about that. Discreet and zealous lovers are likely to know when the time for marriage has come; and long courtships are sometimes judicious. (Laughter.) A real, if not a formal, union of each great family of denominations must precede that manifest unity of the church which was the great burden of the departing Savior's prayer. And the spirit of such union is all abroad among the churches. There have recently been Pan Presbyterian councils. Shall there not be a Pan-Methodist council (applause) in which delegates from the South and North, from England and America, from every continent and almost every island shall confer together? (Amens.) It might be oddly a love feast, but it would be none the less Methodistic and none the less Christian for that. Either that or something better, devised by love, must come to pass; for Jesus' prayer was a prophecy: "That they all may be one, even as we are one, that the world may know that thou hast sent me." (Dr. Pierce—"Glory to God!")

Mr. President, it has cost me an effort to delay so long as this to refer to the sore bereavements of your Zion and ours. I could hardly refrain at the beginning; but I could not trust myself then to pronounce two names which have ceased to be written in the lists of your effective ministers on earth, and have been transferred as worthy to be called on another roll for grander work in God's upper kingdom.

Who of the two thousands who heard, or of the hundreds of thousands who read, the clear, candid, masterful, eloquent plea for fraternity which fell upon our ears in Baltimore two years ago, will ever forget the silver tongued Dunca? But, alas! too soon, that tongue is silent.

And then we cannot forget the clear-headed, discreet, loving Myers, first named by you as one of your most trusted representatives, and appointed to a most delicate and difficult duty. He hoped, after finishing the grandest work of his life, to go northward and spend a few weeks in Christian fellowship with new friends, who would have accounted it a great pleasure to extend their hands to him in warmest welcome.

And then there fell on his ear the call of duty—the highest call to a true pastor—for in his beloved city of Savannah the yellow fever had begun its ravages. I must tell you the story as it stands on the last page of this pamphlet, which is our permanent record of the steps toward that complete fraternity in which these two "recognized churches" rejoice to-day. Our commissioners say this of him: "Fraternity was with him a passion. We think we cannot be mistaken, and that we do no injustice to any member of either commission, when we declare that to Dr. Myers, more than to any other one of our number, is due the unanimity of our conclusions. We know that he regarded his appointment the greatest honor, and his share in our success the greatest achievement of his life."

When the tidings of plague and death reached him he calmly said: "I must go home to my flock," and set off without the delay of a day.

When his brethren of the commission asked him, "Will you not come back North during the autumn and let our brethren see you?" he said: "God only knows what I am going to; whether life or death. If I live you will see me again, but if not we shall meet above. Good-by."

After a few days' labor in that region of death he fell—as may you and I fall—at his post. Let me refer to one other name most cherished among us. No man was more intent on fraternity than Bishop Janes. None had a clearer head or a warmer heart. He, like the brethren I have just named, fell a plumed warrior on the field of battle, with the ensigns of victory all around him. Amid great anguish of body, which rarely softened into moderate pain, when asked about his outlook for the future world, he answered with his accustomed reserve, which gave his words a wondrous depth of meaning: "I am not disappointed." Amen! He went up to his rest.

Now, brethren, it may seem almost strange that after referring to our precious departed I should mention any living man; but it is not strange, and needs no explanation to you. I must tell you in just one word what a thrill of joy fills my heart because of the survival and presence of the grand old patriarch of this General Conference. He belongs to us as well as to you. (Applause.) I would not, sir, for a thousand miles of travel have missed the opportunity I enjoyed yesterday of hearing from this great and good man his plea for the precious doctrine of perfect love—a plea conceived on the instant, with a force of logic, of eloquence and of imagination, and uttered with a vigor of voice and manner better befitting threescore than nearly fivescore years—a plea (proved masterful by its effect upon your vote) for the restoration to your Book of Discipline of that form of words which, more than any other, proclaims our sense of the value of one of the brightest jewels in the casket of Methodism: "Do you expect to be made perfect in love in this life?" (Applause.)

My earnest prayer is that God will preserve the life of this honored representative of American Methodism until in extremer age, when no longer able to stand up in your church councils and speak words of wisdom, he may at least linger like St. John at Ephesus, and stand up in the assemblies of the saints, and, stretching out his thin hands over the congregation, say: "Little children, love one another." (Great applause.)

My dear and honored father (to Dr. Lovick Pierce,) I bring you the special greetings. I earnestly pray that God may give you a serene and brilliant sunset, and an abundant entrance into supernal glory. (Great and long-continued applause.)

ADDRESS OF THE HON. WM. CUMBACK.

Mr. President and Members of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

At the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, held two years ago at Baltimore, of which Conference my colleague and myself had the honor to be members, it was the great pleasure of that body to welcome Rev. Dr. James A. Duncan and L. C. Garland, LL. D., as fraternal delegates from the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Not only were we made happy by their manly and eloquent words conveying to us your fraternal regards, but we were filled with a still deeper joy by the love letter sent us by the venerable Dr. Pierce, whose infirmities prevented him coming to us in person with his colleagues.

May we be permitted to join with you in gratitude and thankfulness that God, in his goodness, has spared his useful and holy life to still stand as a living monument of that past when we were one church organization, and to plead, with an eloquence akin to inspiration, for Christian unity, peace and love in the whole Methodist family.

Could you all have been present and have seen for yourselves the warm and earnest greeting given these honored brethren, and heard the hearty responses of the Bishops, ministers and laymen of that large body of the representatives of our church, the eloquent words of my colleague or no poor words of mine were needed to convince you that with the M. E. Church, which we have the honor to represent, fraternity is a living reality.

We have come to say so to you.

We deem ourselves fortunate and honored that the proper authority selected us at this time to come and as well as we may, respond to the loving message you sent us at Baltimore.

It is indeed a matter of congratulation and joy that in the Methodist Church in this country there exists to-day a better understanding than at any period since the separation.

The red-hot coals of difference that had been fanned into a flame by the blasts of war are dying out, so that there is nothing left now but the ashes of former conflicts.

We cannot afford to quarrel over that.

There is not enough in it to hinder complete fraternity.

We come, then, tendering to you the affection and good will of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and rejoice in the hope that you will not allow us to do more than you in binding the Methodist family in the bonds of a sincere and earnest Christian fraternity.

We are here to-day to give our hearty indorsement of the church we represent to the eloquent words of one of your fraternal messengers at Baltimore. He said to us:

"But what is fraternity? Is it only a quadrennial ceremony, a sort of ecclesiastical court formality, a specious parade of public addresses? Is it a mere form? Sir, I humbly conceive that Christian fraternity is something more than such solemn mockery—something deeper, more vital and more sacred.

"It is a great Christian movement, giving concurrent expression to the great brotherly kindness of more than a million of hearts.

"It is a sublime Christian alliance, in which charity becomes supreme over all disputations, and reaffirms its meaning, its power and its consequences."

These grand and sublime words of the now departed Dr. Duncan sent a thrill of joy to the vast assembly who had the privilege of listening to him.

We accept his definition, and in a like spirit come to you bringing with us the hearty amens of more than a million and a half of Methodists.

And why should it not be so?

If our religion is not broad enough to take in the whole Methodist family; if it be too weak to conquer hate and overcome revenge; if our Christian charity is too narrow to extend beyond State lines, and is cramped in sectional boundaries, then had we all better look into the genuineness of our conversion.

The politicians, for personal aggrandizement or party triumph, may attempt to renew past differences and fan the dying embers of past conflicts, but the Christian man can take no part in such a work.

The very essence of the Christian religion is love, and her voice is ever for peace.

It seems to me, therefore, that at this time there is a large responsibility resting on the Methodists of this nation. We are the largest denomination. We should take the lead in all good works.

What better work can we do than by example, as well as precept, to bring these many million American citizens to a proper understanding with and a right appreciation of each other.

Such a work not only subserves the great interests of religion, but it kindles anew the patriotic fires that lighted the way of a common ancestry from the thralldom of oppression to the enjoyment of liberty.

Skepticism may scoff, and infidelity may sneer, but the truth still stands that there can be no civilization worthy the name that is not the outgrowth of Christianity.

We who profess to love the gospel must so have it in our hearts that we will show in all our intercourse with each other that it is our guide—our rule of faith and practice.

I am fully convinced that if our free institutions are maintained, if our tolerant form of government remains in perpetuity, it will not be because of our armies, our navies, our increasing population, our many States, reaching from ocean to ocean, and covering this mighty continent; but rather because in all this vast population, and in every part of all these States, there may be found so many Christian men and women teaching, by precept and example, the pure and elevating doctrines of the Christian system.

From the family altars is to go out a silent influence strong enough to still the ragings of revolution, to extinguish the eruptions of anarchy, to inspire a deep and profound reverence for law and order, to so clear the vision of mankind that prejudice will not be mistaken for conscience, or policy for principle.

As Methodists we must measure up to the demands upon us.

On this question of fraternity we are rapidly coming up.

Indeed we are recognized as being already in the advance.

At our last General Conference we had as a fraternal messenger from the Presbyterian Church that distinguished divine, the Rev. Dr. F. S. Patton, of Chicago.

He was present when your delegates were introduced, and heard their kind words to us.

At the session following he was presented and delivered his message.

He alluded to the eloquent words of your fraternal delegates, and, with a joyful countenance and a hearty emphasis, he said to us: "I congratulate you on this happy consummation."

But, with a sorrow that he could not conceal, he added:

"My only regret is that your church, in this respect, is so far in advance of ours.

"The Presbyterian Church, North and South, seems like a sea whose waves roll apart; because a ledge of rocks lifts its persistent head above the waves. We have been trying to remove the obstruction—to blast the rock.

"Committees have met and editors have written, and private correspondence has been undertaken, with results that fall short of complete success.

"But what is not done by one agency will be done by another; for there is a tide of Christian brotherhood rising fast, both North and South, which, when it shall have reached its full, will hide deep and out of sight the rocks of bitter memory.

"The tides of human feeling, like the ocean, come not at human bidding, but are under divine control.

"And we are thankful for the fact that this tide, which is setting fast, though it rises too slow for those who are impatient of delay, rises at the same time too surely to make it safe for those who stand in the way of its advance."

If we are worthy the compliment paid us by Dr. Patton; if the tide of fraternal feeling in the Methodist Church has risen higher than that of any other sister church; if we do love each other more, and seem more willing to forget, let us, then, pray God that he may so honor us with a rapid growth in grace in this direction that we Methodists may be the first to raise the shout that the work of conciliation is complete, that love reigns and rules in American Methodism.

Not many months ago the President of these United States and his cabinet came to this goodly city of Atlanta to shake hands with your distinguished Governor and the good people of this State of Georgia.

The whole nation read with interest and gratitude the speeches made by the President and his cabinet, and the responses made by your Governor and other distinguished statesmen of Georgia.

The telegraph sowed the good seed all over the continent with the quickness of lightning.

The American people caught the good spirit that prompted the kind words then uttered by all the speakers, and a strange, sweet peace seemed to settle down on the hearts of all good citizens, accompanied with a good hope and a better confidence for the future.

After all, they but represented what politics may do in the work of conciliation. They pointed to the country's banner as the source of their inspiration.

We are all here to-day to show what religion may do to bring the hearts of a people of a common country in closer sympathy, holding higher than any other banner the banner of the cross.

The good seed was sown by them all over this land. Some fell among the thorns and briars of deep-rooted prejudices, and were choked to death; some fell on the stony ground of mere policy, and will be scorched and blasted in the heat of the next political campaign; some fell on the hard wayside of American politics, to be devoured, if not by the devil, by his familiar—the American demagogue.

The good seed sown by your representatives at Baltimore, two years ago, and I trust that which we have come to sow here, has and will fall on good ground, and bring forth abundantly after awhile, and that at no distant day we will all shout and sing together at a glorious harvest home.

Let us, then, hold higher and still higher the banner of the cross as the truest and best ensign of the grand and rapidly increasing hosts that are demanding peace and good will; and as men take cognizance of our fraternal spirit and brotherly kindness they will, whether skeptic or believer, be compelled to say, as did Constantine the Great: "By this sign we conquer."

Let us not halt and doubt. Let us not wait until complete fraternity will come, as come it will, from other influences.

Let the Methodists of this country, under the blessing of God, overcome any difficulties in the way, and usher in the happy day of complete harmony.

They can do it if they will. The Methodist preacher reaches every community in the land. He is everywhere. He does more to mold that potent influence—public opinion—than anybody else.

We can do more, then, from the peculiar organization of our church, than any other religious body, if we will be but true to God, true to our country, and true to the demands of our advancing civilization.

We are here to say, in behalf of the Methodist Episcopal Church, that she heartily rejoices in your prosperity, as we are confident you rejoice at ours.

Let us know each other better, and we will love each other more. We, then, on behalf of the Methodist Episcopal Church, earnestly invite you to send us your fraternal messengers when we meet in General Conference, two years hence, in Cincinnati. Let these words of love continue to be spoken and heard. Let this honest courtship go on, and after awhile it may be said of us: "Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

Lovick Pierce responded to the fraternal greetings of the messengers, who had alluded to him as the patriarch of Methodism, being in his ninety fifth year.

The President—There is an earnest desire that our venerable and beloved Dr. Lovick Pierce shall make some remarks—as many as he pleases—on this occasion. (Applause.)

Dr. Lovick Pierce, amid applause which sank into great silence as he advanced on the platform, said: Beloved brethren, I rise to thank you for your kind expression in regard to myself, and I request you to return to my brethren in the North this communication: When they can only love me I want them to send me word. (Great applause.)

I could not now say anything beyond what respect required. I do not intend to interfere with the rich feast—the Christian entertainment—with which we have been fed to-day.

When notified of my appointment as chairman of our fraternal delegation I resolved to go at any sacrifice save my life; but my heavenly Father said to me in silent words: You can do better at home than at the Conference; I became quiet as a lamb. I suppose I am the first man ninety-four years old who ever came to a general assembly as an active delegate. It is a wonder that God has allowed me to overlive in days many men greater than myself. I am glad that fraternity has come to pass in all its beauty, and in all its perfection, and in all its sacredness. (Applause.)

The chair then responded on behalf of the Conference, and of the entire connection, to the address of the messengers.

The President—the senior Bishop, R. Paine, said: It remains for the presiding officer at this moment to say that we feel deeply for the brethren of the delegation, by our words and message of love. (Applause.) This occasion marks an era in the history of our conferences. It demonstrates that the action of our beloved commissioners at Cape May was a great act, and that you recognize the binding force and obligation of the condition embodied in the paper they prepared, and acknowledge it as a finality (applause) in intercourse and fraternization, for all time to come. It is the earnest hope of the heart of him who addresses you, and of my brethren associated with me, and this whole body, that appear before you, that fraternity may become more genial, more active, and light our hearts and lives, may be knit together more closely in the love of our common Methodism under the influences of the Holy Spirit.

Sirs, the emotion of my heart is inexpressible. For twenty-eight years a travelling preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church, with fidelity to it, and preferring death to severance, unless imperative necessity, in my opinion, demanded it, for thirty odd years in the Southern Church, I feel united to Methodism by a life long labor of sixty-one years in the church as a travelling minister. (Applause.) I have taken stock in Methodism. I was not raised with predilections for it, but educated against it. Yet I became converted by examining into its doctrines and finding them eliminated of the errors of former ages. I believe its doctrines in accord with the great truths of the Bible, which are the true foundation of Christian union and harmony. We may differ in our essentials—we may differ in mode of operation—but the great doctrines of the Bible clearly understood, differentiated and eliminated of error, are the true basis of union and fraternity. That we have, and that you represent, we do not doubt. We stand on the same platform, we believe the same doctrines, and, we believe them as you teach. We are perfectly agreed. Our polity is substantially the same. We believe in going into all the world and preaching the gospel to every creature. We maintain the polity of our great Methodism, which has been so efficient. We believe in the practical precepts and experience and doctrines referred to by our honored brother (Dr. Foss,) and so eloquently expressed. You may go away and be assured that Southern Methodism is sound in her creed, sound in her experience, and striving to be pious and more sound in her practice. (Applause.) You may tell that John Wesley is honored by us as much as by our Wesleyan friends and by our brethren of the church you represent.

I was glad to hear you speak of a Pan-Methodist Conference. The proposition filled my heart in a distant home. We are willing and ready to meet the representatives

Methodism from all parts of the world. We are now essentially one, though differing in color and clime. We can meet upon a common basis. We claim to occupy that ground, and by grace we intend to maintain it.

You may go home and tell your brethren that we are a little in advance of them. We initiated the system of lay representation. You are very quick to understand these things, but you followed us. (Laughter.) You are a little behind us, sir. You claim precedence in many things, and we grant it, but we were before you in this respect. We are progressive; but festina lente—haste slowly—is our motto. We try to be conservative. Why here on this floor are laymen elected equal in number with the clerical. I know some of your people, like some of ours, feared they would not be conservative, being unaccustomed to possess ecclesiastical power, and the result would be that the itinerancy would suffer injury by the introduction of this new element.

I am happy to tell you, sir, it has been demonstrated on this floor every day that the laymen are remarkably conservative. (Applause.) If you will listen you will hear thundering "No! No!" to any proposition interfering with any important feature of Methodism. We are not afraid of lay representation. They will be the conservators, not the destroyers, of our harmony.

Sirs, in the name of my colleagues, in the name of honored brethren here, in the name of the church we represent, we receive you most cordially and gladly. (Applause.) We give these words of welcome, and our hearts confirm the words. Let there be more love and fraternity. Ye wisely say you interfere not with the subject of organic union, but present a long courtship. You have indicated that the result would be a happy union.

Into the future we cannot see. The eyes of the old men will soon close. What God may do, in his Providence, we cannot tell. I trust neither will ever flag in their faith, and that there will be mutual love and confidence.

I wish to return my thanks, and the thanks of the brethren of the Conference, for the kind and warm receptions your missionaries gave our beloved but departed brother, Bishop Marvin. He was received as a brother beloved. They will meet above. The bonds of love are strong there, and love, like moral gravitation, brings them together.

Tell your friends we have not forgotten their kindness in our necessity, when our missionaries in distant lands received aid and comfort from you. We will never forget it. Tell them we reciprocate their warm words and noble actions.

And now, brethren beloved, in the name of my colleagues, in the name of my brethren, in the name of the church we represent, we welcome you among us. We welcome you to our firesides, to our homes, to our people and to our domestic altars. (Great applause.)

The whole scene was notably sublime, and at its close the Conference arose and sung the doxology,

"Praise God, from whom all blessings flow," and without formal vote adjourned, with the benediction by the Bishop.

FIFTEENTH DAY.

FRIDAY, May 17, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour, Bishop Paine in the chair. Divine service was conducted by H. A. C. Walker.

The minutes were read and confirmed.

The chair announced the names of the Committee on Fraternal Correspondence, to wit: A. M. Shipp, E. F. Wiley, C. P. Fitzgerald, A. H. Pruitt, J. H. Riddick.

On motion it was made the order of the day on this day, at eleven o'clock, to receive the fraternal messengers from the Methodist Protestant Church.

Bishop Pierce took the chair.

Bishop Paine made a statement in reference to a bequest of Mrs. Wicks, of Maryland, of certain property in Louisiana to the Methodist Episcopal Church South. He also submitted a letter in trust to R. J. Howard. The property has so depreciated in value that it yields no profit.

The order of the day came on, being Report No. 6 of the Committee on Episcopacy, which was taken up and read.

P. A. Peterson moved as a substitute:

Resolved, That it is expedient to strengthen the episcopacy by the election of two Bishops.

W. H. Ved called for the previous question. The call was sustained by the yeas to 71 nays.

The question was put, and the substitute did not prevail.

The report was then adopted, as follows:

REPORT NO. 6—ON EPISCOPACY.

The Committee on Episcopacy respectfully report that they have maturely considered that portion of the pastoral address of the Bishops which was referred to them, and also several papers signed by individual members of your body, relating to the election of Bishops, and the committee recommend the adoption of the following resolution, to wit:

Resolved, That it is inexpedient and unnecessary at this time to increase the number of Bishops.

S. REESE, Chairman.

S. S. BRYANT, Sec.

The reports of standing committees were then called for, and the following were presented:

Report No. 7 on Itinerancy was read and laid on the table, under the rule.

Report No. 8 on Itinerancy was read.

The report, as a whole, was adopted. (See report.)

On motion of J. E. Evans it was ordered that reports to be laid on the table under the rule be not read, but printed in the Daily Christian Advocate.

W. S. Black, chairman of the Committee on Boundaries, presented Report No. 1 of that committee, which was laid on the table, under the rule.

J. E. Evans, chairman of the Committee on Revisal, presented Report No. 11 of that committee, which was laid on the table, under the rule.

He also presented Report No. 12 of that committee, which was read.

Item one was taken up.

P. Whitehead moved to amend by striking out the prefix "non."

Further action on the report was suspended for the reception of the fraternal messengers of the Methodist Protestant Church.

E. E. Wiley, chairman pro tem. of the Committee on Introductions, presented to the chair the Rev. Alexander Clark, D. D., the Rev. George R. Barr, D. D., and the Rev. F. H. M. Henderson, D. D.

The chair introduced the fraternal messengers to his colleagues, and then to the Conference, which received them standing.

The secretary then read the credentials of the fraternal messengers, as follows:

Address of the Methodist Protestant Church to the General Conference.

To the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

Dear Fathers and Brethren—By the convention of the Methodist Protestant Church, in session at Baltimore, Md., on this the twenty-third day of May, A. D. 1877, the bearers hereof, Alexander Clark, D. D., George R. Barr, D. D., F. H. M. Henderson, D. D., and Thomas J. Finch, have been duly appointed fraternal messengers to convey to you the Christian greetings of the convention, and of the church it represents. We would hereby commend them to your Christian courtesy, and respectfully ask for them a hearing by your venerable body, while they may present the wishes and feelings of the convention.

Praying in all earnestness that the great Head of the church may richly crown all your deliberations and acts, we remain your fellow laborers in the work of the everlasting gospel.

By order and in behalf of the convention.

L. W. BATES, President.

G. B. MCELROY, Sec.

Dr. Clark then stated that Mr. Finch was precluded from coming on account of illness.

The chair then presented Dr. Clark, who addressed the Conference at some length in a most eloquent and fraternal style. His address was received with great favor and applause.

Address of Alexander Clark (Editor of the Methodist Recorder), Registrar Pro Chairman of the Deputation from the Methodist Protestant Church to the General Conference of the M. E. Church South, at Atlanta, Ga., May 17, 1878.

Mr. President and Brethren: It is a pleasant duty I come to discharge—to bear to you, in behalf of a loving people, a full-hearted message of fraternity. I regret the absence of the honored layman of our deputation, Bro. Thomas J. Finch, of Ohio, who has been providentially hindered from attending this appointed interview; for we who know him well would have shared with you his genial spirit. I am happy, however, to be supported by my esteemed colleague, Prof. Henderson, of Georgia, whose words you will hear with satisfaction, and also by Dr. Barr, of Virginia, who comes with a warm heart and with eloquent lips to speak to this venerable Conference, although he is very ill this morning.

Mr. President, we have watched your proceedings with increasing interest every day. Your advanced position on the essential questions of the time, your zeal for souls, your determination to educate and evangelize the dangerous masses and the colored race, your desire to maintain the best schools and colleges and to circulate a pure literature, your missionary adventures and achievements abroad, and your very marked unity in all these Methodistic movements, have proved your vital relation to Christ, the living Savior. We feel the power of this divine presence in your midst to-day, and we know it is the Lord. (Applause.)

Brethren, we come to you bearing the love and confidence of more than one hundred thousand close kindred in Jesus Christ. We claim to be a branch of the vine which John Wesley himself planted on this Western continent, and in this very State of Georgia, before the republic itself was founded. Therefore I may speak, even if but feebly, in behalf of a related multitude who are absent.

Together, this day, brethren, we greet you in the name of our Lord Jesus, who is with us always, as with you, even to the end of the world.

The Methodist Protestant Church, in this jubilee year of her history, after nearly twenty years of strange sectional alienation, now greets you a united brotherhood, having one year ago most happily reunited, a blessed organic unity in the bonds of peace. (Applause.) You have heard the glad tidings. The scenes of that glorious consummation are beyond language to express. It was to us a moment of transfiguration. The garments of our Lord were snowy white and glistening, and Heaven was all about us. In your pulpits and by your press you congratulated us in the victory of our faith. Your sympathies reached us and warmed us, and linger with us yet. We are thoroughly consolidated, North and South, East and West, having renewed our allegiance to God, having learned patience, tolerance and something of a charity which thinketh no evil, and having resolved to save our own souls and the souls of as many as our Lord will give us. Our people are one in the gospel, which makes room for all honest opinions, however diverse on non-essential things. Within our enlarged household of faith the right of private judgment is magnified touching matters of expediency, conscience, and interpretations of Christian duty. We have learned by the very waste of our disputations to be generous toward our neighbors, and to avoid controversies which tend toward schism in the body of Christ. (Applause.)

I think our people are striving to be one in spirit, having been wounded sore by an awkward handling of the letter that killeth; for our years of separation, while hurriedly inevitable, were years of anxiety and pain and loss. But now we are ourselves again, ecclesiastically, and nothing shall divide us until Jesus comes.

"He'll know what griefs oppressed us,
When Jesus comes;
O'h, how this arms will rest us,
When Jesus comes!"

Mr. President, we greet you as Christians, as Protestants and as Methodists. This three-fold cord binds us to you and you to us. Alike do we contend against infidelity, because we are Christians. As with one voice do we cry out against the assumptions of popery, because we are Protestants. And in one glad song do we unite in the witnessing of the Spirit in justification and sanctification through the blood of the Lamb, because we are Methodists. We differ with you in polity, not in doctrine. In spiritual things we are one and indivisible. Your Bible is our Bible. Your songs are our songs, and I wish there were but one book of them for all the Methodists. (Loud applause.) Your experience is our experience. Your heart is our heart. Your Head is our Head—the Lord Jesus Christ. Your Life is our Life. We are members in common one of another, and in vital union with one blessed Lord. And in these essential unities, brethren, we greet you in love, and bring and claim a benediction.

The distinctive principles which we emphasize as a branch of the Methodist family make us respect and honor you, because you differ with us in certain outward regulations. You are suited in the garb you wear, and it is comely in our eyes—on you. We recognize you as a great company of believers, content with your name, your home and your order. We especially congratulate you, however, on the modification you have indorsed, by which these worthy laymen of your church are here as counselors and voters to-day. (Applause.) Bishop Paine, who presided on that happy fraternal occasion yesterday, in response to the eloquent addresses by Dr. Foss and Judge Cumback, pleasantly claimed a prior action in this movement, and as having led the Methodist Episcopal Church to this ground. It was indeed a noble example; for the larger body of the two seem to have imitated one of the grandest characteristics of your organization. Sometimes even a little child becomes a leader; for we claim, being a still smaller body, to have led you both in this direction (laughter) because the Methodist Protestant Church has had an equal number of laymen and ministers in both Annuals and General Conferences for fifty years. (Amen.) Indeed we are a little elated at the popularity of this principle, and hope you have the perseverance of saints who will press on toward perfection in so good a cause. And to-day the world's Methodism, of all branches, has adopted the principle of lay representation; even the old Wesleyan body of England, which I had the honor of visiting in this fraternal way two years ago, from whom you read fraternal greetings yesterday—the grandmother of us all—has incorporated the measure in her organic law, making the victory complete. (Applause.) Bishop Paine can well afford to divide honors with us on this question, I am sure. This alliance of the laity with the ministry makes us still nearer kin than we were a dozen years ago.

Your episcopacy we have not; but you love it, and honor it, and use it; and your right it is to maintain it. It is yours by adoption and regeneration, rather than by succession. (Laughter.) Your Bishops are holy men of God, and sharers of your hardest labor. We would be poor Methodists, and still worse Methodist Protestants, to deny your right of volition on this question. We greet your Bishops, and pray choicest blessings to attend them in their arduous toil. You have chosen your forms of government; and we bid you God-speed in saving souls by your chosen means. And you will admit our Arminian birthright of another choice of agency, while it is the same gospel. It is Methodistic and Protestant also to vote in the kingdom of Christ. It is a kingdom. And it is a democracy. It is both. It is an eternal theocracy, and it is an immortal republic.

We do not come to you with a plea for any sort of union while these honest differences of interpretation exist. You could not manage us. You have your hands full already with the few you have disintegrated. (Laughter.) Besides, you are large enough as a denomination. So we think. And yet we should like to surpass you both in numbers and in diligent service. Growth in grace is always beautiful. The dwarf is the deformity, and not the giant. Our gain is normal and eternal.

To take the gospel figure of the vine: The branching life we live is of God's own planting. It asks room and air and sun, and darkness, indeed, rather than ligatures for artificial and superficial grouping. This vine outgrows all framed trellises, and hides them underneath its own blossoms and leaves and fruit. (Applause.) Truth itself is always more comely than its most fashionable apparel. The features we bear must be distinct, every one's from every other's. Twin brothers' voices take each a different key in most endearing conversation. As in a family, so in the church. Uniformity itself, however sought, becomes the peril. And Methodism is none the less methodical by recognizing this principle, even at the risk of wholesale branching. The lives we live by faith in the Son of God are the true criteria.

A horticulturist who seeks uniformity among the leaves may keep himself busy with scissors clipping and clipping to secure exact correspondence in size and shape; but he is making mischief by his every touch among things of life and beauty. And when theologians and ecclesiastics strike scissors among the growing sects, merely to produce outward similarity, they do harm. Not by the leaf at all, but by the fruit is true discipleship known of God and man.

Brethren, let us supplement each other's efforts in spreading scriptural holiness over these lands. There is room for us all. But we should not be anxious to multiply meeting-houses where there is already accommodation for the people. Methodistic strength is not measured by its pews or spires. Overlapping of services wastes money, wastes men, wastes religion. Let us not crowd one another in the villages. Most all small towns have too many churches to be very pious! (Laughter.) Christianity in wood is dead. Rather let us intelligently complement each other's forces among the populous masses, and along the exposed frontiers, and in heathen lands. The various branches, by some sort of ecumenical arrangement, it seems to me, might profitably study geography awhile, even if theology a little less, and learn to keep courteously and apostolically off one another's premises. At least the Episcopal Methodism might! But you see the Methodist Protestant Church, as now reunited, has this whole continent as her own. You two older and larger bodies of Episcopal Methodism will find us monopolizers of the entire United States! (Laughter.) And we are like angels upon the earth. You may say: "Few and far between." Well, entertain us (laughter) here and there, at a venture. Don't despise us. We are many enough to love you anywhere. We have the disposition to embrace you all—the disposition to absorb both the Episcopal branches, North and South. We only lack the capacity, and are a little desirous to have the affinities regulated without beforehand! But, brethren, wherever you meet or overtake our Methodist Protestant people you will find brethren who claim your sympathies. We bespeak your prayers in their behalf. If they are allegiant to our polity you will be able to serve them, and they to serve you, without peril to either organization.

I remember the visit of two of your Bishops to Round Lake, New York, in the summer of 1871. Bishop Kavanaugh stormed our hearts and took possession, and holds the situation still. Bishop Doggett led us to the very doors of heaven by his shepherd's crook, and his voice lingers like music in our ears to this day. (Applause.) Dr. McFerrin was among the exultant multitude, glad in making others glad by the tidings of great joy. Dr. Leroy M. Lee, your veteran editor and elder, was there, and his grand argument for Christ's divinity will stand longer than any granite that may mark his grave when God shall rest him from his toil. And Dr. Sargent, too, blessed us by his ministrations there. A mighty host was fed by that lake side, and no twelve baskets were enough to contain the precious fragments of the feast. That meeting accomplished much toward the reunion of our blessed church. More recently, you, sir, were in the North, and left a potent influence for heart-union among believers. Dr. Harrison also, who now so worthily fills the place at Congress once graced by our own talented Thomas H. Stockton, of peerless power in the pulpit of his day, came into some of our chief cities a year ago, and brought the savor of Jesus' name. These visits have all been blessings to us in the cause of fraternity. We shall always welcome you to our homes, to our pulpits and to our hearts.

Mr. President, as I came toward Atlanta, at Manassas, I chanced to look at a morning paper. My eye fell upon this dispatch from a Southern city:

"Memorial day was observed here yesterday by ex-Union and ex-Confederate soldiers, and the graves of both were decorated with flowers. The blue and the gray marched together in the same procession."

I could not see the next paragraph for the glad tears that filled my eyes. My soul said: Amen! O bless the Lord, my soul! This is an old battle-ground, but here is peace. (Applause.) Jesus reigns!

And along the Midland railway, in northern and central Virginia, the music of that message seemed to thrill the sweet summer air—peace! Where redoubts had been thrown up and theologians and ecclesiastics have done such work as well as soldiers—and where fields of grain had been cut deep into the red clay by the wheels and the hoofs of war, now the green grass has crept over all the desolation; and where cannon belched fire and death, now the bright flowers are waving in beauty on every side. Nature is tenderly covering over the last scars and signs of fraternal strife. It is the finger of God showing citizens and all people who pass by, how to forgive. If soldiers of late opposing armies can strew flowers over all graves the same on one day of the year, Methodists of all branches can march and sing together every day and everywhere. (Applause.)

Heaven smiled upon us yesterday under the receding clouds, as Dr. Foss talked with us of our common heritage. Through our glad tears we saw rainbows all round about the throne. Our honored President of these United States speaks words of fraternity, reconciliation and peace, and feels it in his inmost heart. Let the churches sustain him in his policy of peace. Our Lord himself is whispering in nature, by Providence, in the movements of the times and in the gospel: Be at peace. And the Prince of Peace is in our souls this day. Our country needs the peace that Jesus gives. The churches owe duties to the literature, the art, the commerce and the politics of the American people. Together, in Jesus' name, the Methodist branches, as now organized in this country, might become a mighty power to redeem our fellow-citizens from sin, and to regenerate corrupt parties, to reconcile alienated sections, to break down communism, and to establish the peace of the republic.

Mr. President, I shall not weary you with statistics. Our membership numbers upward of one hundred and twenty-five thousand, with preachers in proportion, or a little over. The people are building churches and parsonages, generally in needed places, and giving increased attention to missions at home and abroad. We have two official weekly newspapers—the Methodist Protestant, of Baltimore, and the Methodist Recorder, issued by the Board of Publication in Pittsburg.

Besides these papers there is an excellent weekly published at Greensboro, N. C., by Bro. J. L. Michaux—the Central Protestant—and devoted more exclusively to church interests in that State, and a new weekly, of similar unofficial character, issued by Bro. Yates, at St. Mary's, on the Ohio river. The Repertory, published by Prof. D. S. Stephens, at Adrian, Mich., is a magazine of considerable influence and growing popularity. Three separate Sunday school papers are published by the board in Pittsburg, and another is announced to appear in Baltimore next month.

We have two flourishing colleges—one at Adrian, Mich., Dr. George B. McElroy, president, where large grounds and elegant and commodious buildings attract our young people of both sexes; and Western Maryland College, at Westminster, Md., under the care of Dr. J. T. Ward and an efficient faculty. We have also a young seminary at Dallarpe, Ill., and a college of much promise at Yadkin, N. C.

Our next General Conference will meet in Pittsburg, Penn., in May, 1880. It is our hope that your denomination may be represented by a fraternal visitation. You will find a hearty welcome to our city. Whatever may be the outward appearance, you will find within our homes a clear shining of fraternal love, and a hospitality which is equaled only by your own.

Mr. President, I have not forgotten the cordial greeting the General Conference of this church extended to the passing stranger at Louisville. The brotherly kindness of Bishop McTyeire on that occasion met a deeper response than he ever knew. You have cheered us when weary, again and again; we have caught warmth from your heart and courage from your eyes at every interview. Since that day of last greetings, now four years ago, Death has been busy in your ranks. Your Hamilton, of classic grace; your Linn, of sturdy eloquence; your Myers, of fervent charity; your Sehon, of burning zeal; your Munsey, of amazing gifts; your Duncan, of profound scholarship; your Bledsoe, the unequaled polemic; and your beloved Marvin, the pre-eminently devoted and able minister of Jesus Christ—all gone! If a stranger miss them so, how much more do you miss them, who counseled with them for years and years! Your venerated Enoch Pierce, whose name is dear to us all, is yet with you in the flesh, but he speaks as one whose voice is heard from the rising chariot. May there be Elishas like yourself, sir (Bishop Pierce), to succeed all these Elijahs, that the work of the Lord cease not upon the earth! (Loud and continued applause.)

The chair then presented Dr. Henderson, who followed in a forcible and telling address, which elicited hearty applause.

Address of Rev. F. H. M. Henderson, of the Methodist Protestant Church, to the General Conference of the M. E. Church South, convened in Atlanta, May 17, 1878.

Mr. President and Brethren: I feel much honored by the appointment to so pleasing a task as, by your courtesy, I now perform. I am doubly honored by the kind reception you give me with my colleagues. For this your have my sincere thanks. If your church were here assembled in its working clothes I would feel much at home; for with that I have been long familiar. But you are here in your Sunday dress, putting on your best looks and displaying your most pleasing graces. I fear I shall not be able to put on airs suitable to the occasion.

The embarrassment is still further increased by the fact that this is a family festival. You have decked your parlor for the reception of your sisters of the Methodist household. We represent one of the weaker bodies of Methodism; and I know that, unless your feast savors much of the gospel, no guest is more unwelcome than poor kin. (Laughter.) Yet I feel that it would reflect upon your piety to intimate that our presence here is less welcome from such a consideration. You have forbidden that charity which is not puffed up—"vaunteth not self." You have learned of the inspired apostle, who teaches us to "mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate." Most of all, you have been taught of Jesus, who says: "He that exalteth himself shall be abased; but he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." It is, therefore, a question whether our pride or our poverty is the greater cause of our embarrassment; for, unfortunately, they sometimes go together. (Laughter.)

It will palliate this evil also to remember that our comparative weakness is not altogether the result of idleness. Our church had a natural birth—it was born a babe. Yours was born full half grown. (Laughter.) The ruling stars of the mother church were more propitious in 1811 than in 1828. The superstition of the time favored your birth. Whether the frost killed the beans in New Hampshire, or the onion crop failed in Connecticut, or the blight destroyed the wheat in Ohio, or stocks fell in New York, or legislation threatened the tariff—all was attributed to some retribution upon the terrible sin of slavery. Hence you left the old homestead, like the Hebrews left Egypt, loaded with presents. (Laughter.) They hired and helped you to leave with your pestilence. (Renewed laughter.) You settled this beautiful land, already studded with cities and towns, with their stately temples and towering steeples. Nor did you forget to snatch, as you left, a goodly portion of the Penates. (Applause.) You could go to housekeeping the first night with all the comforts of home and shelter. Right well have you kept the goodly inheritance.

It was not so in 1828, when we parted from the household at the smaller end of a long switch. (Great laughter.) Our dear old mother held the other end (renewed laughter), for she was then administering a very strict family government. Hence we were scourged out for our "badness." Our fathers left, like Jacob, without bed or blanket, and slept the first night upon a stone for a pillow. The blue vault of the sky, all decked with stars, was their only covering. But they went, wearied, to sleep, singing, with the poet:

"Though like the wanderer,
The sun gone down,
Darkness be over me,
My rest a stone,
Yet in my dreams I'd be Nearer, my God, to thee."

(Applause.) Yes, they dreamed of heaven; they saw the ladder, and from the upper end heard the voice of the Almighty: "I am the God of Abraham and Isaac, thy father. The land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed. Thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south." (Applause and laughter.) They took courage and spread their tents, but did not forget to make that pillow their altar. Their Bethel is still erect. The God of Jacob is our God. Thus through much toil and suffering your elder sister has struggled for the comforts she now enjoys. Intermingled voices from every State, all tuned to Christian melody, she sends you greeting and brotherly love. I am one of the happy bearers of this sweet message, and only wish I had an angel's tongue to tell it.

But, pleasant as this task may be, and much as we may enjoy this feast, it is far more important for the Master's cause to encourage Christian brotherhood at home among our people. Our churches, in many places, overlap upon the same territory. It is important that we there be one in gospel work and Christian love. It is time for Christians to be magnanimous, and live far above all sectarian wranglings and petty jealousies. I hope I shall profess no friendship or love for your church here that I would not verify in my intercourse with your people. We sometimes hear that a policy of absorption is to be pursued, and our church is to be swallowed up by yours. We accept the situation, and heartily approve the plan, so far as it relates to a voluntary change of membership from your church to ours, or from ours to yours. In this contest we pray that you may come out at least second best. But a system of proselyting is too contemptibly little for high-toned Christians to indulge, and we do most heartily repudiate it. I once heard of a battle between two snakes. Each took the other's tail in his mouth, and both swallowed till there was no snake. The comparison may seem ridiculous; but if by it I have rendered the practice odious, I am content to bear your criticism. The only result of proselyting work and disaffected members would be that you would swallow our (great laughter) and we would swallow yours.

Some of your members have sought membership in our church from a misapprehension that our church is congregational in its plan of appointments. They seek refuge from the burden of supporting the itinerancy. I hope they have been converted, but I am sure it has never affected the pocket-book. It wants the inside gospel spring to make it fly open. You see them wring and tie with a long leather string. God pity their little souls! Keep them, and save them if you can. Our fathers were accused of seeking to destroy the itinerancy by the admission of lay representatives, but they repudiated the charge with indignation. They sealed the truth of their profession by stamping the itinerancy upon the organic law of their church. In that part of our constitution which cannot be altered, except by a convention called by three-fourths of all the Annual Conferences, they have written: "No rule shall be passed to abolish an efficient itinerant ministry." In the grand work of sending the gospel to the poor by a consecrated ministry we stand side by side with you. Let those stingy brethren know this, and you will save us of much mortification and deliver us from a nuisance.

But it may be asked: How can we have peace and love at home while we remember the wrongs of the past? Can we destroy the record and blot out the memory of 1828 and 1844? No; a deed once done can never be undone; a word once said can never be unsaid; nor can the record of them be blotted out. We may burn all the issues of the Advocates and the Protestant, still our deeds and words are stamped upon the growing generations. They may all perish, still the memory is God's register of facts; the conscience is his ledger, in which he writes the balance-sheet of good and evil. God writes with indelible ink. It may be like the juice of demon—colorless till held to the fire. Memory and conscience may sleep, but they must be held before the fire of God's judgment, and then every word can be read. The phonograph comes with its startling revelations. It may be that in comparing the very speeches we make will be resurrected from the rubbish of the walls that echoed them.

No, there is no hope in oblivion. History cannot be stifled. There is no such thing as oblivion. Shall we, then, remember only to hate and devour one another? No; there is hope in the gospel. Stand with me upon the hill Golgotha. Look at Jesus upon the cross. See him grow pale and faint, his head drooping, and the clammy death-sweat settling upon his brow. He casts a glance at the city that denied him lodging, the Jews that said: "Crucify him; his blood be upon us and our children;" the soldiers that nailed him to the cross. But hush! He is about to speak. Silent be every tongue, motionless every muscle. Let us catch those dying words: "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." Ah! this is the key-note of the gospel, the herald of peace. We cannot forget, but we can forgive. We must forgive if we would be forgiven. In the spirit of meekness and forgiveness the Methodist Protestant Church sends you peace and love. From her altar beneath the cross of Jesus she catches the music of the heavenly host that hovered over the babe of Bethlehem: "Glory to God in the highest; on earth, peace and good will to men." (Loud applause.

Editorial Notes.

Conference, in the last days of its session, acts rapidly and sometimes hurriedly upon reports. Among the things done we may mention: The clause, "Do you expect to be made perfect in this life?" has been restored to its old place in the Discipline. The limitation of the presiding elders' districts has been extended from fourteen to twenty appointments. And this is all that has been done on the subject of the presiding eldership. A number of minor changes have been made in the Discipline but none of a radical character. Missionary matters remain as they were, with the exception that home missions takes the place of domestic missions. The change is only in the name. The report on the Publishing House, which has been adopted leaves it about where it was. The agent, however, is now under the control and direction of the Book Committee, and authority is given for the sale of part of the property, and for the sale of all, if found necessary. Provision is made for an appeal for aid when the Bishops deem it advisable. The New Orleans Depository is to be discontinued, and its affairs wound up as soon as practicable. Dr. J. B. McFerrin was elected agent of the Publishing House; Dr. E. F. Fitzgerald, editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate; Dr. Cunningham was re-elected editor of the Sunday school periodicals; Dr. Summers was re-elected book editor, and Rev. A. W. Wilson, D. D., of Baltimore, was elected missionary secretary.

During the last week of the session there was much fraternity. We had early in the week the farewells of Dr. Foss and of the Methodist Protestant brethren. Then came the reception of Rev. Dr. Douglas, fraternal representative of the Methodist Church of Canada. It was generally conceded that Dr. Douglas made the most finished and eloquent address of any of the fraternal messengers. On Wednesday the last of the fraternals were received in the persons of Rev. W. J. Gaines and Rev. W. D. Johnson, who came as the representatives of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. They were stout, good-looking negroes, and made very creditable speeches, to which Bishop McTyeire responded in fitting terms. At this writing—Thursday night, May 2—the business of the session is nearly completed, and it is thought that the General Conference will adjourn some time to-morrow. On the whole, not very much has been done, but it may be all the better for that. The Publishing House has been the most important matter. It was considered patiently. The result and final action were not unanimously adopted. We are not altogether satisfied with the plan and policy determined upon, but it may be the best that could be devised.

May 2, 18—.

May 2d—The General Conference adjourned to day. It was a busy day. Many reports were acted on—some by amendment and adoption, and some by indefinite postponement. A number of papers were left on the table, not being reached when the hour of adjournment came. The Book Committee was increased from nine to thirteen, the most of the members residing in Nashville. For particulars our readers must wait for the proceedings. Nothing of much importance was done, and nearly all that was done was of doubtful utility. Many members left for home on Friday afternoon, and many more on Saturday morning. There is to be an increase in the local church papers. Dr. Redford announced his purpose of starting a paper at Louisville, to be called the Southern Methodist. The Southern Christian Advocate, with Dr. Kennedy for editor, is to be published in South Carolina, and Mr. Burke will publish the Wesleyan Methodist at Macon, Ga., with Dr. A. G. Haygood for editor.

After the present number of the ADVOCATE we shall have more space for general reading matter. The proceedings of the General Conference—reports, etc.—will be given in the course of the next week or two; but we have no doubt our readers are getting hungry for something else. We are still receiving communications without the name of the writer, articles too long for our use, and serials and poetry. Remember that four letter pages, or foolscap, not too closely written, is as long as an article should be. We have not time to condense or rewrite articles sent us. We desire items from the work, but give only the facts and the results. Many communications on this subject filling half a column, could be given in ten lines. Writers of obituaries can condense better than we can condense for them. The main points in a religious character can be given in a dozen lines usually. Often we receive a long obituary, and with it a very long and elaborate tribute of respect and voluminous resolutions. These tributes and resolutions are generally the same—respectful and devout platitudes and commonplaces, very well in their time and place; but the mention that such have been adopted by the Sunday school or the Quarterly Conference should suffice.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The chair responded in Bishop Pierce's happiest vein.

The President (Bishop Pierce) said: Brethren, on behalf of myself, and I have no doubt for the Conference over which it is my lot to preside to-day, I say to you that we have heard with gladness your words of love, and your message of fellowship and fraternity. The Spirit of Christ in us responds to the Spirit of Christ in you. Mutual love is the law fundamental to Christianity, and binds alike all its disciples.

We acknowledge the brotherhood of the human race. We can say, we do say: Grace be with all them who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. But I confess our hearts go out in a freer, warmer gush to all the people called Methodists. (Applause.) There is a charm in the name. It is full of precious histories. Its memories are sacred, its associations are delightful. The very sound of the word thrills our hearts and appeals to our religious instincts. At the mention of it our denominational predilections rally around it to intensify our sympathies and kindle our love with a more fervid glow.

For a long time your church stood alone in the world of Methodism, the representative of a great principle, which, when you affirmed it, roused a fearful, bitter controversy. Far back in the years that are gone, though but a boy, I well remember it. I remember reading the Wesleyan Vindicator and Mutual Rights. They contributed to mold my convictions of church government and polity. These convictions abide with me to this day.

You intimated that amid the passions, prejudices, excitements and alienations of that evil day you went from us. Our people perhaps erred in this discipline, for it was a day of excitement and trouble. My father, who yet survives, and to whom you so kindly alluded, was an active opponent of the principle you affirmed; but in the lapse of years we have reconsidered the matter, and come around to your platform. (Applause and laughter.) We have adopted your principle, modified somewhat in form and application; nevertheless, we recognize it. We like it. We are not afraid of it. We have seen nothing to awaken apprehensions. Bishop Paine declared yesterday: We have found it a conservative element—a break-water against change and innovation—a protective conservatism of the institutions and landmarks of the Methodism transmitted to us by our fathers.

We wish you, sirs great prosperity. You have nothing to fear from us. We do not design to encroach upon you, but we rejoice that your capacity is not large enough to swallow us. (Laughter.) We wish you a healthy, normal growth; and if in the loneliness of your separation, which you have so beautifully described, you should ever be inclined to return to the mother's household, let me assure you she has long since dropped the "switch" from her hands (great applause) not because it is worn out, but because she has no desire to use it. (Applause.) She is ready to give the kiss of peace and reconciliation, and fall on to rest in her arms.

It is improper, perhaps, to prolong these remarks. ("Go on! Go on!") Let me assure you, brethren, we are glad to see you. We have been delighted to hear you. It has been a feast to our souls—an intellectual and Christian feast—in Methodist phrase, a "love feast." (Applause.) Let me bid you welcome to the hospitality of the brethren, to the brotherly kindness and fellowship of this body, to all the civilities of our social life. (Applause.)

The Conference rose and sang, "All hail the power of Jesus' name."

Dr. Clark stated that Dr. Barr excused himself from speaking on account of indisposition.

After which the regular business was resumed being the consideration of the motion of P. Whitehead to amend item one of Report No. 11 on Revisal by striking out the prefix "non."

Mr. Whitehead preferred as a substitute the action proposed in the following resolution offered by himself and J. E. Edwards:

Resolved, That the Committee on Revisal be instructed to inquire into the expediency of amending the Discipline by adding to chapter 7, section 1, paragraph 5 the following: "And any act of a preacher in charge receiving such minister into the communion of the church, as an ordinary applicant would be received, shall be ab initio null and void, and all claim to membership founded upon such act shall be invalid;" and by adding the same clause (except that "member" shall be substituted for "minister?") to paragraph 5, section 3, of the same chapter.

He said the need for such an addition, expressly inhibiting such readmissions, is clear from the fact that, though the case seems to be plain, there have been conflicting episcopal decisions. In the Virginia Conference a preacher was expelled from our Conference and our decision affirmed by the General Conference on appeal; yet one of the ablest of the College of Bishops ruled out a charge of mal administration against the preacher who admitted that expelled preacher into communion of one of our churches in Petersburg without compliance on his part with the requisitions of the case—coming simply as a man who had just been converted—making no acknowledgments of any sort with reference to the crime for which he was expelled. Other Bishops, in reference to far weaker cases, have ruled precisely the opposite.

If the decree be admitted that such admissions are proper, the decisions of our courts of trial are completely nullified. Of what use is it to try a man and expel him if he can come back by the act of the preacher in charge? The Annual Conference assumes his innocence until his guilt be established. By testimony and a fair trial it is established. He appeals and the sentence of exclusion is affirmed. Yet it is held that he may immediately apply, as any other sinner, never a member, never accused, never condemned, would apply, and professing no other repentance than a general one which he professed while defending himself at the trial before his conviction, he, immediately after conviction, is allowed to stand where he stood before. Thus a sentence of exclusion, made by all the courts of the church, is set aside by the act of a preacher in charge. We need the additional clause to prohibit all such pretended admissions and to pronounce invalid the claims to membership founded thereon.

J. B. McGehee moved the previous question. The call was not sustained.

Mr. Abbey said no power could come between the pastor and the man himself who applies for membership.

Mr. Winfield spoke, making the following points against Mr. Whitehead's substitute:

1. Requiring a man to confess the very act for which he was expelled.

2. The minister is the absolute judge of who is a proper person to be admitted into the church, and is responsible to his peers, and not to a bishop.

3. Has a bishop the right to decide whether a man is properly admitted into the church?

4. A man expelled is to be received on just such repentance as is demanded of other persons.

5. No bishop can invade the prerogatives of a pastor. He is alone responsible. And if he believes a man innocent of the charge for which he was expelled, he can receive him and be responsible to his peers and they can punish him for mal administration.

6. This change proposes to say that every man expelled is guilty—and would keep the man innocently expelled—shall not be received back.

Mr. Andrews (clerical, Alabama Conference) hoped the Conference would adopt the resolution, and forever prevent a man from avoiding the penalties of expulsion by joining de novo. The amendment of the law would make conflicting decisions impossible.

Mr. Hargrove thought the administrator of the Discipline ought to be held to responsibility. If a man got in improperly, A man tried and convicted by a court of the church cannot be enrolled in another charge without repenting of the particular sin he was expelled for. A general repentance would not do. If the man was admitted his membership could not be contested.

Mr. Kelley (clerical, Tennessee Conference) said: Underlying the questions at issue are two great principles which are profounder than any mere questions of forms. One is the question of necessary practice. Shall every pastor be sure he can receive a member into the church, be sure that such a man has never before been a member of the church? This, in our widespread territory, is impracticable. What the law expects of him is reasonable care to acquaint himself with his present fitness. He may, with or without a certificate, receive all persons of whose fitness he is fully convinced—a certificate being only one form of evidence. If he knows the man to be an expelled member, far greater care must be taken before he ought to be received; but of that evidence, by our law, the pastor is the final judge. In other churches, sessions come in, but with us the pastor stands alone the judge of fitness.

If the expelled member asks for restoration the pastor is estopped; he does not do this—only the tribunal which passed upon the case originally can do this. The ordinary man has but one door open to him; the expelled man has two—one restoration, the other reception. Removals and distance from former places of trial demand this as a practical necessity.

Only on this ground can Bishop McTyeire's decision be supported. He argues the act of the pastor as premature, but admits the legality of its result. Beyond all question, if reception de novo is not of the methods open to an expelled man, then the act of the pastor was ab initio null and void, and the decision of the Bishop fallacious; but admit this, and the criticisms thereon fall to the ground.

But on higher than judicial grounds the law, as laid down by the Master himself, is that every man who repents has a right to such membership, though he may have been expelled seventy times seven. While we hold, as we do, that the pastor must judge of every candidate for membership on the basis of his present status—believing, as we do, in the possibility of apostasy and restoration to the favor of God—we dare not; in the name of church law or order, put a barrier between any repentant man and a place in the church which Jesus Christ does not himself erect. (Dr. Andrews called the speaker to order. The chair decided him in order.)

The speaker thanked the chair for his decision, and said: I thought an appeal to the words of Jesus Christ always in order in a Methodist Conference.

Our position is this: All are entitled to reception by a pastor satisfied of their repentance. No pastor dare restore a member expelled by a church court; this the court alone can do. To exercise the right of receiving an expelled member is a fearful prerogative, yet it inheres in the pastor by the law of the Master, and he must use it with due care.

After discussion, the hour of adjournment approaching, the report, with the amendment, was laid on the table, P. A. Peterson having the floor.

Thomas O. Summers and A. G. Haygood offered resolutions concerning the centennial celebration of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America, which were read and referred to the Committee on the Ecumenical Conference.

C. K. Marshall, chairman of the Committee on Sunday Schools, presented Report No. 5 of that committee, which was laid on the table.

C. K. Marshall, chairman of the Committee on the Hymn-Book, presented Report No. 1 of that committee, which was laid on the table.

E. H. Pottle stated that if he had been present at the time when Report No. 2 of the Committee on Credentials and the minority report were acted on he would have voted for the majority and against the minority report.

Conference adjourned with the benediction by the Bishop.

Report No. 5 of the Committee on Publishing Interests.

The Committee on Publishing Interests beg leave to submit their Report No. 5, as follows:

In the absence of full and satisfactory information upon the subject of the New Orleans Depository and some other matters referred to special sub committees, and not yet reported upon, we deem it advisable, in view of the advanced state of the other business of the General Conference, and the importance of giving ample time to the Conference for the consideration of the grave interests referred to us, to submit without further delay the following statements and suggestions, reserving other matters for subsequent reports:

The report of A. H. Redford, agent, as found on the first page of his third quadrennial exhibit shows the assets of the Publishing House to amount to the sum of $569,091.84, and the liabilities to the sum of $270,508.67, leaving a balance in favor of the house of $298,582.87. These figures are delusive, in our judgment, as estimates of value in any purpose or plan of liquidation, in the following particulars, viz:

1. In estimating the merchandise too high, considering its character and condition, as the residuum of an old stock, in large measure. Especially is this the case if it is to be thrown at once upon the market.

2. The accounts and bills receivable are put at par, without reference to losses by reason of insolvency, non-payment, cost and delay of collections. We fear that not more than one-half of this sum will be realized if the accounts and notes are turned over to other parties to collect, and yet we believe that largely more than this amount can be collected if they are retained and collected by a judicious and active agent for the church.

3. The real estate is put at cost, with the addition of about $15,000 of expense occasioned by the taking down and rebuilding of one of the walls of the house, and the loss occasioned by the burning of the old building. It is conceded by all who have been consulted on the subject, including the agent himself, that although it would be worth much more to us if we were able to retain it, it cannot be expected to bring more than $125,000 upon the market.

4. The New Orleans Depository debt reported, we have good reason to believe, from all the information we have been able to obtain, ought not to be estimated as available assets at all, and is not really relied upon as such by the agent at Nashville.

5. The stereotype plates, upon the market, we believe, could not be relied upon to produce more than $20,000. They are estimated by Litton, the expert, at the sum of $70,373.24. If retained and used by us they would probably be worth his estimates.

6. The wood cuts and electrotypes we would reduce to one-half—that is, to the sum of $2,301.70.

7. The type account and fixtures, engines and presses, mailing and folding machines and safe and furniture, estimated in the exhibit at $59,360.33, we put at half—say $29,680.17.

8. The lots in Nashville estimated at $1,600, we set down at $1,000.

All other items of the exhibit may be regarded as substantially correct.

The result of this recasting of the statements of assets will be as follows:

Merchandise on hand	$17,234 19
Cash	116 81
Accounts and bills receivable	30,847 52
Real estate	125,000 00
Stereotype plates and foundry	20,802 12
Wood cuts and electrotypes	2,301 70
Type account and fixtures, including and folding machines, safe and furniture	29,680 17
Copyrights	1,067 00
Paper, ink, sheet stock, etc	3,617 67
Two lots in Nashville	1,000 00
Total	$231,459 78

The difference in these estimates is as follows:

Agent's estimate	$569,091 84
Our estimate	231,459 78
Difference	$337,632 06
Litton (the expert's) estimate, corrected	316,931 60
Our estimate	231,459 78
Difference	$100,501 82
Balance in favor of house, per Litton's statement, corrected	$47,871 48

(See statement filed, marked "A.")

STATEMENT "A."

Statement of assets as made by expert, Isaac Litton, and others' account as to real estate upon which he insisted on valuation, and the New Orleans Depository, which ought to be omitted.

Unpaid taxes	1,500 00
Total	$ 283,508 67
Balance in favor of Publishing House	$ 12,989 33

We deem it unnecessary to go into the causes of these losses and this depreciation, beyond a mere assignment of some of them, to wit:

1. Injudicious expenditure in building.
2. Rebuilding rendered necessary by defectiveness of one of the main walls of the building.
3. Fire.
4. Excessive and injudicious credit.
5. High rates of interest and discount and cost of exchange under the methods of business adopted and carried on by the agent.
6. High salaries.
7. General depreciation of values in consequence of the monetary pressure since August, 1873.

II.—LIABILITIES.

These do not vary materially from the statement of the agent. We restate the same upon the basis of the corrections made by Litton, the expert as follows, to wit:

Bonded debt, secured by lien upon the real estate, fixtures and other property, as per cent
Due the 7 per cent	$ 60,000 00
Due do 10 per cent	15,000 00
	100,000 00
Total bonded debt	$ 175,000 00
Floating debt:
Bonds or notes bearing 6 per cent. interest	$ 5,967 58

Note, or bond to widows' fund, orphans' fund
Taxes	2,500 00
Interest to April 1, time of agent's report	3,000 00
Open account for Ledger, as per statement No. 2 [illegible]	5,625 74
Open account for Ledger, as per statement No. 2 [illegible]	20,521 25
Total	$ 269,928 68
On account of assets, as ascertained by us	233,459 78
Balance against house	$ 36,468 85

The interest on the above items has been and is now accumulating at the rate of $60 per day.

III.—RELIEF.

Is there any relief from this confessed indebtedness and embarrassment? If so, what is it? This is the great absorbing question to be answered by this General Conference, by reason of its relations to the subject and to the church, which looks with anxious solicitude to us for the solution of this most difficult problem.

With, we trust, a becoming sense of the gravity of the question and the issues involved in it, we respectfully submit that it is needless to review the past, except for two purposes, viz:

1. To secure a settlement of the transactions of the present agent, based upon the principles of equity and justice, which govern in all cases where the relation of principal and agent exists. This settlement, in our judgment, should be made by a committee of competent, experienced, firm, fair minded men, who will devote the necessary time and attention to it, and who should have such clerical and other assistance as may be necessary. It would be unfair to impracticable to make such settlement here and now, in view of the brevity of our stay, and the absence of important details of information which would be essential to its intelligent completion.

2. To obtain light to guide us in the future.

After more than two weeks careful investigation and earnest consideration, we are prepared to recommend:

1. The continuance of the Publishing House under an agency so modified and guarded as to give it great conservatism and a larger assurance of safety in its operations, and also commend it to a more hearty and liberal support by the church in our borders.

2. The suit, with reference to liens already outstanding upon it, in part or the whole of our real estate and every other species of property now belonging to the house, so far as the same can be spared, and the prompt application of the proceeds to the payment of its present outstanding debts.

3. The issue, whenever in the judgment of the College of Bishops it may be deemed desirable by themselves, of an appeal to the church for further donations to aid in extricating the house from its embarrassment.

In order to render effective these several suggestions we have above we offer for adoption by the General Conference the following regulations to be inserted in the Discipline, and in the journal of this General Conference, in place of what appears in the journal of the General Conference of 1874 on pages 564, 565, 566, regulations for the Publishing House, which regulations are intended to be repealed by this action:

EXHIBIT "H"—I.—PUBLISHING HOUSE.

1. There shall be an establishment in the city of Nashville, Tenn., for the purpose of manufacturing stereotype plates, publishing books, to be called "The Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South," and to be under the control of the general book agent, to be called the book agent of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and a committee, to be called the Book Committee, all of whom shall be elected by the General Conference—the Book Committee upon the nomination of a committee of nine, to be appointed by the chair.

2. The object of this institution shall be to advance the cause of Christianity by disseminating religious knowledge and useful literature and scientific information in the form of books, tracts and periodicals.

II.—DUTIES OF THE GENERAL BOOK AGENT.

The general book agent shall have charge of the funds, stocks, fixtures and real estate, and all other property of the Publishing House, and shall be responsible to said Conference for the prudent use and management of the same, under the direction of the Book Committee. He shall make monthly reports to the Book Committee, showing the exact state of his business and the condition of the house, and shall make an exhibit on the first day of June in each year, and publish the same in the Nashville Christian Advocate for one month, to the several Annual Conferences, and give a full account of the state and progress of the business to the General Conference. All his reports and exhibits shall be carefully audited by the Book Committee, and certified to as the same.

He shall publish such books, tracts only as are approved by the book editor, to be hereinafter provided for; and in case of difference between the book agent and book editor, the matter shall be referred to the Book Committee. He shall supply, as far as practicable, the demands of the church for books, tracts and periodicals, availing himself of the facilities of other establishments for their publication at the cheapest rates; and in all his investments in the manufacturing of books he shall be governed strictly by the principles of economy.

He shall sell the books for cash or its equivalent.

He shall make no investments in grounds, houses or permanent fixtures without the authority of the Book Committee.

III.—THE BOOK COMMITTEE.

There shall be a Book Committee of thirteen—six clerical and seven lay—seven of which committee shall reside in or near Nashville, Tenn.

They shall have full power:

1. To prescribe rules and regulations, not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter, for the government of the agent elected by the General Conference to conduct the business of the same.

2. To require said agent to report to them, at least once a month, the state of the current business of the house, and the result of the operations of the same during that period.

3. To settle with the present and any future agent upon the principles which govern the relations between principal and agent, embracing the individual transactions with him as agent, and ascertain the state of the accounts between him and the house, when and as they may think proper; provided such settlement with such future agent shall be made at least once a year, and the result of the same be reported to the several Annual Conferences, and also to the General Conference.

4. To suspend said agent at any time for mismanagement or misconduct in office, and appoint another temporarily in his stead, for such time as they may deem necessary during the intervals of the General Conference.

5. To enter into negotiations with the creditors of the house for an extension of time upon, and an adjustment of, their debts.

6. To see that said debts be paid as rapidly as practicable, out of collections from debts due the house and out of any other funds that may be secured for this purpose, and according to some regular system.

7. To dispose, through the agent, of three fourths of the real estate, consisting of the Publishing House building, and the ground upon which the same is located, and of all other real estate, provided such sale can be made upon fair terms; and if such sale of part cannot be advantageously made by reason of its connection with the residue of said property, then to sell the whole of the same, and all or such as they may deem best of the fixtures machinery and furniture of every kind, if a reasonable price in their judgment, be obtained; and after such sale in either event to be made with the sanction and approval of the creditors who have a lien upon the same, and the secured indorsers, who are liable for the other debts of the house. In the event such consent cannot be obtained, said committee is authorized to institute such proceedings, through the agent, as may be deemed necessary to secure such sale of part or the whole, as may be deemed advisable, the proceeds of the same to go to the payment of the debts of the house according to their several priorities.

8. To fix the salaries of the agent and editors at Nashville, provided the salaries do not exceed the following sums, to wit: To the agent, $——; to the book editor, $——; to the editor of the Christian Advocate, $——; to the editor of Sunday-school publications, $2,500. During the intervals of the General Conference they, and one or more of the Bishops shall have the power to fill vacancies in their own body, the agency or in the editorial corps at Nashville.

9. To keep a faithful record of all proceedings, and to make a full and faithful report of all their acts and doings to the General Conference.

IV.—DEPOSITORIES.

The New Orleans Depositary shall be closed up as soon as may be practicable, and its affairs wound up by a committee, through the agent, in such manner as they may think to be most judicious.

V.—NO OTHER DEPOSITORIES.

No other depositories shall be established.

VI.—GENERAL CONFERENCE PERIODICALS AND EDITORS.

1. The general book agent shall be authorized to publish a weekly periodical newspaper, to be called the Christian Advocate, the editor of which shall be elected by the General Conference.

2. There shall also be a book editor, who shall edit all the books of our publication except our Sunday-school books, which shall be edited by the Sunday-school editor. The general book agent shall be authorized to publish the Sunday School Magazine, Lesson Papers, the Sunday Visitor, Our Little People and other Sunday-school publications as they may deem proper, all of which shall be edited by the Sunday-school editor, who shall be elected by the General Conference. It is provided, further, that if additional editorial labor becomes necessary, the Book Committee, with the general book agent, and one of the Bishops, in the interval of the General Conference, shall have authority to elect additional editors or editors, who shall come under the same rules as to duty, with the general book agent and other editors.

VII.—DUTIES OF THE PUBLISHING HOUSE.

1. The affairs of the Publishing House shall be so conducted as to secure the largest legitimate profits consistent with the above-named objects.

2. The above-named officers, to be elected by the General Conference, and any others hereafter elected, shall constitute a Book Committee, with the exception that the Bishops, while they may be present at the meetings of the Committee, shall not vote.

VIII.—OFFICE RELATIONS OF AGENT AND EDITORS.

1. The above-named officers, to be elected by the General Conference, and any others hereafter elected, shall constitute a Book Committee, with the exception that the Bishops, while they may be present at the meetings of the Committee, shall not vote.

2. The agent shall be appointed to go into office as soon as practicable after the adjournment of the General Conference, and shall hold his office until his successor shall be elected and qualified, unless sooner removed by the General Conference.

3. The agent shall be required to give bond, with good security, in the sum of $——, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties, and for the payment over to his successor in office, or to the Book Committee, of all moneys, books, papers, and other property belonging to the Publishing House, or to the Church, which may be in his hands or under his control at the time of his removal from office, or at any time when required by the Book Committee.

4. The agent shall be required to report to the Book Committee at each regular meeting, and to the General Conference, a full statement of the business of the Publishing House, and of the condition of the same, and to perform such other duties as may be required of him by the Book Committee or the General Conference.

5. The agent shall be required to make out and present to the Book Committee, at each regular meeting, a list of all persons employed in the Publishing House, with the salary of each, and the Committee shall have power to increase or diminish the salaries of employés, or to discharge them, as they may deem best for the interests of the house.

6. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of all sales of books, and of all moneys received and paid out, and to take receipts for the same, and to keep a correct account of all debts due to the house, and of all debts owing by the house, and to present a full statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

7. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the cost of paper, printing, binding, and all other expenses of publishing each publication issued by the house, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

8. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number sold, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

9. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number on hand, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

10. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number sold, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

11. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number on hand, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

12. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number sold, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

13. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number on hand, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

14. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number sold, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

15. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number on hand, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

16. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number sold, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

17. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number on hand, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

18. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number sold, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

19. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number on hand, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

20. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number sold, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

21. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number on hand, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

22. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number sold, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

23. The agent shall be required to keep a correct account of the number of each publication issued by the house, and of the number on hand, and to present a statement of the same to the Book Committee at each regular meeting.

Reports of Standing Committees to the General Conference.

Report No. 9 of the Committee on Revisal.

The Committee on Revisal beg leave to present as their Report No. 9:

1. That they have considered a resolution signed by C. G. Andrews and H. F. Johnson, proposing to amend answer 1 to question 7, section 2, chapter 2 page 45 of the Discipline, so that Annual Conferences shall sit with open doors without a vote ordering it, and recommend concurrence, and that said answer be stricken out, and the following inserted in its place: "Ans. 1. The Conference shall proceed with open doors, unless, by vote, it orders otherwise."

2. With reference to a memorial from the New Orleans District Conference in regard to appointment of class-leaders, your committee recommend that answer 2, section 4, chapter 3, page 75 of the Discipline be amended by inserting "annually" after the word "leaders," so that it will read: "Ans. 2. To appoint all the leaders annually, and change them when he sees it necessary."

3. Respecting the resolution signed J. S. Key, J. B. McGehee and others, asking provision against undue multiplication of churches, your committee recommend concurrence, and that the following paragraph be added to the Discipline, chapter II, section 1 question 1, answer 2, pages 1723: "Provided, however, that no house of worship shall be built unless the authority of the Quarterly Conference shall first have been obtained;" so that the answer shall read:

"In order more effectually to prevent our people from contracting debts which they are not able to discharge, it shall be the duty of the Quarterly Conference of every circuit and station, where it is contemplated to build a house or houses of worship, to secure the ground on which such house or houses are to be built, according to our deed of settlements, which deed must be legally executed; and also said Quarterly Conference shall appoint a judicious committee of at least three members of our church, who shall form an estimate of the amount necessary to build; and three-fourths of the money, according to such estimate, shall be secured or subscribed before any such building shall be commenced; Provided, however, that no house of worship shall be built unless the authority of the Quarterly Conference shall first have been obtained."

Respectfully submitted.

Presented and laid on the table, Thursday, May 16, 1878.

Report No. 10 of the Committee on Revisal.

Having carefully considered sundry papers referred to them, your committee report as follows:

With the paper signed by W. S. Johnson and G. W. Hayes, and asking that answer 3, section 5, page 61 of the Discipline be amended by adding, after the words "twelve months," "and a list of names shall be kept, but not registered as members," we respectfully recommend non-concurrence.

With the paper signed by Thomas O. Summers and A. G. Haygood, asking that the word "of" be restored in the heading of article 5 of the twenty-five articles, we recommend concurrence, so that the heading shall read: "Of the Sufficiency of the Holy Scriptures for Salvation."

With the paper signed by R. K. Hargrove and O. R. Blue, asking an addition to answer 2, section 5, chapter 2 page 62, we concur. The whole of answer 2 will then read thus: "A secretary shall be elected annually, at the first meeting after the session of the Annual Conference. He shall make a record of the proceedings, and shall keep in a book and return to the Quarterly Conference all the statistics which the Discipline requires to be reported to an Annual Conference. He shall enter in chronological order, in a permanent register, the full names of all who shall join the church, with the time and manner of the reception and disposal of each, distinguishing between local elders, deacons and preachers, white persons, colored persons and Indians, and shall make a permanent record of all the baptisms and marriages within the congregation, and shall furnish the pastor with an alphabetical roll of the church."

With the paper signed by John Bareroft and H. W. Foote, asking that sundry items of business be transferred from the Quarterly to the District Conference, we respectfully recommend non-concurrence, in conformity to a report already made by us, and adopted by the Conference.

With the paper signed by Polin Marchisano and R. R. Hester, in reference to trustees, we recommend concurrence. As amended, question 1, answer 2, section 15, chapter 3, page 109 will read thus: "Trustees of our parsonages or churches must be at least twenty-one years of age, and must all be members of our church when proper persons can be had, otherwise one-third of each board may be elected from without." And the answer to question 1, section 1, chapter 2, page 52, will read: "All the traveling and local preachers, including superannuated preachers residing within the circuit or station (whether without or within the circuits of the Annual Conferences to which they belong), with the exhorters, stewards, trustees who become themselves of the church, and class-leaders of the respective circuits, stations, missions, together with the superintendents of Sunday schools who are members of the church, and secretaries of Church Conferences, and none others."

With the memorial from the North Carolina Conference, asking "to revise and enlarge the Discipline by appending to each of the 18 forty-five articles the scripture proof, the same either in full quotations or by marginal references to the books, chapters and verses," we respectfully recommend non-concurrence.

In reference to the paper signed by S. Black and J. T. Medley, asking that "this General Conference define in unmistakable language what is to be understood by the constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church South," your committee think no action necessary.

Respectfully submitted.

Report No. 3 of the Committee on Sunday Schools.

The committee have considered the resolution signed by T. J. Magruder and Samuel Rodgers, in relation to encouraging Sunday school children to attend upon public worship, and recommend the following: In chapter 5, section 5, "On Sunday Schools," page 122 after the words "to visit the Sunday schools as often as practicable," in the third line from the bottom, add: "To secure, as far as possible, with the aid of officers and teachers and parents, the regular attendance of the scholars upon divine service." Respectfully,

Report No. 4 of the Committee on Sunday Schools.

Your sub-committee, to whom was referred the resolution of W. F. Cook and W. H. Potter, suggesting the formation of a connectional Sunday School Union, together with the resolution signed by L. Parks, N. T. Lupton, J. B. West and W. Burr, requesting the Committee on Sunday Schools to inquire into the "expediency of constituting a Sunday School Board," beg to recommend the following, to wit:

That answer 1 in section 5, chapter 5, page 124 of the Discipline be altered by striking out the word "secretary," in the fifth line of answer 1, and inserting the word "editor" in lieu thereof, so that the answer shall read as follows:

"1. Each Annual Conference shall elect a corresponding secretary, to represent the Sunday school interests of that Conference to the Sunday school editor, elected by the General Conference."

That after paragraph 4 of same chapter and section another paragraph be inserted, to be numbered 5, to read as follows:

"5. The General Conference shall elect a committee of five, of which the Sunday school editor shall be chairman, to provide for the publication of Sunday school books and periodicals, and have the general supervision of our Sunday school interests with power to appoint a secretary, if it is deemed necessary."

Respectfully submitted.

Report No. 12 of the Committee on Finance.

Your Committee on Finance, have considered a resolution signed by J. D. Giddings, R. Alexander and F. G. John "in regard to the contraction of debts and creating liens upon the property of the church, in connection of any of our churches, parsonages, institutions of learning, etc., and whether it is advisable and practicable to establish a permanent rule or law prohibiting the trustees of church property from contracting debts and creating liens upon such property," and instructed me to report:

1. Your committee recommend that the Discipline, chapter II, section 1, answer 3, next to last line in answer, the words "or subscribed" be stricken out, and that the latter part of said section after semicolon shall read: "And three-fourths of the money, according to such estimate, shall be secured before any such building shall be commenced."

2. Your committee have instructed me further to report that they recommend that a new section, to be numbered Section 5—On Creating Liens upon Church Property—be added to chapter II of the Discipline, at the end of the chapter, as follows:

"Sec. 5. On Creating Liens upon Church Property.

"1. No person or persons or board of trustees shall have authority to make or create any mortgage or other contract lien upon church property."

Report No. 13 of the Committee on Finance.

Your Finance Committee, to whom was referred a resolution signed by W. S. Johnson and A. B. Winfield, requesting your committee to consider the expediency of providing for a financial report to cover the time between the fourth Quarterly Conference and the session of the Annual Conference, duly considered the same, and have instructed me to report that they do not consider that there is any legislation required on the subject.

Report No. 11 of the Committee on Finance.

Your committee, to whom was referred a resolution signed by O. A. Darby and H. A. C. Walker, "On financial and statistical blanks," have considered the same, and have examined the accompanying samples of blanks, and because a very superior form of blanks for this purpose has been stereotyped by our Publishing House, and their practicability has established the test of experience, have instructed me to report that they do not feel called upon to recommend the blanks furnished.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Temperance.

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the M. E. Church South:

DEAR BRETHREN—Your committee on the subject of temperance would respectfully report that we have carefully examined the papers referred to us by your body, viz: one signed by P. P. Ellis and John Y. Murry; also one signed by J. S. Johnson, A. B. Stark and G. W. Beard. Each of these papers proposes a change in our General Rules on this subject; and as the General Conference of 1874 submitted this question to the several Annual Conferences, resulting in no change being made and by reason of other papers in our hands which fully explain our position as a church, your committee would recommend non-concurrence in these two papers.

Your committee have also carefully considered the papers, one signed by A. R. Winfield and R. Lane, the other signed by J. Y. Murry, J. B. Streater and T. S. Wade, each in the form of preamble and resolutions, and substantially the same, viz:

"Whereas, The subject of temperance is at this time specially agitated throughout the length and breadth of our common country;

"And whereas, Its acceptance and practice by the people everywhere is an end devoutly to be prayed for, as the fruits thereof are 'on earth peace, good will toward men';

"And, whereas, Temperance is a virtue embodied in the character and life of Christianity, and the church having the right and privilege to give out 'certain sounds' on this as on other virtues; therefore, be it

"Resolved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, That to make, buy, sell or use intoxicating liquors as a beverage is a violation of the professed Christian's obligation, and any one thus failing in this or any other shall be duly admonished, warned and dealt with as directed by the Bible and our Book of Discipline.

"Resolved, That this preamble and resolution be published in all our church papers."

Your committee recommend concurrence in this preamble and resolution.

In closing this report your committee desire to say a few words.

The church of God is the true and perfect temperance society. The various special temperance organizations may be used by Christian men as a work-shop for the church. The church is the light of the world; and this light can never shine successfully in the person of a church member acting as a buyer or seller of intoxicating liquors, to be used as a beverage, whether it be in the wholesale store, the drug store or the dram-shop.

The truth remains that "wine is a mocker."—Proverbs xx, 1. "Look not upon the wine, for at last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."—Proverbs xxiii, 21, 33. "Pure religion" is not only to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, but to keep ourselves "unspotted from the world."—James i, 27. "It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended or is made weak."—Romans xiv, 21.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

P. P. ELLIS, Chairman Committee on Temperance.

Presented and laid on the table, Thursday, May 16, 1878.

Of Self-Sacrifice.

But the most beautiful of all self-denial, and perhaps the most difficult to practice, is that which is, or ought to be, carried on in the sacred precincts of home. At home it is very probable that, if called upon, each would be willing to lay down his life for the other. But we are not required to perform heroic deeds; if we were, and they became common, probably that very fact would cause them to lose their influence, and we should give them up also. Life is made up of small things, and it is precisely in these that it is most difficult to be self-sacrificing—every-day matters which seem too trivial to mention, arising with the hour and dying with it, to give place to something equally unremarkable; the constant giving way in trifles and trifling inclinations—sacrificing personal whims and wishes to each other. One wishes to go here, another there; one wishes to do this, another that; two wish for some new bauble, or object of necessity—the purse will admit of the gratification of one only. The key to solve these difficulties, the only spirit able to meet them, is that of self-sacrifice. This will go far to form beauty of character, to render home that abode of harmony which all homes should be—giving up one to the other.

The spirit of self-sacrifice is one of the great beauties of holiness. It is the spirit that will sweeten happiness and lighten troubles; and when the soul is ready to wing its flight to its eternal home it will have the unspeakable consolation of knowing that it has not lived to itself; that it has left the world happier and better in some degree than it found it; that it has been faithful to its earthly mission. So will it listen with unutterable bliss to the sentence: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"

Argosy.

An old-fashioned minister was preaching in a tight, unventilated church, in which by some means a window was left partly open. A good deacon during the sermon closed it. The minister stopped, and, turning to the deacon, said in solemn tones: "If I were preaching in a fog I believe you would put the cork in!"

UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIALS.

It would be easy to fill an entire paper with the unsolicited testimonials which have been given by physicians, clergymen and other educated persons in favor of Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder. Every professional man who has used it in his family will certify to its being wholesome, and the most perfect made.

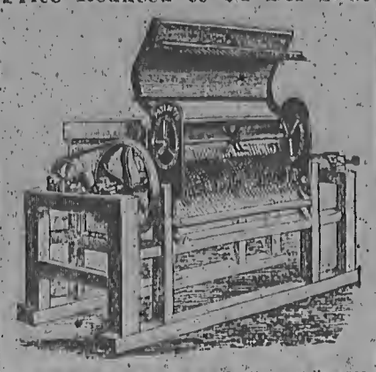
DANIEL PRATT'S IMPROVED

"Revolving Head" Cotton Gin.

PATENTED JULY 15, 1873.

Price Reduced to $4 Per Saw.



THIS GIN has been in use for the past five seasons, and several recent improvements have been added. It obviates all frictional the ends of the cotton box, prevents the roll from breaking, and gives a Larger Yield of Lint from the same Amount of Seed than any other Gin in use. The Revolving Head lightens the draft and causes the Gin to run faster with less driving power, thus doing a great deal more work with the same time, while economizing team or animal power than any other Gin. The seed being ginned very close, the length of the staple is increased producing cotton of this account of a greater market value. This improved value, given by length of staple, with extra production of lint, added to increased amount of work done, more than covers the cost of the Gin in every bale ginned. Test works sent by mail on application.

MEDICAL.

The German Star in Louisiana.

THE SO-CALLED WONDER DOCTOR has arrived safely in New Orleans, with his boat and family. He has made a twelve months' tour through the State of Louisiana to show to the public what he can do with his AMERICAN HERB MEDICINES for the diseased human system and organs. The Doctor is a thorough and experienced German chemist of the herb and vegetable kingdom, and has spent eighteen years in exploring America for the purpose of discovering the most valuable medical herbs growing in America. He has succeeded in discovering the secrets of all Indian tribes in connection with the vegetable kingdom, and thus is enabled as a practical physician, to prescribe these herbs to his patients. The Doctor has been wonderfully successful in the treatment of his patients, of whom he has had in his charge 1,685 within nine months. These comprised cases of sickness of every description, and of both sexes. All these patients were completely restored to health in a very short time. Everywhere in the State the Doctor had to promise to establish himself in New Orleans, which he has resolved to do and carried out in order to relieve, as fast as Nature will permit, the long sufferings of so many of his fellow-beings. None but American herbs will be employed by the Doctor in the preparation of his medicines, and all patients who may honor him with their confidence and clientage will be treated with them.

The Doctor has established his office and a Chemical Laboratory, as well as a complete Private Hospital, at No. 104 BOURBON STREET, between Toulouse and St. Louis streets, so as to give to the afflicted from everywhere an opportunity to receive medical attention at his hands. The rooms are all well fitted up, and absolutely under his personal supervision. His terms are moderate. Letters of inquiry (with three-cent stamp inclosed) will be answered promptly. Orders for medicines will be filled upon the receipt of the money, and mailed free to any place in the United States. Address

We have the best imitation Gold Watch in the market. The metal is a composition of other metals, so closely resembling gold that the best judges find it difficult to detect the difference, except by chemical test, and it has the virtues requisite to make it the best substitute for gold known. Genuine American Movement. Expansion Balance. Beautifully Engraved or Enamel Turned Hunting Cases and equal in appearance to a GOLD WATCH THAT COSTS from $150 to $200. If you wish a watch for your own use, or to make money on it, by this rare offering to our large sales we are enabled to reduce the price of them to $12 each, with an elegant Chain attached. They are used on railroads, steamers and in mammoth stores, and other places where accurate time is required, and give general satisfaction. We send them by mail or express, on receipt of $12, to any part of the country, or if wished sent C. O. D. when the purchaser desires and returns it on account. These elegant CHAINS weigh about Fifty Pennyweights, and the same pattern in pure gold would cost three times as much. We sell these Chains at 6 cents. But we sell the Watch and Chain for $12, sent by mail in a registered package, postpaid, to any postoffice in the United States.
WE SELL THE WATCH WITHOUT THE CHAIN FOR $10.

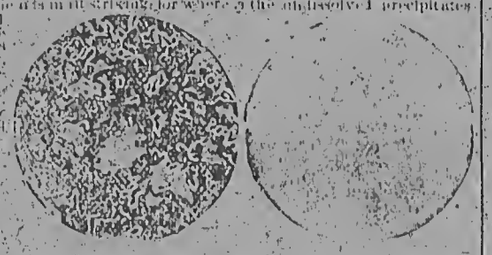
MILK OF MAGNESIA
IS THE best preparation known for all disordered conditions of the stomach. It immediately and certainly cures DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, HEARTBURN, SOUR STOMACH and HEADACHES caused by acidity of the stomach.
The pleasant, effervescing and milk like smoothness of this preparation renders it very valuable for infants, requiring no persuasion to induce them to take it. It positively prevents food vomiting in the stomach, and by Doctors & Invalids generally is considered the most valuable remedy ever introduced. It is also peculiarly adapted to Females. The smoothness of this preparation and its perfect solubility are elegantly apparent in the following Illustrations. They represent a microscopical part of a single drop magnified 250 diameters. The first is the genuine Magnesia as taken with water. The second the Milk of Magnesia now colored. The darker specks show the acid in the stomach, for where the undissolved precipitates and particles in the drop of calcined Magnesia are PERMEATED with terrible distinctness, the Milk of Magnesia has all the appearance of a cloudy vapor, entirely free from the objectionable precipitate, thereby is neutralized.



The Sure Relief MILK OF MAGNESIA. Ask your druggist for it and don't know any better if he tries to palm off on you some other preparation of Magnesia. Physicians and others of already acquainted with the preparation can obtain explanatory circular by addressing

COMMERCIAL.

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
NEW ORLEANS, Tuesday, May 28, 1878.

We have nothing new to report of the general markets this week beyond the fact that the dull times of the summer are about here, and very little business is being done.

COTTON.

The market was quiet to day, and the sales were confined to 1,300 bales. The tone of the market, however, is firm.

The following is the official closing of the Cotton Exchange:

	To-Day.	Yesterday.

Hydrophobia Cured

A REMEDY SUCCESSFULLY USED IN PENNSYLVANIA.

I can give some facts which may be of use to somebody, thereby saving life. The time between the biting of an animal by a mad dog and showing signs of hydrophobia is not less than nine days, but may be nine months. After the animal has become rabid, a bite or scratch with the teeth upon a person, or slobber coming in contact with a sore or raw place, would produce hydrophobia just as soon as though he had been bitten by a mad dog. Hydrophobia can be prevented; and I will give what is well known to be an infallible remedy, if properly administered, for man or beast. A dose for a horse or cow should be about four times as great as for a person. It is not too late to give medicine any time before the spasms come on.

The first dose for a person is one and a half ounces of elecampane root bruised, put in a pint of new milk, reduced to one-half by boiling, then taken all at one dose in the morning, fasting until afternoon, or at least a very light diet after several hours have elapsed. The second dose same as first, except take two ounces of the root; third dose the same as last, to be taken every other day. Three doses are all that are needed, and there need be no fear. This I know from my own experience, and know of a number of other cases where it has been entirely successful. This is no guesswork. Those persons I allude to were bitten by their own dogs that had been bitten by rabid dogs, and were penned up to see if they would go mad. They did go mad and did bite the persons.

The remedy has been used in and about Philadelphia for forty years and longer with great success, and is known as the Goodman remedy. I am acquainted with a physician who told me he knew of its use for more than thirty years, but never knew a case that failed where it was properly administered. Among other ones he mentioned one where a number of cows had been bitten by a mad dog. To half of this number they administered this remedy, to the other half not. The latter all died of hydrophobia, while those that took the elecampane and milk showed no signs of that disease.—Country Gentleman.

It has been calculated that the Cathedral of St. Peter, Rome, can contain 54,000 persons; that of Milan comes next, with 37,000; then follow St. Paul's, London, with 25,000; St. Sophia, Constantinople, with 23,000; Notre Dame, Paris, 21,000; Pisa, 13,000, and St. Mark, at Venice, 7,000.

BEAUTIFUL THINGS.

Beautiful faces are those that wear—
It matters little if dark or fair—
Whole soul-by honesty printed there.

Beautiful eyes are those that show,
Like crystal canes where heart-fires glow
Beautiful thoughts that lurc below.

Beautiful lips are those whose words
Leap from the heart like songs of birds,
Yet whose utterance prudence girds.

Beautiful hands are those that do
Work that is earnest and brave and true,
Moment by moment the long day through.

Beautiful feet are those that go
On errands of mercy to and fro—
Ever the busiest ways, if God will it so.

Beautiful shoulders are those that bear
Their load of burdens of household care
With patient grace and daily prayer.

Beautiful lives are those that bless—
Sweet rivers of happiness
Whose hidden fountains but few may guess.

Beautiful (which), a set of sun,
Beautiful zeal, whereace well won,
Beautiful rest, with work well done.

Beautiful graves, where grasses creep,
Where brown leaves fall, where deep
Snow-wreaths hands—oh beautiful sleep!

DOMESTIC.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The Senate passed, without amendment, the House bill prohibiting the retirement of legal-tenders. The following is the text of the bill:

"To forbid the further retirement of United States legal-tender notes.

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act it shall not be lawful for the Secretary of the Treasury, or any other officer under his control, to cancel or retire any more of the United States legal-tender notes; and when any of said notes may be redeemed or be received into the Treasury, under any source whatever, they shall belong to the United States, but shall not be retired, canceled or destroyed, but they shall be reissued and paid out again and kept in circulation; provided that nothing herein shall prohibit the cancellation and destruction of mutilated notes, and the issue of other notes of a like denomination in their stead, as now provided by law. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed."

The army appropriation bill was passed by the House. It fixes the strength of the army at twenty thousand men, the number of cavalry regiments at eight, and of infantry regiments at eighteen; provides for the reduction and reorganization of the various staff departments, and for the retiring and mustering out of officers who are supernumerary or unfit for service; reduces the pay and emoluments of officers; provides for the management of the Indians by the War Department, and prohibits the employment of troops for civil purposes unless specially authorized by act of Congress.

The senate amendments to the bill for the repeal of the bankrupt law were concurred in.

A bill, from the Postoffice Committee, reported favorably on the bill for a postal savings depository. Referred to the Committee of the Whole. Also favorably on the bill providing for an ocean mail steamship line between the United States and Brazil. Referred to the Committee of the Whole.

The bill for the repeal of the bankrupt law came up and on motion of Mr. Knott the Senate amendments were concurred in. The bill now goes to the President. The repeal takes effect September 1, 1878, and all cases then pending shall proceed as though the repeal had not occurred.

NEW YORK, May 29.—A La Plata letter of April 20 says: A revolution took place in the State of Santa Fe, Argentine Republic, beginning at the capital, the city of Santa Fe, on the night of April 14, and continuing through the next day. The government troops, being armed with American repeating rifles, defeated the insurgents, killing twenty-one, wounding forty-eight in that city. Gov. Orlonda cowardly fled to the parapet of a church until his troops were victorious. He then buried all the dead insurgents in a common ditch, refusing to allow the relatives to bury them.

During the afternoon session of the Methodist Episcopal Conference yesterday a resolution was adopted setting forth that the Conference is not favorable to the emigration scheme as it now presented itself in North Carolina.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Republicans in the House, by the aid of a few Democrats, succeeded in passing the caucus resolution postponing the adjournment question, the result was a resolution to adjourn on the seventeenth of June, which will be fatal to many important matters affecting the West and South.

PHILADELPHIA, May 31.—Six vessels will be secured before the emigrant agents leave.

MEMPHIS, June 1.—An incendiary fire at Senatobia, Miss., last night, destroyed seven small stores and the postoffice. The principal sufferers are Combs & Shelton, Williams & Medford and Stevens & Williams. But for a severe rain-storm which came about one o'clock this morning, which extinguished the fire, the whole town would have been destroyed. The loss is estimated at about $20,000, with little insurance.

NEW YORK, June 1.—During May twenty-five failures were reported in this city. The gross liabilities were $6,300,; assets, $955,488; increased number of failures compared with previous month 22; aggregate liabilities decreased $2 000,000.

ST. LOUIS, June 2.—A special from Richmond, Mo., states that a terrific cyclone passed over that place about four o'clock this evening, leveling to the ground over half of the buildings in the town. Over one hundred houses were totally destroyed, and the loss of property will reach a quarter of a million dollars. The Shaw House, a large brick hotel, was demolished, and the inmates buried in the ruins. So far as known, ten were killed, three mortally wounded, and a great number seriously hurt.

GALVESTON, June 3.—A special to the News, from San Antonio, says: Indians supposed to be from Mexico, in raiding the western country, killed or captured two little sons of Mr. Colson, a sheep raiser; had a fight with Colson, in which one Indian was killed and several were wounded. The soldiers are on the trail.

A News special from San Antonio says: An official dispatch from Fort Clarke reports that seventy-five head of cattle were drawn across the Rio Grande into Mexico. A company of cavalry is in pursuit. It is reported that recruiting for the revolutionary cause is carried on regularly at San Antonio. A numerous party left there yesterday to reinforce Escobedo.

The News' special from Eagle Pass says: News from the other side states that Gen. Escobedo attacked a paymaster's train from Monterey to Piedras Negras, but they were beaten off. No casualties reported. Escobedo is now encamped near Piedras Negras, organizing a strong force and preparing for more formidable operations.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 3.—A dispatch from Boyse City represents that three hundred Bannock Indians, after robbing a station and capturing two freight trains, fled to the lava-beds, where they are in a strong position, with wood, water and grass to last them all summer.

CINCINNATI, June 4.—Yesterday about seven hundred miners from different mines near Charleston, West Virginia, captured the steamer Modoc and went to Blacksburg to make the miners in that vicinity stop work. They threatened to kill or drown every one opposing them. They succeeded in stopping the Blacksburg mines, after which they took possession of a train on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad and returned, making the train stop when and where they pleased, and refusing to pay fare.

BUFFALO, June 4.—The twenty-ninth annual convention of the American Medical Association commenced here to-day.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, May 28.—Earl Russell died at 10.50 to-night, at his residence at Richmond. Alarming symptoms and prostration commenced at two o'clock this afternoon.

PARIS, May 31.—The Voltaire celebration, which was organized by men of letters, and took place in the Galeté Theater yesterday, was attended by about two thousand persons. Admission was by tickets, for which from fifty centimes to eight francs were charged, according to location, the receipts being devoted to the poor of Paris. The proceedings were quiet, orderly, and marked by no special scenes of excitement. There was a celebration at the same hour by the Free-Thinkers at the American Circus, on the Place Chateau d'Eau. Admissions were by ticket, but without charge.

The audience numbered about six thousand. Several speeches, wholly devoted to proving Voltaire's enmity to all religion, were made. The audience were very enthusiastic. After the speeches the statue of Voltaire was crowned with flowers. Deputations representing Paris and the provinces, with banners, marched around, while the bands played and the audience sang the Marseillaise. It was the original intention to erect the statue publicly in Place Chateau d'Eau, but the government forbade it.

The government also prohibited public ceremony by the clericals in honor of Joan of Arc. While the two Voltaire celebrations were proceeding, the Cathedral of Notre Dame was filled by an immense congregation, consisting principally of women, to take part in the expiatory services ordered by the Cardinal Archbishop of Paris. The interior of the church was darkened, and expiatory tapers burned; while from the pulpit a discourse was delivered, in which the preacher denounced Voltaire and glorified Joan of Arc.

DOVER, May 31.—The German squadron, consisting of three ironclads—the Prussen, Grosser Kurfurst and Konig Wilhelm—passed Dover at 8.15 this morning, bound for Plymouth, whence it was expected to sail for Gibraltar. When the squadron was off Lindgate, about five miles from shore, one of the ironclads was observed to be gradually keeling over, beam ends, and the men were seen crowding on the bulwarks.

In about five minutes the vessel went down on her side, her boilers blowing up as she sank. Boats from the other ironclads were launched. Numbers of the Folkstone fishing smacks near by hurried to the spot. It is hoped many lives were saved. The Folkston lifeboat was launched, but arrived too late. Several steamers have gone to the scene of disaster from Dover.

It is believed the Konig Wilhelm, which ran into the Grosser Kurfurst, is badly damaged.

LONDON, May 31.—A dispatch from Rome to the Pall Mall Gazette says: The Pope is ill in body and distressed in mind by the plots and cabals designed to prevent the reforms he proposes.

It is reported the Pope manifests a disposition to abdicate. Cardinal Franchi is doing his utmost to check the machinations of the Jesuits. The latter, on the other hand, are striving to secure Cardinal Franchi's downfall.

Mr Gladstone has an article in the Nineteenth Century, entitled "Liberty in the East and West." Dealing with current political questions in the course of the article, reference is made to the alleged intention of the government to assume a protectorate over Asiatic Turkey. Gladstone opposes any step of the kind and says such a protectorate could hardly end otherwise than in the total destruction of Turkish power, and its disappearance from the face of the earth.

LONDON, June 1.—Advices from Cape Town, May 14, state that there has been renewed and severe fighting with the Kaffirs. The British were victorious, but the result was indecisive.

BERLIN, June 2.—While the Emperor was taking a drive, at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon, some shots, apparently proceeding from a house in the Avenue Unter der Linden, were fired at him. The Emperor was wounded in one arm and on the cheek by buck-shot and small shot.

The would-be assassin is a Dr. Nobeling, occupying apartments at No 18 Unter der Linden. When his door was forced open he fired upon and wounded the hotel-keeper, and tried to commit suicide, but was secured.

The Emperor's personal attendant jumped into the carriage and supported the Emperor until the carriage reached the palace.

The Emperor was conveyed to bed and several grains of shot extracted causing great loss of blood. The Emperor suffered great pain, but never lost consciousness up to the latest moment.

At seven o'clock this evening no serious apprehensions were felt as to his condition.

LONDON, June 2.—The Press Association has a dispatch from Liverpool stating that the Williams & Guion steamer Idaho went ashore in a fog, near Koenlugbeg light ship, on the coast of Ireland, and afterward foundered. The crew and passengers were saved.

LONDON, June 3.—It is said the Congress will be composed of the following powers: Prince Bismarck and Count Von Bulow for Germany; Lords Beaconsfield and Salisbury and Odo Russell for Great Britain; Count Schonvaloff and M. D'Ontrie, Russian embassador at Berlin, for Russia; Count Andrassy and Von Haymerle for Austria; MM Waddington and De St. Valier for France; Count Corti and Count de Launay for Italy. It is not known who will be the representatives of Turkey.

ROME, June 4.—Pope Leo has sent a dispatch to the Emperor of Germany, expressing his regret at the atrocious attempt on the life of his imperial majesty.

The Pope has directed Cardinal Franchi to dispatch urgent instructions to the Catholic clergy in Germany to use every effort to prevent the spreading of socialism. His holiness had a conference on the subject with Cardinal Ledochowski, Archbishop of Posen, to obtain exact information respecting the Socialist party in Germany.

BERLIN, June 4.—All the cabinets have accepted Germany's invitation to the Congress.

From the Work.

FRANKLIN, LA.—Mr. Editor: We are taught in the Bible "to lay by in store on the first day of the week, as God hath prospered." Mr. Wesley arranged for weekly contributions for the support of the gospel. In keeping with this plan we have divided our membership into six classes, averaging about twenty members to each. We have appointed a treasurer to each class, and placed each class under the care of a steward of the church. We have agreed to pay one nickel each per week, to be divided pro rata between the Bishops, widows and orphans and superannuates, Bible cause and missions. The plan will give us about $300. The Bishops' claim is $10; the widows' and orphans' and superannuates' is $70, and the balance will be divided, as the stewards may direct, between Bible cause and missions—say $25 for Bible cause and $195 for missions. We raised about $15 for all these purposes last year. This will not prevent special efforts for each cause. Each member will pay a certain amount monthly for pastor's support into the hands of his steward. We find that small amounts, paid by each member monthly, aggregate largely, viz.: Twenty members per month, each paying 25 cents, twenty paying 50 cents, forty $1, twenty $2 and twenty $3 per month will aggregate $1,860. Halve this amount and it will equal the ordinary allowance for country pastors. We are hoping for success in this department. We also hope to build up the spiritual interests of the church, for each of these classes is a scripture class for the study of God's word. I meet them together each Sabbath afternoon. I hope to develop experience or class meetings of them finally. My congregations are large, and increasing in size and seriousness. We hope to build a spire to our church, and thoroughly paint it this year.

Our church school is doing comparatively well. We teach honestly and thoroughly everything usually taught in the best schools, and at moderate prices.

Pray that we may be successful in building up Bible Christianity in this priest-ridden land.

Yours, B. F. WHITE,
Pastor Franklin Station, La. Conference.
MAY 21, 1878.

CHAPEL CHURCH.—Mr. Editor: Prior to the present year this church, though numbering over sixty members, was not recognized as belonging to Mount Carmel circuit. Bro. G. W. Brown was sent out by the Annual Conference to this circuit, who destroyed the former class-book and formed a new organization, consisting of thirty-three members of good material. The church seems to be in good working order, and at the first Quarterly Conference in the circuit the church was assessed the reasonable sum of $40, and I was elected steward. On the first Sunday in April, at my regular appointment, I preached a sermon on the support of the ministry, and read the assessment to the church, which is about $1.50 per member. The assessment was approved by the church, and I think will be promptly paid. We are well pleased with Bro. Brown as our pastor.

We also have a Sabbath school in operation, under the superintendency of Bro. Henry Cook, a man in every way worthy this responsible charge. As yet we have not the advantages of regular Sunday school literature, but we intend sending for the Visitor and Little People. We pray the blessing of God upon us.

MARION CT., MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: I send for publication an account of a revival which the Lord has favored us with at this place. It began on the second Sabbath of this month, and continued till Tuesday night after the third. The meeting continued ten days, closing with the church being abundantly revived. There were 23 conversions and 17 accessions to the church.

On the death of Maj. Laing, the enterprising traveler in Africa, the Africans took an inventory of his effects with a view to sending them to the British admiral. They were sorely puzzled to make out the catalogue, and, in utter despair, described a couple of tooth-brushes as "two scrapes made of pigs' hair," and set down his spectacles as "two looking-glasses for the nose."

A colored minister once asked the advice of an aged black as to the field to which he should devote his energies. "Massa," replied the sable counselor, "go where de de is de most debbil."

The Babylonish Empire.

MR. EDITOR: The following paper was read by W. G. Paxton before the last teachers' meeting of the Vicksburg Sunday school. As the lessons for June embrace the period covered largely by this paper, I have secured it for publication in the ADVOCATE. Many Sunday school workers who have not the authorities at hand to consult will be greatly benefited by its perusal. C. B. G.

VICKSBURG, June 1, 1878.

THE BABYLONISH EMPIRE.

Founded by Nimrod, A. M. 1771, B. C. 2233; Destroyed under Nabonidus, or Belshazzar, A. M. 3466, B. C. 538.

Of Nimrod, son of Cush, and grandson of Ham, the son of Noah, we learn (Genesis x, 8) that he was "the mighty hunter before the Lord"—words which would seem to mean that he was a hunter of men, and not of beasts—a warrior mighty in battle. He it was who, according to Josephus, persuaded the people to leave the hills and high places, where they had remained, fearing a second deluge, to come down and establish themselves in the plains of Shinar; further persuading them that it was not fitting to ascribe their happiness, prosperity and attendant happiness to the favor of God, but rather a result wrought out by their own skill, courage and strength. He, too, changed the form of government from the primitive patriarchal to the tyrannical, and caused the people to build a mighty tower, which in vain fancy they imagined would serve as a protection against a second deluge—a tower of burned bricks and mortar, made of bitumen, mighty in size, and vainly designed to reach to the very walls of heaven, but destined to be destroyed in a moment by the breath of the Lord most mighty, and its builders scattered upon the face of the earth with confusion of tongues. And thence the name of the city and empire to which it gave name—Babylon—Babel, (Hebrew, or, in our tongue, confusion.

Upon the destruction of the tower and the dispersal of the peoples, Nimrod, the son of Cush, remained. His people were known as Cushites—a name retained until the new dispensation, possibly even unto this day. His government extended over Lower Babylon, with Babylon as its capital, and Babel, Erech, Accad and Calneh as its chief cities; thence he extended his empire, by conquest, northward along the Tigris, over Assyria, and founded other mighty capitals—Nineveh, Rehoboth, Calah and Resen. Of his direct line and succession, except from 747 to 331 B. C., but little is known. History, sacred and profane, tells us of

9 Arab kings reigning ..... 245 years.
19 Assyrian monarchs reigning ..... 526 years.

Nabopolassar, father of Nebuchadnezzar, comes into prominence as the founder anew of the kingdom—the epoch from which dated its greatest magnificence and glory. The king, remaining at home and administering the affairs of State, intrusted the command of his armies to Nebuchadnezzar, who with mighty valor extended the Babylonish empire over the countries of Chaldea, Assyria, Arabia and Palestine. In the fourth year of Jehoiakim conquering Nichoh, king of Egypt, and taking all Syria as far as Pelusium. Then made an expedition against the Jews, slew Jehoiakim, and made Jehoiachin king. Then repeated of this act of favor, took Jehoiachin to Babylon, making Zedekiah king in his stead. Zedekiah joining with the Egyptians, Nebuchadnezzar again captured the city of Jerusalem, burning the temple and taking all the holy vessels as trophies, spoils of war, and Zedekiah and his people prisoners to Babylon.

After the death of his father, Nebuchadnezzar added to and fortified the city of Babylon, inclosing it with three lines of mighty walls, like mountains in extent, the outer line estimated by some authorities as 56 miles in length, the area some 200 square miles—a city exceeding in size any of those of the present day, lying on both sides of the river Euphrates, connected by a bridge, a palace at either extremity; Nebuchadnezzar, upon his father's death, building another palace before, and joined by this bridge to that of his father; also, to please his wife, building elevated walks (gantens) of stone, resembling mountains, planted and decorated with trees. The city is not supposed to have been densely populated, as are those of later days, and was noted for its magnificent buildings, its reservoirs, gardens and orchards. Possessing all this power and magnificence of surroundings only, as recorded by Daniel, to be hurled from his place of power as the head of a mighty nation, becoming as a beast of the field.

Now we learn of Daniel, master of the learning of his people, selected, with his companions, to be brought up in the king's household, and to be taught all of science, of art and of literature that was known to the Chaldeans. Servants of the most high God, obeying his law and walking according to his commandments, declining to defile themselves with the meat and drink of idols, preferring rather pulse and water, and by their ruddy countenances and comely appearance showing the God was with them. Then putting the astrologers and wise men of Chalden to shame and confusion by the interpretation of dreams. Elevated to places of honor and trust, exciting the hatred and envy of those whom they had superseded, cast into the fiery furnace and the den of lions. Always miraculously preserved—bearing upon their garments no smell of fire, nor upon their persons no mark of claw of beast, having to walk with them One in appearance like unto the Son of God. And amidst their trials and dangers preserving their faith pure and unspotted from the world.

Nebuchadnezzar, gathered to his fathers, was succeeded by Evil Merodach, who reigned two years. Then we learn of Neriglissar occupying the throne for four years, to be followed by Nabonidus (555 B. C.). He, learning of the approach of Darius, the Median, moved out at the head of a portion of his forces, leaving control of the city to his son, the dissolute and evil Belshazzar. Darius, driving Nabonidus into one of the neighboring cities of the plain, and there confining him, moved against the city of Babylon, and finding its walls, like mountains, impregnable to any assault, turned aside the waters of the Euphrates by canal, and, moving in through the dry bed of the river, captured the city and destroyed Belshazzar, as had been foretold 170 years before by the Prophets Isaiah (xxi, 1-9) and Jeremiah (li, 39), mention also being made in Daniel (v, 30, 31, and ix, 1). From that day the decay and ruin of Babylon the Great commenced, though continued as a royal residence during the Persian dynasty. The defenses and public buildings suffered grievously from neglect during the long period of peace which followed the reign of Xerxes. After the death of Alexander the Great the seat of empire was removed to Antioch, and the prosperity of the place destroyed; Babylon, city without a peer, becoming a quarry from whose ruins were drawn the materials with which the cities upon the plain were built, of which, as well as many events connected with the city of Babylon, and not here noted, due record will be found in the books of Second Kings (xxiii, 9; xxiv, 7); Jeremiah (xlvi, 2-12; li, 31-39-41; l, 45; li, 58.) Isaiah (xiii, 20-22); Ezra (iv, 9; xxiii, 11, 15; xlviii, 11-20) and First Peter (v, 13.)

A kingdom that had its origin amidst confusion, and ending with the destruction of its rulers and the government.

"Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall."

Such the proverb and such the history of the Babylonish empire and its rulers. First illustrated in the history of Nimrod, the Cushite, its founder, defying God, and building the great tower, which was to serve as an ark of refuge, should the waters again cover the earth, only to find his labor in vain—the tower overthrown and destroyed, and the peoples scattered over the earth amidst confusion of tongue and speech. Again exemplified, after centuries of magnificence and splendor, in the punishments visited upon its later rulers. He who by successes achieved in State and in war, had won the proud title of "king of kings," gave way to his pride and found himself in one moment hurled from his place of power and glory, with mind dethroned, and reduced not merely to the level, but to the very acts of the beasts of the field—with them eating grass, and with them having his body wetted by the dews and rains of heaven. His successor, too—the wicked and impious Belshazzar—called suddenly to the exercise of power, with little knowledge and less thought of affairs of State, and meeting destruction amidst feasting and riotous living; the kingdom divided into provinces, to be ruled over by that chief of the presidents, ruler of the one hundred and twenty princes—Daniel, servant of the living God.

THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1878.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE M. E. CHURCH SOUTH.

SIXTEENTH DAY.

SATURDAY, May 18, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour.

Bishop Pierce in the chair.

Divine service was conducted by C. D. Oliver.

The minutes were read, corrected and confirmed.

E. H. Pottle asked for an episcopal decision in regard to the seating of L. D Dameron in the General Conference.

Mr. Pottle, lay, North Georgia Conference, said: Mr. President, I desire to state that I was actuated by no personal considerations in the matter presented at the close of the session yesterday. I am no partisan to either of the parties—I have no feeling in the matter, and no opinion to express—no disposition to disturb the status of the brother's (Mr. Dameron's) seat. If it came that his right to his seat, and his claim to retain it, depended upon my vote, I could without hesitation vote to retain him in his seat. I desire the opinion of the chair as to the present status of the case. I continue my demand for it.

The President—I would have answered the demand yesterday. Voices: "No." "Yes." "Is he in order?" The inquiry is in order—the brother is entitled to an answer. I would have answered the question, but the hour of adjournment arrived. I will answer now. The action in Bro. Dameron's case simply seated him. You will remember that on the first day of the Conference his name was enrolled and the question of his right to a seat was deferred until the organization. After the organization his right was questioned. The Conference raised a Committee on Credentials, to whom this case and others were referred. The committee reported, or at least a majority of them, against the eligibility of the brother. A minority brought in a report recognizing his right to a seat. The Conference voted down the report of the minority. If they had attempted it it would have seated him de jure; but it was voted down. The Conference then voted down the majority report, which declared against his eligibility. The result of the action, therefore, is simply to leave him in his seat de facto.

On motion of R. S. Finley the rule was suspended to allow him to present a substitute for item three in the Report No. 2 on Boundaries, adopted Wednesday, May 15.

On motion of I. G. John item three of Report No. 2 on Boundaries was reconsidered. The substitute was read and adopted. (See report.)

Bishop Wightman took the chair.

Report No. 7 on Episcopacy, reciting how the committee had passed upon the character of the Bishops and found them blameless, was read.

A voice: "Thank God for the record."

When the assistant secretary took up another report he looked over the Conference and said: "This paper is in reference to the death of Bishop Marvin."

The President—Brethren, this is a solemn parenthesis in our business. (In a tender tone.) The chair would be very much obliged to the brethren to be seated as soon as possible.

The house sank into silence.

Mr. Register, clerical, Baltimore Conference)—Before the secretary reads I desire, on behalf of the Committee on Episcopacy, to request Dr. Lewis to repeat before the Conference the remarks concerning Bishop Marvin he made before the committee. I trust it will be the pleasure of the Conference to hear that statement.

The President—The chair takes pleasure in giving Dr. Lewis the opportunity now.

By request, J. W. Lewis, who was present with Bishop Marvin in his last days, gave an account of the illness, death and burial of the Bishop.

He was followed by John Hogan, W. M. Rush, C. I. Vandeventer, Y. J. Allen (who gave an account of the Bishop's work in China,) Dr. B. T. Kavanaugh (not a member of the Conference, who gave an account of the Bishop's work in the army,) and T. M. Finney.

After the affecting testimonies borne to the glorified Bishop, the Conference adopted the report standing. (See report.)

On motion of D. C. Kelley it was resolved to release the estate of the late Bishop Marvin from obligation to pay the subscription of Bishop Marvin for the relief of the Publishing House.

The following resolution was then adopted:

Resolved, That the whole church shares in grateful remembrance of Bishop Marvin's great services, and the church claims the privilege of sharing in the privilege of erecting a suitable monument to his memory and providing a home for his family.

O. P. FITZGERALD,
C. D. OLIVER,
C. P. BERRY.

J. B. McFerrin, chairman of the Committee on Publishing Interests, presented Report No. 2 of that committee, which was read and adopted. (See report.)

He also presented Report No. 3 of that committee, on periodicals.

T. L. Mellen, J. M. Richards and others presented a minority report. Both reports were read and laid on the table for further consideration.

J. B. McFerrin, chairman of the Committee on Publishing Interests, presented Report No. 4 of that committee, referring to a quarterly review, which was read and laid on the table for future consideration.

On motion of J. C. C. Winch the rule was suspended for the purpose of considering Report No. 5 on Missions.

The report was taken up.

Mr. Finley moved, to lay the whole matter on the table, which prevailed.

J. E. Evans, chairman of the Committee on Revisal, presented Report No. 13 of that committee, which was laid on the table without reading.

There was a resolution, and an amendment in reference to the claim of the Publishing House against the United States government.

There were several speeches, but an explanation of Mr. Moses Walton (lay, Baltimore Conference) that the matter was under consideration by a sub-committee of the Publishing Committee, led the president to say: "This statement renders the whole matter of the resolution, amendment and substitute unnecessary."

P. Whitehead, chairman of the Committee on the Ecumenical Conference, presented Reports Nos. 1, 2 and 3 of that committee, which were read and adopted. (See reports.)

E. E. Wiley, J. W. Paulett, George Stewart, A. M. Shipp, C. D. Oliver and J. B. McFerrin offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church and of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church are now in session respectively in Knoxville, and Lebanon, Tenn.; therefore,

Resolved, That we convey to these bodies our cordial greetings and Christian love, wishing them a harmonious session, and prosperity in all their church enterprises.

Resolved, That our secretary be and he is hereby instructed to transmit the same to the respective assemblies.

The time was extended to allow a resolution offered by J. L. Parkes, S. H. Dent and others, touching certain bequests of J. T. Calvin to widows and orphans, to be read.

It was read, and after considerable discussion was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Conference then adjourned with the benediction by the Bishop.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

SUBSTITUTE FOR ITEM III REPORT NO. II. ON BOUNDARY LINE OF EAST TEXAS AND NORTH TEXAS CONFERENCES.

Resolved, That the boundary line between the East Texas Conference and the North Texas Conference, as defined in the memorial of the East Texas Conference, which was adopted by this General Conference at its present session, be and the same is hereby amended so as to include in the North Texas Conference the towns of Terrill and Wills Point, and all that part of Kaufman county not now embraced in the Prairieville circuit.

R. S. FINLEY,
JOHN H. MCLEAN.

The line so changed is defined as follows:

Beginning at the Louisiana State line, in Soda Lake, and running up said lake to the mouth of Little Cypress river, and up said river to the line of Upshur county, thence along said line south to the Texas Pacific railroad; thence along said railroad to the east boundary of Kaufman county, thence down to the northeast corner of said county; thence west in a straight line to the Trinity river; provided that all towns on the said railroad, as above defined, shall belong to the East Texas Conference, except the town of Wills Point, which shall remain in the North Texas Conference.

Presented and adopted, Saturday, May 18, 1878.

REPORT NO. VII OF THE COMMITTEE ON EPISCOPACY.

The Committee on Episcopacy respectfully report:

That they have called the names of our Bishops, one by one, and have carefully reviewed the life and official administration of each for the past four years, and have found them blameless.

REPORT NO. VIII OF COMMITTEE ON EPISCOPACY.

The Committee on Episcopacy ask leave to offer the following tribute to the memory of the late Bishop Marvin:

In view of the elaborate and full statements of dates and details of work made in memorial sermons and obituaries, we do not deem it necessary now to do more than to express the great sorrow that fills our hearts on account of the removal of this eminent servant of God from among us.

For nearly twelve years he served the church in the high official station of general superintendent. In this capacity he illustrated, in an eminent degree, the zeal, the purity of life, the self-forgetfulness, and the entireness of consecration that characterized the apostles of our Lord, thus furnishing the highest possible title to be recognized as their successor.

Before he was called to this high distinction his life was wholly consecrated to the work of the itinerant ministry; and in that capacity he was unswerving in fidelity to the duties laid upon him. For him no sacrifice was too great, no work was too hard that proposed to enhance the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ. Endowed with high intellectual and spiritual gifts, he laid all upon the altar of the church. Nor was the church slow to recognize his worth. She ordained him to serve in her holy places, and intrusted to his hand a large part of her honor and interests. It may be said with propriety that he was never untrue to the trust thus confided.

A special emphasis is given to our sorrow by the fact that the church of God is not permitted to reap the full benefit of his wise observations in his extended Eastern tour. Commissioned to go to the millions who sit in the region and shadow of death in heathen lands, he went as a messenger of light in their midst, and his accurate observation and comprehensive appreciation of the situation placed him in possession of a wealth of facts that would have been of incalculable benefit in the church's great missionary work. His holy zeal for the kingdom of Christ, kindled to an intense flame by the sight of millions under the pall of pagan darkness, would have infused itself into the church, and her arm would have been nerved afresh for the conquest of the world to the Son of God.

But the Head of the church dismissed him from a field in which it was fondly hoped he would achieve such grand results. We bow to the mysterious dispensation, assured that, though we know not what he doeth, we shall know.

It is matter of profound gratitude to God that the grace on which our now sainted Bishop leaned so confidingly was sufficient to preserve him blameless throughout his entire career as a minister of Jesus Christ. Wise in counsel, just in administration, blameless in moral and official life, he served his generation and fell asleep. Long may the example of his apostolic zeal and purity of life stand before his brethren who minister at the altar of the church.

REPORT NO. III OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

The committee, to whom was referred the past history and present condition of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, including our Sunday school literature and the Christian Advocate, beg leave to submit the following report:

According to the statements furnished by Dr. Redford and others, the Little People, from October 19, 1870, to April 1, 1878, has paid expenses and returned to the Publishing House a profit of $10 129.07.

The Sunday School Visitor, from November 6, 1866, to April 1, 1878, has paid all expenses and yielded a profit to the house of $24 946 34.

The Lesson Paper, from October 19, 1870, to April 1, 1878, has cleared expenses and returned to the house a profit of $35,490 29.

These are most gratifying results, and they show that our Sunday school literature has met the wants of the church, and has returned to the Publishing House during the past twelve years the sum of $70,-566 19.

These facts furnish indubitable evidence of the prudence and ability of those who have had under their control this department of our work. They have left the impress of skilled hands upon their labors, and they justly deserve the gratitude of the church.

The Christian Advocate, from May 24, 1866, to July 1, 1878, has met expenses, and returned to the Publishing House, in a little less than twelve years, a profit of $27 220.68. Here again we are able to chronicle a most pleasing result, for the Advocate has averaged to the church a profit of more than $2 000 per annum. During the period above named it has been the special organ of the Tennessee, Kentucky, Louisville and Holston Conferences, and the general organ of the whole church. Notwithstanding the success just announced, we are constrained to say that its circulation has been much too small, amounting now to little more than nine thousand subscribers. This number ought to be increased to at least thirty thousand.

While the able, learned and overworked editor has done much for the cause of truth and righteousness, has greatly aided in establishing Wesleyan theology in this country, and while his varied wisdom, long experience and Christian conservatism are felt and seen in almost every issue, still your committee must concede that their conception of a great connectional organ has not been yet attained, and they believe that it cannot be reached by any man, whatever may be his resources, unless his time and talents are wholly consecrated to this great enterprise. The wants of the church in this direction are numerous and pressing. We represent here, in the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, a mighty and growing people, possessing every variety of natural gifts and in nearly all grades of intellectual and moral culture. Their living natures are deeply impressible, and in hundreds and thousands of instances they are hungry for the truth as it is in Jesus Christ. This vast multitude of immortal spirits can and ought to be reached by our great central organ, and its weekly visits should go like angels' visits to their homes and hearts. It should echo in the sinner's ears the thunders of the violated law, and should point the penitent believer to pardon, peace and heaven through Jesus Christ. Its rebukes of sin and corruption, wherever found, should constitute it one of the bulwarks of the church, and its presentation of truth, virtue, integrity and faith should add to the incentives which urge our people toward the standard of perfection furnished by the life and ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ. Its weekly messages, as they go forth to the people in fresh, terse and incisive editorials, should be, if possible, alike welcome and instructive to age and inexperience, to mature manhood and budding youth. Such an organ would be a boon to our church, and it would furnish a suitable exponent of the intelligence, piety and power of our beloved Zion. To make such a weekly as this its editor must be "a man of one work"—must have time to consider the wants of the entire church, to utilize the fixed and current literature of the age, and to pour forth in thrilling paragraphs the wisdom and strength drawn from these sources. Such a periodical would be the pride of Southern Methodism, and it would help to make a new epoch in her purity and progress. A weekly like this, and with such a mission before it as has just been shown could afford to be generous and kind to the whole family of Advocates now in our bounds. No advantage should be sought, all friction should be carefully avoided and every reasonable effort should be made to foster and sustain them. And your committee would earnestly recommend that the central organ should be published at a price that would not undermine and destroy its less fortunate competitors in the field of Southern Methodism, and they believe that $2 50 per annum is the lowest amount at which it should be issued.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT NO. IV OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

QUARTERLY REVIEW.

Your committee have had before them resolutions signed by B. Craven, A. W. Wilson, N. T. Lupton and E. E. Wiley; also a resolution signed by R. N. Sledd, Thomas Branch and L. S. Reed; and a series of resolutions signed by A. B. Starke and J. H. Brunner, all desiring the establishment of a review in some appropriate form.

After extensive consultation with members of the General Conference, and mature consideration of various propositions and plans, the committee is of opinion that such a publication is necessary for the church—that we must have under our control a periodical in which to state and discuss the higher problems of religious, literary and scientific thought, and maintain our rightful position in the advancing culture of the age.

From investigations made, we believe a review can be published without any financial responsibility assumed by the General Conference, and we do not believe that our past experience is conclusive proof against the success of plans now within our reach. In order, therefore, to secure the publication of a review, properly guarded, and by what appears to be the best available means, and in order to provide, as far as possible, against such publications by parties unauthorized, irresponsible, and subject to no supervision of the church, we recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That B. Craven, of the North Carolina Conference; T. M. Finney, St. Louis; J. W. Hinton, South Georgia; N. T. Lupton, Tennessee; C. W. Miller, Kentucky; F. A. Mood, Texas; A. B. Stark, Louisville; A. W. Wilson, Baltimore; E. E. Wiley, Holston, and R. A. Young, Tennessee, be appointed a committee, to whom shall be committed the whole subject of a review, and the said committee is authorized to publish a review, under the auspices of the General Conference, at such time and place and in such manner as they may find expedient, providing for the editorial department and all other matters touching the said review, but without any pecuniary liability by the Publishing House, the General Conference or the church.

MINORITY REPORT ON CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE AND SUNDAY SCHOOL LITERATURE.

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the M. E. Church South:

The undersigned, a minority of the Committee on Publishing Interests, regret the necessity for submitting a minority report, differing from that of the majority, on the condition and arrangement of the Christian Advocate and the Sunday school literature published at Nashville, Tenn.; but believing the majority report inaccurate and defective in several important particulars, we are left with no other alternative, and with deference present this report.

1. Concerning the editorial management of the Sunday School Magazine, Visitor, Lesson Papers and Our Little People, edited by the Rev. Dr. Haygood or the Rev. Dr. Cunnyngham, we have no words to say but words of commendation; but as to the expenses of conducting the Sunday school literature, the profits thereon, or the expenses or profits of the Advocate, or the amount realized from advertisements, we have been furnished with no itemized accounts, but only the general statements contained in the agent's third quadrennial report; and as we have found other figures in his report—notably the statement of assets and liabilities—delusive, we know not what estimate to put upon the figures concerning the expenses and profits of either the Advocate or Sunday school literature, and hence we are unable to congratulate the church on the financial showing made in the agent's report.

2. As to the business arrangement of the Advocate: So far as our information extends, the business of the Advocate appears to have been very improperly conducted in one very important matter, if in no other. For the enormous amount of advertising of various and numerous books written and published, and (some) still owned by persons connected with the Advocate not one cent has ever been charged, collected or paid, thus resulting as we believe, in great loss to the publishing department of the Advocate, as well as trifling profit to the individuals interested.

3. As to the editorial management of the Advocate: The editor we know to be able and learned, and we believe him to be of unsullied purity of character. To him our church has been and still is indebted for many valuable contributions to Wesleyan theology and expositions of the cardinal doctrines of Methodism. Still the multiplicity of his labors in other matters have more or less interfered with his editorial duties. Besides, no one man can edit a paper, such as the organ of the General Conference ought to be, in a manner satisfactory, in any appreciable degree, to the majority of those interested in the welfare and usefulness of the Advocate. If we are to have but one editor, it is essential that he should devote his whole time and attention to the paper.

4. As to the circulation of the Advocate: The circulation of the Advocate is reported at 9 200 copies, of which not more than 3 000, we are reliably informed, are received by laymen at full price, while the residue are subscribed for by preachers at reduced rates, while some are furnished free of charge as exchanges, etc. The organ of the General Conference should, in our opinion, have a circulation of at least 50,000 copies, instead of the limited number, which is exceeded by that of some of the organs of Annual Conferences; while none of the Annual Conference Advocates has a legitimate circulation much less than the Nashville Christian Advocate. The cause of this very limited circulation is two-fold:

1. Too much space has been allotted to the Tennessee, Kentucky and Holston Conferences, to the exclusion of matters of general interest to all the Conferences. In other words, the Advocate has been too local in its scope and contents.

2. Too much prominence has been given, and too many columns devoted to matters in which those connected with the Christian Advocate have been personally and financially interested, so that the Advocate has seemed to be conducted in behalf of a few, instead of the many.

In conclusion we would say that if the Nashville Christian Advocate is to be continued—as we earnestly hope it may—as the organ of the General Conference, it should not be the special organ of any Annual Conference, but should represent the whole membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; otherwise its decline, which began two years ago, and resulted in a loss of more than $900 during the last ten months, as shown by the agent's report, will go on with hastening strides till its redemption will be impossible.

Respectfully submitted.

T. L. MELLEN,
J. M. RICHARDS,
And others.

REPORT NO. XIII OF THE COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

The Committee on Revisal have carefully considered the several papers referred from J. W. Hinton, J. S. Key, J. B. McGehee, J. E. Evans and others, relating to the trial and appeal of travelling preachers, and beg leave to report:

The subject was presented, and has been considered in all its aspects with a view of harmonizing the constitution and the law, the design of the committee being to have a coherent system of trial and appeals, adapted to all the ends of justice, mercy and truth in our church polity.

The committee call attention to the fifth restrictive article as the basis and beginning of such a system. This article says: "They shall not do away the privilege of our ministers or preachers of trial by a committee, and of appeal."—Restrictive Art. 5, page 37, Discipline. This is constitutional law, and cannot be subverted, directly or indirectly, by any statutory provisions in conflict with its letter and spirit. First, it guarantees the right of trial by a committee, in contradistinction to trial before a whole Conference. The existing law of trial conforms to this constitutional requisition, but it needs some extension to more fully meet the demands of a wise administration.

Secondly, the right of appeal is not denied in terms of existing law, but it is only allowed to be exercised in a way to defeat practically its proper design, and therefore is in conflict with the spirit of the constitution which is to give a condemned minister a speedy remedy for the wrong inflicted upon him, if his condemnation was unjust. He can, as the law stands, only appeal to the General Conference, which meets quadrennially, and his appeal cannot be heard and decided, often, until years have passed.

Your committee think that an appeal which may be delayed for four years is virtually denied, and all its ends defeated. The appellant must often linger in suspense, and under degradation, ruined financially by the loss of employment, blasted in reputation beyond recovery; and, moreover, he is liable to die covered with the odium of crimes and penalties which a speedy appeal might avert. Such delay is not in accordance with the right of appeal as exercised by local preachers and lay members of the church, these classes of our people having a speedy redress of their wrongs in appellate courts.

Why should this large and prominent class—itinerant preachers—be subjected to such unnecessary delay?

Again, the distance and expense incidental to an appeal to the General Conference greatly add to the difficulties in the application of the law of appeal as it now exists. A poor preacher, a thousand miles from the session of the General Conference, is subjected to a cruel hardship if he is compelled to attend to prosecute his appeal. In the meantime agitation and strife may do much damage to the section in which the accused may reside, which might be allayed by a quicker termination of the case.

For these, and other reasons which might be assigned, the committee recommend the following system of trial and appeal for travelling preachers, asking that sections 2, 3 and 4 page 127 and section 1, page 140 of the Discipline, be removed, except so far as they may agree with the offered sections, and the committee recommend the adoption of these sections in their stead:

DISCIPLINE, PAGE 127, SEC. II.

Question 1. To whom is a travelling preacher amenable for his conduct?

Answer 1. To the Annual Conference, which shall have power to try, acquit, suspend or expel him, as herein provided.

Ques. 2. What shall be done when a travelling preacher is accused of immorality?

Ans. 1. If in the interval of the Conference, let the presiding elder, in the absence of the Bishop, call as many travelling preachers as he may think proper—at least three—and, if possible, bring the accused and the accuser face to face. This committee shall be one of inquiry and shall report whether there is sufficient ground for trial. If a trial is necessary, the presiding elder shall summon a committee of not less than five, nor more than thirteen, who shall, under his presidency, constitute a court for the trial of the case.

The committee shall meet, if practicable, in the section of the alleged offense, to give the best opportunity for the arraying of testimony for and against the accused; but if the presiding elder judges it expedient, and the accused consents, the trial may be had elsewhere than in the bounds of the pastoral charge.

If the alleged offense is said to have been committed beyond the bounds of the preacher's own Conference, and within the limits of other Annual Conferences, any presiding elder may take jurisdiction of the case in whose district the offense may have been committed, and shall have authority to proceed as above for the trial of the case. He shall make an official report of the trial to the next session of the Annual Conference to which the accused preacher belongs.

If the accused be a presiding elder any three travelling elders or deacons of his district may inquire into the case, and, if they judge it necessary, report to the Bishop. If with the report there is also furnished written charges and specifications, signed by these three traveling elders or deacons, or by a member of our church, then the Bishop shall call together a committee of at least five elders or deacons, one of whom shall be appointed president by the Bishop, and they shall try the case. Should no written charges and specifications be furnished the Bishop, he shall appoint a committee of three elders or deacons to investigate the report and accusations, and to make out a bill of charges and specifications, a copy of which shall be furnished the accused a sufficient time before the trial to allow preparation for his defense.

Right of challenge for cause shall be unlimited, the objections to be decided by the president of the committee.

If the accused be condemned by a majority of the committee, the president of the court shall pronounce him expelled, or suspended, as the court may determine when they render the verdict; and this shall be the law in all trials of travelling preachers.

Counsel shall be allowed, if desired, who shall be of our church, and the accused may appeal to the next session of the Annual Conference, if he give notice at the time of his trial of his intention to appeal, as soon as he is officially informed of its result.

When accusations are made at a session of the Annual Conference the same proceedings shall be observed as in the trial of other elders or deacons.

Question 3. What shall be done in case of improper tempers, words or actions?

Answer. The preacher offending shall be reprehended by his presiding elder in office. Should a second offense take place, two or three witnesses are to be taken; if he be not then convicted of accusations shall be preferred, he shall be dealt with as in case of immorality—the trial to be conducted as before elted, and the several steps and duties to be allowed and performed.

Question 4. What shall be done with those ministers or preachers who hold and disseminate publicly and privately doctrines which are contrary to our articles of religion?

Answer. Let the same process be observed as in cases of immorality, if the minister or preacher so offending does solemnly engage not to disseminate such erroneous doctrines in public or in private, he shall be dealt with until his case can be laid before the Annual Conference. If he will not give satisfaction to the Conference by a statement and defense of his views on doctrines, he shall be dealt with as in cases of immorality, provided he does not voluntarily retire from the Conference and church.

SECTION III—PAGE 13.

Question. What shall be done with a preacher on trial who is accused of immorality?

Answer. He shall be dealt with according to the law for the trial of local preachers, not only as to immorality, but in all other cases. But a preacher on trial shall be responsible to the Quarterly Conference of the pastoral charge that he may be serving at the time; provided the offense was committed beyond the bounds of his circuit or station. Every case shall be tried by the Quarterly Conference where the offense was committed.

Question 5. When accusations or charges are not made until the session of the Annual Conference, what course shall be taken in all the above-named cases?

Answer. Let a committee of five ministers be appointed to investigate the accusations, and report to the Annual Conference whether a trial is necessary. If a trial is called for, the president of the Conference shall appoint a committee of not less than five elders or deacons to try the case, and one of the Conference secretaries shall attend to record the proceedings of the trial. The charges and specifications, if not furnished by the accused, shall be made out by the investigating committee. The president of the Conference shall appoint a prosecutor to represent the church in the trial. Counsel shall be allowed the accused, if desired, in all cases of trial and appeal, who shall be of our church.

If the accused be condemned by a vote of a majority of the trial committee, the president of the court shall pronounce such penalty of expulsion or suspension as the court may adjudge proper in the case. The proceedings in the trial shall be reported to Conference, and the judgment made matter of record. The case of appeal shall be allowed from the trial court to the appellate court at the same session, or to the next session, or as soon as the court can be assembled to try the appeal.

APPELLATE COURT, ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

1. Each Annual Conference shall organize a court of appeal, to hold their authority for a term of four years, if deemed proper by the Conference; otherwise to be appointed nnually. The president of the Conference shall appoint a committee of not less than five clerical members of the Conference, to be called the Appeal Committee, who shall be presided over by the president of the Conference, or some one appointed by him to preside. The appellate court shall have authority to reverse the verdict of the court below, or to remand for a new trial.

2. A traveling preacher, tried and condemned in the interval of an Annual Conference, shall have the right of appeal to this court of his own Conference, or, if preferred, to the appellate court of an adjacent Conference. He shall have access to all the proceedings of the court which tried his case, and the proceedings of such court shall be the matter to be investigated on appeal. The proceedings of the trial committee shall be presented to the Conference by the president of the trial, or secretary, duly signed by these officers. Appellant must give notice of his intention to appeal at the time of his condemnation, or as soon as he is officially informed of the result of the trial.

3. The appellate court shall have jurisdiction in the trial of all appeals in local preachers, and shall have authority to reverse the verdict of a Quarterly Conference, and to remand for a new trial.

4. In the case of traveling preachers, the General Conference shall review the decisions of questions of law contained in the written records and documents transmitted to it from the appellate court; and where serious error, prejudicial to the interests of the accused, shall be discovered, shall take such action as justice may require.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

REPORT NO. I OF THE COMMITTEE ON ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

The committee, to whom was referred the communication of the Bishops of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to report that they have inquired carefully concerning the cases of church property to which the decision seems to be made, and find that the writers are under misapprehension respecting the facts of these cases and the attitude of our people on the premises. We are satisfied that the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church has failed to obtain title to church property only in cases in which State laws, as administered by the lawfully appointed judiciary, have refused such title—particularly in cases where the congregations of colored people have gone as a whole (with few exceptions) into other communions. Where our colored brethren cannot establish a society, however feeble, the transfer of title is nothing; and in some States a skilled majority have been able to carry with them the church property, even a respectable minority, backed by all the moral and financial of our white trustees.

We know of no cases where property formerly belonging to our colored people has been sold and the money diverted to other purposes. The funds for such sales are in our hands, or in any way under our control.

We recommend the passage of the following resolutions:

1. That the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America has still, as it has always heretofore had, our warmest sympathy and most cordial Christian affection.

2. That we direct all boards of trustees among us, still holding title to property erected for the use of our colored members, to transfer the title to trustees duly appointed by the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, whenever this can be done without violation of State laws or contravention of the vested rights of congregations.

3. That we earnestly recommend our people everywhere to give substantial aid to the efforts made by our brethren of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church to establish institutions for the improvement of their people, believing that no worthier object of Christian liberality appeals to them for assistance.

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

The committee, to whom was referred the various papers relating to Ecumenical Conference of Methodists, and especially the communication from a large committee of correspondence appointed by the Methodist Episcopal Church in November, beg to submit the following report:

The church, which began with John Wesley's organization of the "United Societies" in 1739, has, in one hundred years, spread over almost the entire globe. Some representatives of it are found in nearly every place where civilized man has a home. By the natural operation of the voluntary principle, such multitudes have formed a large number of distinct bodies. Besides the three most important bodies—the Wesleyans of Great Britain, and the Methodist Episcopal Churches, North and South, in this country—there are no fewer than at least ten others in Great Britain and her colonies, and in this republic six white and three colored organizations, besides one or two in foreign countries, such as the French Wesleyans. The magnitude and importance of these Methodist Churches, when viewed as a whole, in the religious world, are seldom realized. A late estimate places their ministers at more than thirty thousand in number, and their membership as exceeding four millions. Truly God has wrought a prodigious work by the hand of our fathers and their successors in the ministry! No such religious movement is on record.

But although this vast multitude of believers hold substantially the same Arminian theology, and one distinguished by the same peculiar usages, and have many important interests in common, there has not been any recognized medium of communication and consultation among them. Until recently there was no fraternal recognition of one of the largest of the bodies by the most numerous and powerful of the Methodist organizations. Happily, that barrier to a General Council or Conference of the Methodism of the world is removed, as we trust, forever.

The benefit of an Ecumenical Conference of the Methodists of the world would undoubtedly be great. Besides the discussion of a great variety of topics of surpassing interest to all the family of Methodism, and the reviews of the multiplied agencies which Methodism has brought into play for the evangelization of the world, a new impulse would be given to the tendency, already great, to harmony and unfeigned concord among Methodists of different communions. And the sight of such a great family reunion would fasten the eyes of the world upon us, producing a discussion of Methodist history and work in the periodical literature of the Christian world—"a discussion from which," as the Methodist Episcopal Church committee well say, "Methodism has everything to gain and nothing to lose."

As one of the practical results of an Ecumenical Conference, one of the papers referred to suggests the preparation of a hymn-book for the whole Methodist family. Your committee are not prepared to venture an opinion as to the feasibility of such a project, being little able to conceive the actual obstacles to its success which might arise. They can, however, join heartily in the wish that such a thing might be done. If the spectacle of all the Sunday schools of our land reciting on each Sabbath the same lesson from Scripture be truly described as sublime among the results of Christian labor of our days, what should we call the singing of four millions of Methodists out of the same hymn-book! The great achievements of Christianity have, however, always been the unseen—the "mighty working" of a kingdom which "cometh without observation"—and we should look for the greatest and most pervasive benefits of an Ecumenical Conference of Methodism in its effect upon the spirit, the experience, the hopes and zeal of so great a people. The dying words of our father, under God, "The best of all, God is with us," would have a new meaning to those assembled in such a Conference, and "the fruit" of such a state of mind, communicated to those who sent them, "would shake like Lebanon."

Your committee recommend for your adoption the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, That the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South heartily approve of the proposed Ecumenical Conference of Methodist Churches.

2. That the Bishops of our church be and are hereby authorized and directed to appoint a committee of seven, consisting of two of the Bishops, three other ministers, and two laymen, who shall be fully empowered to arrange for such a Conference and to represent our church in the correspondence necessary thereto; and to appoint delegates to represent the Methodist Episcopal Church South in the Ecumenical Conference whenever it may assemble.

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT NO. III OF THE COMMITTEE ON ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

The committee, to whom were referred the resolutions of Thomas O. Summers and A. G. Haygood respecting the celebration of the centenary of American Methodism in 1884, having duly considered the same, beg leave to report that in their judgment the subject is one of importance to all the families of Methodism on this continent, and that it is desirable that whatever step may be taken by our church in the matter shall be taken at this session of the General Conference.

The preamble and resolutions being an unexceptionable expression of what should be the feeling and action of the Conference, we return them with the recommendation that they be adopted.

Respectfully submitted.

PAUL WHITEHEAD,
A. G. STITT,
N. H. D. WILSON,
R. ALEXANDER,
Committee.

CENTENARY OF AMERICAN METHODISM.

Whereas, The year 1884 will be the centenary of American Methodism—the Methodist Episcopal Church in America having been organized in the city of Baltimore in December, 1784; and

And whereas, That event ought to be duly commemorated by all the Methodists on this continent; therefore,

Resolved, 1. That the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, now assembled in Atlanta, Ga., deem it desirable that a Conference of Methodists in the United States, the Dominion of Canada, and other parts of the continent of America, be held in the city of Baltimore, at Christmas, in the year 1884 that being the centenary of the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America.

2. That the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church South be requested, in behalf of this Conference, to open a correspondence on this subject with the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the presidents of the several Canada Conferences, and of all other Methodist bodies on this continent.

3. That the Bishops and presidents aforesaid be and the same are hereby requested to mature a programme for the solemn observance of the centenary of the organization of American Methodism in the city of Baltimore, Md., December 25, 1884.

THOS O. SUMMERS.
A. G. HAYGOOD.

SEVENTEENTH DAY.

MONDAY, May 20, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour.

Bishop Paine in the chair.

Divine service was conducted by J. D Cameron.

The minutes were read and confirmed.

J. B. McFerrin, chairman of the Committee on Publishing Interests, presented Report No. 5 of that committee, which was read.

T. M. Finney, from that committee, presented a minority report, which was read. The following resolution was then offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That Report No. 5 of the Committee on Publishing Interests, and also Report No. 5 of the minority of said committee, be laid on the table and printed, and be made the order of the day for to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

P. A. PETERSON.
T. M. FINNEY.

Mr. Bennett (clerical, Virginia Conference) desired to know if the committee had a detailed and accurate statement of the affairs of the Depository at New Orleans.

Mr. McFerrin, the chairman, gave the data of information, but said it was not as full and clear as desired.

D. C. Kelley, chairman of the Committee on Missions, presented Report No. 6 of that committee, which was laid on the table.

On motion of J. E. Evans, all similar reports are to be disposed of without reading.

J. E. Evans, chairman of the Committee on Revisal, presented Report No. 14 of that committee, which was read and adopted. (See report.)

He also presented Report No. 15 of that committee, which was laid on the table, under the rule.

Also Report No. 16 of that committee, which was read.

W. O Gray moved its adoption.

W. Mooney moved to take it up item by item. This motion was laid on the table.

W. Mooney moved to amend item seven by striking out the word "non." This motion was laid on the table.

H. C. Settle moved to amend item five by striking out the word "non." This motion prevailed.

R. S. Finley moved to amend item nineteen by striking out the word "non."

T. L. Mellen moved to lay that motion on the table. This motion prevailed.

J. S. Key moved the previous question. The call was sustained, the question was put, and the report, as a whole, was adopted. (See report.)

J. E. Evans, chairman of the Committee on Revisal, presented Report No. 17 of that committee, which was laid on the table, under the rule.

C. K. Marshall, chairman of the Committee on Sunday-Schools, presented Report No. 6 of that committee, which was read and adopted. See report.

W. P. Harrison, chairman of the Committee on Education, presented Report No. 4 of that committee, which was read, and on motion of J. E. Evans was adopted.

The following communication was then presented by the chair and read:

ATLANTA, GA., May 21, 1878.

To the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

Dear Brethren—As fraternal messengers from the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, we take pleasure in handing you herewith a copy of the revised Discipline of our church, and also a copy of the Journal of the Reunion Convention of 1877. In the latter, we call your attention to the action of our church on the subject of an Ecumenical Conference (see page 46,) and would add that whatever action the other branches may take on this question, our church will be ready to affiliate in the spirit contemplated by the great movement. Our committees of correspondence and visitation are already officially appointed, and we only await the further action of the larger branches of the great Methodist family. We shall confidently expect a fraternal deputation from your honored body to our next General Conference, to meet in Pittsburg, Pa., in May, 1880.

Yours in the bonds of the gospel,

ALEXANDER CLARK.
GEORGE R. HARR.
F. H. M. HENDERSON.

On motion of J. E. Evans the documents were received with thanks, and ordered to be placed in the archives of the General Conference.

The following communication was then presented to the chair and read:

ATLANTA, GA., May 20, 1878.

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the M. E. Church South:

Dear Fathers and Brethren—I beg leave to invite your attention to the following resolution, adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Baltimore, in May, 1876:

"Resolved, That Thursday, May 6, 1880, be the day for the reception of fraternal delegations, and that the evening of that day, and such other evenings as the Conference may order, shall be set apart for listening to addresses from delegations; and that all bodies in correspondence with us be fully advertised in our letters, and by our visiting delegates, of the day ordered by this body for the reception of fraternal delegates, their letters and their words of greeting."

The next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church is appointed to be held in the city of Cincinnati. Permit me to add that I am sure the cordiality of its welcome of your fraternal delegates will emulate, though it cannot surpass, your example; and will make Cincinnati as bright a spot in their memory as Atlanta must ever be in that of my co-delegate and myself.

I am very truly and fraternally yours,

CYRUS D FOSS.

On motion of E. E. Wiley the communication was received, and ordered to be entered on the Journal.

Dr. Foss was then brought forward by the chair. He took a most affectionate leave of the Conference.

The Rev. Dr. Foss, president of the Wesleyan University, Conn., and the clerical fraternal messenger from the Methodist Episcopal Church, on the eve of his departure home, was introduced by Bishop Pierce.

Mr. Foss said:

I thank you, sir (to the Bishop.) (Great cheering, after which he continued:) I thank the Bishop and the Conference for the privilege of standing here for a few moments this morning, for I must leave this afternoon to return to my work, from which I knew not how to separate, even for two weeks, in the midst of the last term of our college, and the pressure this season always brings.

I am glad for the great privilege of passing through the South, and seeing several of its largest cities and institutions of learning, and, above all, to look into the face of the men who compose this venerable and honored body.

Let me say, first of all, how dreply my colleague, ex-Gov. Cumback, who has been compelled to leave from imperative engagements, could he have remained, would have echoed words of gratitude and appreciation, the most cordial we could possibly command, in expression of our sense of the overwhelming welcome and hospitality which we have received from the first moment of our arrival until now. I cannot utter my high sense of the genuine and hearty reception tendered us by the Southern Methodist Church, and the Christian welcome appearing in every word uttered and every act. In the name of the church whose humble messenger we are, bearing Christian greetings, I thank you. It would be a great joy to stay longer, for outside of my official relations I have been welcomed to join with you in preaching the word of the kingdom. In my private intercourse, and especially in the sacramental services of yesterday, where heart responded to heart, and told what words could not tell—told, by glowing faces and beaming eyes, of that union in our Lord Jesus Christ, our God and Head.

I would be greatly gratified to accept the invitation, through the wife of one of your Bishops, from some of your elect ladies, to tarry longer and speak in the interest of the woman's work in the church, which is profoundly dear to my heart, because I have been connected with our Woman Conference Missionary Society for years. The time to leave has come, and from my heart I say: God bless you. I am speaking for the whole church to which I belong when I say I want it distinctly known that we affirm and maintain that fraternity is an accomplished, eternal fact. (Applause.)

There may be now and then some little opposition, yet allow me to say this seeming warring against the idea is an insignificant fact. I am certain it is but a surface ripple in a flood-tide—a tide which, by God's grace, must not, shall not be allowed to ebb. (Applause.)

May peace evermore abide with this branch, and the others, of our beloved Methodism. (Continued applause.)

The chair, Bishop Paine, in the name of his colleagues of the Episcopal College, and of the General Conference and the connection they represent, amid much emotion took leave of the doctor, giving him the parting hand, accompanied by most earnest assurances of fraternal regard.

Mr. Marshall, lay, Mississippi Conference, said that he desired, in the name of the people—for he spoke from the ranks, for the million and more under the ministry of his church—to say that the Methodists of the South send greetings, cordial, loving greetings, to the church Dr. Foss was representing. He rejoiced to know that there was daily an increasing desire to cultivate closer relations with those branches of the church that teach the doctrines of Wesley. He closed by saying: "In behalf of my brethren, farewell. God bless you evermore."

Bishop Paine said: I cannot permit you to depart without expressing not merely the sentiments, but the deep, abiding feelings which my colleagues, myself and my brethren entertain for you personally, and for the church you worthily represent. We have already welcomed you. We gave you the welcome of our hearts as well as our lips. We meant what we said, and felt what we said.

Please return, for myself and colleagues, to your respected church and bishops, the sincere and fraternal regard we have for them. Say, sir, that these men (looking at the Conference) intend to abide by the great principle of fraternity. We will not regard the ripple on the surface. Let us cultivate peace, fraternity and sincere love between the two great branches of Methodism. (Applause.)

A. M. Shipp, chairman of the Committee on Fraternal Correspondence, presented Report No. 7 of that committee, which was read and adopted.

W. P. Harrison, chairman of the Committee on Education, presented and read Report No. 4 of that committee, and on motion of N. H. Lee the report was adopted.

The chair then brought forward the Rev. Drs. Clark, Barr and Henderson, fraternal delegates from the Methodist Protestant Church, who severally made affectionate parting salutations. They were eloquently and cordially replied to by the chair, Bishop Doggett.

The Rev. Dr. Clark, the fraternal messenger from the Methodist Protestant Church, gave a parting address, in which he said: "You have done us good, and given courage to our people in having the love of such a multitude in the South. We have found, on every visit to the South, more to love, more to enjoy, more to remember. Our church is not large, but very loving; therefore, for special reasons, we appreciate the precious and broad recognition given us. May God guide and bless you in all your chosen work."

The Rev. Dr. Barr, a member of that delegation, made a farewell speech.

The president (Bishop Doggett) said: Dr. Clark and your honored associates, the courtesy of occasions of this sort require that the presiding officer should make response to the sentiments which are uttered. I am not gifted, sir, in handling compliments, but I arise, on behalf of my colleagues and brethren, heartily to reciprocate the fraternal sentiments you have borne to us, and uttered in such eloquent language.

We have had a brilliant succession of representatives until the present moment. I may be allowed to say that any trembling apprehension lest the first reception had exhausted all the resources of graceful and moving oratory was a wide mistake. We thought, after the powerful and elegant addresses of Dr. Foss and his colleague, that all the elements of such a demonstration had reached a conclusion and climax; but I must pause and say that you and your comrades have gone pari passu with your predecessors. No one enjoyed more than myself the clash and poetical garb in which your address was presented to this assembly, or the wit of our brother Henderson (applause) as the fire flashed when his brawny stroke hit the iron.

A grand and noble principle underlies all these demonstrations. A deep fountain of Christian life and love pours upon us from all these sources. We not only have been gratified, but benefited. It has been a species of education. For the moment we rise to the mount of transfiguration, and are invested with the garment of light and love. I exclaim, "It is good for us to be here."

I was betrayed into the chair at this time. (Bishop Paine had been presiding officer.) Yet, I beg to say, I am pleased to be identified with this courtesy of a last "good-by" to our Protestant Methodist brethren. I hope it will be the pleasure of this Conference to reciprocate the action of your church, and when the time comes a worthy representative will attend your Conference in Pittsburg. In the meantime, peace be with you, and the blessing of the everlasting covenant. (Applause.)

R. A. Young, chairman of the Committee on Finance, presented Report No. 15 of that committee, which was read and adopted. Also Report No. 16 of that committee, which was read and laid on the table, under the rule.

On motion of A. H. Colquitt, chairman of the Committee on Introductions, twelve o'clock to-morrow was designated as the time for the reception of the fraternal delegates from the Canada Methodist Church.

The Conference adjourned with the doxology and benediction by the Bishop.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Conference was called to order at three o'clock by Bishop Doggett.

The opening divine services were conducted by Rev. T. Stanford, of the Northwest Texas Conference.

Report No. 6 of the Committee on Itinerancy was read, as follows:

REPORT NO. VI OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

The Committee on Itinerancy have patiently and carefully considered all the papers referred to them in regard to changes in the presiding eldership, and respectfully present, as their deliberate conclusion on the subject, the recommendation that no change be made in the Discipline in regard to the presiding elder question.

J. S. MARTIN, Chairman.
C. G. ANDREWS, Sec.

The following substitute was read in the same connection:

Let the report of the committee be substituted by the following resolution:

Resolved, That the proviso to answer 8, question 3, section 2, chapter 3, page 70 of our Discipline, on the duties of Bishops, be stricken out, so that the answer shall read as follows: "To see that the districts be formed according to his judgment."

J. E. EDWARDS.
J. D. VINCIL.

Presented and laid on the table, Wednesday, May 15, 1878.

Mr. Merriwether (lay, North Georgia Conference) moved to table the substitute.

The motion was put and carried.

Mr. Peterson moved, as an amendment to the report, that the limit of the number of appointments in a presiding elder's district be limited to twenty, instead of to fourteen, as at present.

Mr. Merriwether called the previous question, and the call was sustained.

The amendment offered by Dr. Peterson was then passed.

The report, as amended, was put, and it was announced that it was passed. A division was called by several. The vote was taken by division.

The count was had, and there were in favor of the report, as amended, 154 yeas to 18 nays. So it was adopted.

On motion the Conference adjourned, with the doxology and benediction, to nine A. M. to-morrow.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

REPORT NO. XVIII OF THE COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

Resolutions of W. S. Black, W. H. Hobbitt and others, proposing to insert after paragraph 33, chapter II, section 4, page 180-1, a new paragraph, to be numbered 1—respectfully recommend that the following be inserted, as above indicated:

"The trustees of district property, with the advice of the presiding elder and the District Conference, shall have power to sell a district parsonage, or any district property which has gone out of use or should be removed to another place, the proceeds of which shall be invested in other district property, under the direction of the presiding elder and the District Conference."

Respectfully submitted.

J. E. EVANS, Chairman.
F. M. KENNEDY, Sec.

Presented and laid on the table, Monday morning, May 20, 1878.

REPORT NO. XV OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Your committee, to whom was referred a resolution adopted by the Quarterly Conference of Little Osage circuit, Neosho district, Southwest Missouri Conference, March 23, 1878, respecting a devise, by J. J. Bearden, of half of his estate to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, made examination of the matter mentioned in said resolution, and after corresponding with a party living at Nevada, Missouri, the locality where it is reported that said Bearden died, and having had the probate records examined, are unable to find that any such man as J. J. Bearden ever lived or died, testate or otherwise, and return herewith said resolution. But considering that there may have been a mistake of locality stated, and the possibility that a careful examination of the matter may reveal some rights belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That Bro. T. M. Cobbin be and is hereby appointed an agent of this General Conference to collect and receive any legacy which may have been devised to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, by J. J. Bearden, deceased, and pay the same over to the treasurer of the Board of Missions, if collected.

A. C. C. WINCH, Sec.

Presented and adopted, Monday morning, May 20, 1878.

REPORT NO. XVI OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Your committee, to whom was referred a resolution signed by P. Gallagher and others, instructing your committee to inquire into the expediency of enacting a law so that bond, with approved security, shall be required of all our General Conference officers, and others who may be placed in charge of funds belonging to the church, have considered thereof, and have instructed me to report that they recommend the enactment of a new and separate chapter to the Discipline, as follows:

CHAPTER ——.

On Securities to be Given by Officers for Church Funds Belonging to the Church.

SECTION —. Officers of this General Conference, having funds in charge, shall be required to give bond, with approved securities, for the faithful performance of their duties in the several sums, and payable in case of default, to the several parties named, as follows:

The treasurer of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in the sum of —— dollars.

The treasurer of the Bishops' fund to the Book Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in the sum of —— dollars.

The agent of the Publishing House to the Book Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in the sum of —— dollars.

A. C. C. WINCH, Sec.

Presented and laid on the table, Monday morning, May 20, 1878.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.

TUESDAY, May 21, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour.

Bishop Doggett in the chair.

Divine service was conducted by J. E. Edwards.

The minutes were read and confirmed.

A communication from C. C. Shaw and others, from Kaufman, Texas, deprecating any change of boundaries in the Conference affecting their relation to the North Texas Conference, was presented, read, and received as information.

A memorial on temperance, from Mrs. M. McClellan Brown, Pittsburg, Pa., was presented by the chair and referred to the Committee on Temperance.

Bishop Doggett, on leaving the chair, admonished the members to observe due decorum, and discharge their duties with all convenient dispatch.

Bishop Kavanaugh took the chair.

A resolution offered by R. Paine, Jr., J. B. McFerrin and A. C. C. Winch, respecting the claim of the Publishing House before Congress, was read and referred to the Committee on Publishing Interests.

A motion of C. W. Miller to discharge the commissioners on the claim was, on motion of J. E. Evans, laid on the table.

W. W. Bennett moved to suspend the order of the day to allow J. B. McFerrin, chairman of the Committee on Publishing Interests, to present Report No. 5 of that committee, respecting the New Orleans Depository, which was read and laid on the table, and ordered to be printed.

The order of the day having arrived, Report No. 5 of the Committee on Publishing Interests was read, also the minority report.

On motion of W. W. Bennett the report of the majority was taken up by items.

Item one was read.

E. A. Yates moved to amend by striking out the words "manufacturing and."

J. E. Cobb spoke in favor of the amendment. At the expiration of his time, W. Mooney moved to extend the time. This motion did not prevail.

A. R. Winfield, R. A. Young and W. P. Harrison spoke against it.

The order of the day being the reception of the Rev. Dr. Douglas, fraternal messenger from the General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada:

A. H. Colquitt, chairman of the Committee on Introductions, presented the Rev. Dr. Douglas to the chair (Bishop Kavanaugh,) and by him to his colleagues of the Episcopal College, and then to the Conference, by which he was received standing.

The address of the General Conference of the Methodist Church in Canada, which was read, is as follows:

Reading and Running.

That was a sufficient reason why the prophet should make the vision plain upon tables: "That he may run that readeth." Paul's illustration of a trumpet that gives no uncertain sound is of the same import. There must be such plainness, clearness and simplicity that the message cannot be misunderstood. The reading must incite men to run. The hearing must be such as to lead them to prepare for the battle.

There is a vision of danger. Sinners stand in slippery places. A great calamity is at hand. It is certain that death and the judgment are not far away. Herein is the great responsibility of those who stand between the living and the dead. They are to write the vision and make it plain upon tables. In order that he may run that readeth, the danger must be manifest. There must be a sense of peril, and an awakening to the nearness of the doom that awaits the impenitent.

There are other things that contribute to the convincing power of the proclamation, but this one is chief. Plainness there must be in connection with earnestness and argument. Sin, death and hell, and the terrors of the great day, cannot be too forcibly preached. The vision of mercy has no significance, except as portrayed in connection with these fearful realities. "Escape for thy life" is the startling message that should find place in every rendering of God's word to sinners.

The reading is in order to the running. This is the legitimate effect of it. Indifference, deep slumber, false security, delusive hope, are all nourished by partial views of truth, by the perversion of mercy, and by keeping back the threatenings of the divine law. If there is no running, there has been no true reading. If there are no alarms of conscience, no casting about for a refuge from the impending storm, and no serious seeking for a stronghold of safety from the invading foe, the vision of prophetic truth has not been made plain upon the tables.

God has his seers now as in ancient times. Parents have visions of truth gathered from experience, from their knowledge of the divine word. The perils which surround their children are clear to them. Theirs is the post of responsibility, of authority, of watchfulness. Do they write the vision and make it plain on tables, that he may run that readeth it? Every Christian, in relation to the unawakened world around him, is a prophet of God, and he is commanded to make the vision plain. Has this living epistle been such as to arouse any endangered soul, to turn any sinner from the paths of death, to so awaken any careless one that he has been induced to run for his life?

Christians—we do not say Christian ministers only, but Christians—have an account to render herein. Gracious personal awakenings should mark the lives and influence of all true believers. It is a question of faithfulness to be settled now with their own consciences, and hereafter at the final disclosure of all things. The most terrible comment that can be made on any religious ministry or profession is that it has rather silenced than awakened the fears of the impenitent; that instead of starting them in the race for heaven it has confirmed them in their indifference and neglect. That there are such ministries and such professions we cannot doubt. They are false lights that lure upon the rocks, rather than such as warn the mariner of the dangerous shore. Fidelity to the vision as it is in the inspired deliverance, and in the heart-changing experience, is the lesson that most believers need to study continually. All neglected and misled souls will confront us at last. The vision will then be made plain, but it will be too late to run.

Voltaireism.

Paris is now alive with visitors from all parts of the world. The great Exposition and its attendant throngs afford an excellent occasion for all sorts of demonstrations. It is not wonderful, therefore, that there should be a Voltaire celebration. While this was going on at the Galete Theater and at the American Circus, expiatory services, ordered by the Cardinal Archbishop of Paris, were being conducted in the cathedral of Notre Dame.

Voltaire was a profligate deist, who rejected all inspired revelation, but his ridicule, satire and wit were directed especially against the Roman Catholic Church. He was somewhat more lenient toward Protestantism—so it is said—but Catholicism was to him the representative Christianity of the world, and he was unsparing in his denunciations of it. On May 30 he had been dead just one hundred years, and on that day his disciples and admirers were congregated in Paris to honor his memory, and the church he detested was engaged in special services to expiate this great wickedness.

The past century has demonstrated the weakness and folly of Voltaire's principles, and abundantly refuted his prophecy as to the approaching downfall of Christianity. The progress of the Christian religion during the past hundred years has been truly wonderful, and has far out-stripped the infidelity of which Voltaire was the exponent. The deism of Voltaire has given place to a material and atheistic philosophy, but the spirit of Voltaire lives in all the phases of modern infidelity. It is working in the social ferment of the times, and is dominant in the communistic movements which threaten some day to shake the social fabric of the world and to convulse the governments of the earth.

Voltaireism is essentially the spirit of revolution in religion, in politics and in society. It is the throwing off of all moral restraint, and of all divine authority, leaving the human race adrift without chart or compass. Left to work out its own principles to their final results, it would reduce the world to a complete chaos—a condition of the wildest disorder in which there would be left to mankind no faith in God, and no basis for the regulation of human conduct. It is the opposite of Christianity and the great antagonist of the gospel. It is, in effect, the anti-Christ of the ages, and the embodiment of the carnal mind in its enmity against God.

We cannot doubt the result of the conflict. The hundred years since Voltaire died have marked the tremendous development of Protestant Christianity. Give it another century of equal progress and triumph, and there will be little left of paganism in the world, and not much of Voltaireism. We do well, however, not to shut our eyes to this dangerous leaven that is secretly working to undermine the truth of God and the foundations of society. The darkest and most threatening cloud that hangs over us is this herding and banding of skepticism and infidelity. The only thing that gives us hope for the world's future is in the power of a living and progressive Christianity. Struggles and conflicts there will be, but the gospel is certain to gain the victory in the end.

Drinking and Dancing

The Protestant Episcopal Council of Virginia passed the following resolutions on drinking:

Resolved, That in view of the alarming increase of intemperate drinking within as well as without the Christian church, and the evil habit of social drinking in places of public resort by the members of the church, this council reaffirms the fourth resolution reported from the committee on the subject of temperance, and passed at the council of the church in 1876, which is in the following words, to wit:

"Resolved, That the laity be earnestly exhorted to consider the evil tendencies to themselves of social drinking, especially in public places, and the consequences resulting to others from the influence of their example."

Resolved further, That the clergy of this church are urged to be more earnest in their efforts to put a stop to this evil habit, and the laity are affectionately but earnestly exhorted to sustain their respective pastors in the use of all legitimate means to abate this shameful practice.

The council made this deliverance on round dancing:

Resolved, That the members of this council, both clerical and lay, do most earnestly deprecate the practice of round dancing between the sexes, and believe it to be the solemn duty of every communicant of this church to abstain therefrom.

2. That we earnestly entreat the members of our communion, as they value their own souls and for the love of Christ, to heed the godly admonition of our Bishop on this subject.

3. That these resolutions be printed in two successive numbers of the Southern Churchman, and that every minister in this diocese be requested to read them before his congregation, and to use every effort to arrest this evil by admonition and discipline.

Bishop Cox, of western New York, says:

On the subject of public morals I have made it my duty almost every year to exhort you to maintain a high standard in all relations with society. The immense social influence of this church makes us in this respect a city set upon a hill. Society in our large cities, in its very highest circles, feels and respects the example of men and women of our communion as that of our recognized leaders. That so much that is merely "fashionable" should thus be laid at our doors I deeply regret; but there is another view of the facts, which is not so painful. Think what may be done for good in any city or town by the example of our people if, only recognizing their responsibility, they will agree to exert their influence on the side of all that is "pure and lovely and of good report." The gross, debasing waltz would not be tolerated another year if Christian mothers in our communion would set their faces against it and remove their daughters from its contamination, and their sons from that contempt of womanhood and for womanly modesty, of which thousands of young men proclaim themselves by word and deed to have no very high estimate. Alas! that women professing to follow Christ and godliness should not rally for the honor of their sex and drive these shameless dances from society.

All this is very well as far as it goes, and we are glad to record such action and statements on the part of the Protestant Episcopal authorities. It would have gratified us more if they had taken ground against the use of intoxicating drinks altogether, and if they had condemned all promiscuous dancing. But it is something for them to come out against social drinking and the round dance. If they can get these two great evils out of the church it will be doing something for the moral and spiritual influence of their church.

Letter from China.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, April 24, 1878.

REV. LINUS PARKER, D. D.—My Dear Brother: I want to ask you to publish this letter in which I will bring up the subject of printing books, papers, etc., for preachers, church members and schools in China. I want to have the subject brought before the Sunday schools, and see if we can get any of them to take an interest in this work for the benefit of the Chinese. I have written to all the presiding elders in the Mississippi Conference, asking them to help us in this work, and I hope the Sunday schools in Louisiana will also take an interest in the work of giving books to the Chinese Christians. I would be glad to have any of the Sunday schools to any of the Conferences of the Church South help us. I am now printing a geography, with maps, for our schools; also Bishop McTyeire's Bible History. We want to print, as soon as possible, the Concordance to the Bible; also Ralston's Elements of Divinity, Binney's Theological Compend, and a book of Scripture emblems. We need these books, and cannot do without them. We have also a Sunday school paper, called Glad News, for schools and church members. Now will any of our Sunday schools help us in this good work? We cannot teach these people without having the right kind of books. A little from one Sunday school and a little from another will enable us to go on and print these books and papers, and it will be one of the best ways of giving the gospel to the Chinese. If any one, or any Sunday school, can and will help us, send your money to Dr. Kelley, at Nashville, Tenn., and specify the object for which it is given. If for printing books, or for the Sunday school paper, say so, and it will be appropriated in that way; and if for schools, it shall be appropriated to that special work. I appeal to all the Sunday schools. Let us hear from you. If it be only a few dollars—five or ten dollars from this school and that—we shall soon be able to print all the books we want. Please let us hear from the dear children; and may God add his richest blessing on all your efforts.

I am yours in Christian love,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

We commend the above appeal of Bro. Lambuth to our readers and to our Sunday schools. The printing press must be used as auxiliary to the living preacher in promoting the spread of the gospel and in evangelizing the heathen. Funds contributed in accordance with the above request will be as good seed, that will bear fruit in all time to come.

General Conference Officers.

Board of Missions—T. O. Summers, president; A. W. Wilson, secretary; James W. Manier, treasurer. The managers are: J. S. Mardu, Baltimore Conference; W. G. E Cunnyngham, Holston; L. S. Burkhead, North Carolina; H. A. C. Walker, South Carolina; W. H. Potter, North Georgia; R. A. Young, Tennessee; P. A. Peterson, Virginia; A. H. Redford, Louisville; I. G. John, Texas; A. R. Winfield, Little Rock; J. W. Lewis, St. Louis; E. R. Hendrix Missouri; J. C. Simmons, Pacific; O. P. Fitzgerald, Pacific; J. B. McFerrin, Tennessee; R. K. Hargrove, Tennessee; J. D. Hamilton, Tennessee, and C. B. Galloway Mississippi.

Officers of the Publishing House—Book agent J. B. McFerrin; Book Committee, Dempsey Weaver, Nashville; James Whitworth, Nashville; T. D. Fite, Nashville; Nathaniel Baxter, Jr., Nashville; Dr. William Morrow, Nashville; Judge E. H. East, Nashville; Dr. William H. Morgan, Nashville; R. K. Hargrove, Nashville; R. A. Young, Nashville; John A. Carter, Louisville; S. H. Dansconb, Memphis; A. G. Haygood, Georgia, and A. S. Andrews, Alabama. Book editor, T. O. Summers; editor of the Christian Advocate O. P. Fitzgerald; Sunday school editor, W. G. E. Cunnyngham.

Editors of Other Church Papers Elected by Delegates of Patronizing Conferences—St. Louis Christian Advocate D. R. McAnally; Western Methodist W. C. Johnson; Texas Christian Advocate T. G. John; Southern Christian Advocate (to be removed to South Carolina) F. M. Kennedy; Wesleyan Christian Advocate (to be published at Macon, Ga.) A. G. Haygood—J. W. Burke, assistant; NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Linus Parker; Pacific Methodist W. B. Parsons; Central Methodist, Z. Meek.

The successor of the Southern Christian Advocate, at Macon, Ga., has a genuine orthodox name. The Wesleyan Christian Advocate comes to us under date of June 4, with Dr. Kennedy's parting words, and with the introductory of the new editor, Dr. Haygood. Dr. Haygood will continue to reside at Oxford as president of Emory College. An assistant, Mr. Lundy H. Harris, will attend to the office work in Macon. J. W. Burke continues as publisher and assistant editor. Dr. Haygood is a practiced and pointed writer, and with such an efficient staff the Wesleyan Methodist will stand among the first of our religious journals. We are glad to know that Dr. Kennedy does not leave the tripod. He is a man of genial spirit, and an elegant and forcible writer. We shall welcome with pleasure the advent of the Southern from its old home in South Carolina. Dr. Kennedy says:

The publication of the Southern Christian Advocate—to the continued editorship of which I have been called by my Conference—will be resumed as soon as the necessary arrangements are completed, of which due notice will be given; and I shall hope to have the privilege of communing through its columns with not a few of its long-time readers.

Rev. Dr. Redford announces that the new paper which he is to edit and publish at Louisville—the Southern Methodist—will appear on the 1st of September next. The editor has large experience in journalism, and will, no doubt, issue an attractive and valuable paper. We wish him success and happiness in his work.

The Southern General Conference, says the New York Methodist, has amended its presiding elder system so as to permit the bishops to put twenty charges in a district, instead of fourteen, as at present. The debate over this progress toward our system reminds us again of that curious oriental condition which prompts men to support the episcopacy by rendering it powerless. The argument for change was chiefly the demand of churches for relief from the immense money burden of the presiding eldership. But we believe that this line of reform—enlarging the districts—though it is the easiest line to move on, does not really much mend matters.

COMFORT IN A CLOUD.—A friend of mine told me of a visit he had paid to a poor woman in her little room. She was overwhelmed with trouble but she always seemed cheerful. She knew the Rock.

"Why," said he, "Mary, you must have many dark days; they must overwhelm you with clouds sometimes."

"Yes," she said, "but then I often find there's comfort in a cloud."

"Comfort in a cloud, Mary?"

"Yes," she said; "when I'm very low and dark I go to the window, and if I see a heavy cloud I think of those precious words: 'A cloud received him out of their sight;' and I look up and see the cloud sure enough, and then I think: Well, may be that's the cloud that hides him. And so you see there is comfort in a cloud."—Rev. Parton Hood.

RIGHT TEACHING.—The teaching which aims to reveal and exalt "the name that is above every name," which testifies to the fullness of God's love to man, which proclaims the reality of the great sacrifice and propitiation for the sins of the whole world, which proves the act of faith in Christ to be the condition and the germ of a complete salvation, and which identifies such a faith with the dying and rising again of our spirits with Christ, is "evangelical."—Christian Secretary.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

ADDRESS TO THE BISHOPS, MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE M. E. CHURCH SOUTH OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Honored Fathers and Brethren: "Grace be unto you, and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ." Though we have been for many years acquainted with your "work of faith and labor of love," yet up to the present time no formal correspondence nor intercourse has taken place between Canadian Methodism and that large branch of the Methodist brotherhood of which you are the recognized overseers.

Several circumstances appear to us to indicate that the present is a propitious time to send you our first fraternal Christian greetings. Important changes have recently taken place in our own organization as a church. We have felt, for some years, a desire, by the expression of our interest in the work you are doing for the Master, to strengthen those ties of Christian affection that should bind in unity of spirit all the different members of the family of God who hold the "one Lord, one faith, one baptism."

An agreeable visit from the venerable Dr. T. B. Sargent, of your church, during the present meeting of our General Conference, has materially conduced to give this desire a practical expression. We have heard with sincere satisfaction his statements concerning the growth and extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the successes which have attended your labors throughout the vast field that has been assigned to you by the Head of the church as the sphere of your operations. It is specially gratifying to us to know that so soon after the disastrous civil war, which must have been sadly inimical to every religious interest, Southern Methodism has regained its wonted vigor, and is so successfully prosecuting its work in every department of Christian enterprise.

Dr. Sargent did not come among us as a stranger. Many of us cherished kindly remembrances of a former visit fourteen years ago, which secured for him on the present occasion a cordial welcome to our homes and hearts. His kindly Christian spirit, his words of tender, godly counsel, and his impressive and scriptural ministrations have left with us pleasant memories that shall not soon be effaced. We rejoice to inform you that probably in no part of the world has our beloved Methodism won more signal victories for Christ than in the Dominion of Canada. Our pioneer preachers in the new settlements of this country, amid toil and danger, scattered precious seeds of truth that have yielded rich harvests of golden grain.

Our educational institutions are rendering noble service in preparing the youth of our country for an efficient discharge of life's great duties; and by the dissemination of a sound religious literature we are successfully combatting the heresy and skepticism that are so fiercely and extensively assailing the faith of the children of God.

In our missions to the Indians we have witnessed many glorious evidences of the power and sufficiency of the old gospel of life and love to transform the rude and barbarous tribes of the wilderness into the "sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty;" while in all the chief centers of population we occupy a front rank in the work of supplying the religious wants of the people.

We have also successful missions to the French Romanists of the Province of Quebec; to the German population of the Province of Ontario; to the rapidly extending communities of the new Province of Manitoba and the great Northwest; to the growing settlements and aboriginal tribes of the Pacific coast; on the shores of Newfoundland, and among the genial isles of the Bermudas; and within the last two years, through God's blessing and the increased liberality of our people, we have been enabled to send two missionaries to lift up the standard of the cross among the enslaved and benighted multitudes of Japan.

For several years past there have been signs of a growing desire for an organized union of the different branches of Canadian Methodism. Practical measures have been adopted for securing this desirable object, and, as the result of this movement, our present General Conference, which represents over one thousand ministers, and more than one hundred thousand church members, is the first meeting of representatives from three bodies, formerly known respectively as the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Canada, Wesleyan Methodist Church of Eastern British America, and the New Connection Church of Canada; and is composed of ministerial and lay delegates, in this respect adopting a reform which your own church was the first of the large Methodist denominations to inaugurate. And though some of the minor bodies are not yet ripe for complete organic unity, still the spirit of uniting love is rapidly melting away the icy walls of separation and sectarian exclusiveness; and we trust that before long the Methodism of our Dominion will present an unbroken front to the enemies of the cross of Christ.

In these times, when an atheistic philosophy and a diluted Christianity prevail so extensively, it will doubtless gratify you to know that, though our fields of labor are widely separated, we are one with you in contending earnestly for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints; and in faithfully proclaiming, in all their divine fullness, these "glad tidings of great joy," which are now, as in the days of the hero-fathers of Methodism, "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

We have appointed as our representatives to your next General Conference the Rev. George Douglas, LL. D., our vice president, and the Hon. Judge Wilmot, D. C. L., brethren beloved.

Our earnest and prayerful desire for you is that you may be enriched with peace and unity of spirit, and that your evangelistic labors may be crowned with abundant tokens of the divine approval and benediction. May the God of grace "supply all your need, according to his riches in glory, by Christ Jesus."

Signed by order and on behalf of the General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada, Toronto, Ontario, this first day of October, 1874.

E. RYERSON, President.
DUNCAN D. CURRIE, Sec.

The Rev. Dr. Douglas, then addressed the Conference in a speech of surpassing eloquence and power, glowing with fraternal affection, which was received with unbounded applause.

The following resolutions were then offered and adopted:

Whereas The Committee on Public Worship have requested Dr. Douglas to occupy the pulpit to-morrow morning in the audience-room above; therefore,

Resolved, That this General Conference do hereby earnestly join in the request that the doctor preach at that time before this body.

E. E. WIDEY,
C. K. MARSHALL,
A. W. WILSON,
THOS. BRANCH.

Resolved, That we do hereby at twelve o'clock to-morrow as the time for the reception of the fraternal delegates from the African Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States of America.

A. H. COLQUHITT, Chairman.

MAY 20, 1878.

Conference adjourned with the doxology and benediction by the Bishop.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference met at the appointed hour.

Bishop Wightman in the chair.

B. Craven conducted divine service.

The minutes were read and approved.

The order of the day—Report No. 1 of the Committee on Publishing Interests, which was adopted—was resumed.

The amendment of E. A. Yates to strike out the words "manufacturing and" from the first item of section 1, being under consideration, J. B. McFerrin and J. O. A. Clark spoke against it.

C. K. Marshall moved the previous question. The call was sustained. The question was taken and the amendment was lost.

Item 1 of section 1 was adopted.

Item 2 of section 1 was read and adopted.

Section 2 was read, and J. W. Lewis moved to amend by inserting after the word "agent" the words "who shall be a layman."

On motion of J. C. C. Winer the amendment was laid on the table.

O. P. Fitzgerald moved to amend by substituting two weeks for "one month."

This resolution was laid on the table. Section 2 was adopted.

Section 3 was read.

R. A. Young moved to amend second item so as to require a true balance sheet to be presented once a month, at least, by the agent.

On motion of H. W. Fry, the amendment was laid on the table.

W. H. Potter moved to amend item 7 of section 3 by adding the following words from the minority report:

"Provided, that as soon as practicable the business of the House be reduced and confined to that of publisher and not a manufacturer."

Bishop Paine then addressed the Conference, deprecating hasty action in opposition to the well matured recommendations of a large and able committee.

The chair ruled that the amendment of W. H. Potter was out of order.

The ruling was sustained by the Conference.

M. Walton advocated the adoption of the section.

T. L. Mellen moved the previous question. The call was sustained. The question was put, and section 3 was adopted.

Sections 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 were read and adopted.

On motion of P. A. Peterson the following additional item was unanimously adopted:

"The annual meeting of the Book Committee shall be held on the first Wednesday in the month of May, and monthly meetings at such times as the committee shall appoint; a majority of the five members, who are to live near Nashville, shall be necessary at monthly meetings; and a majority of the whole committee necessary to an annual meeting, in order to transact business."

T. L. Mellen moved to adopt the report as a whole.

W. W. Duncan moved to amend by striking out from item 5 the statement of some of the causes, losses and depreciation, these words: "Under the methods of business adopted and carried on by the agent."

P. A. Peterson spoke in favor of the amendment.

T. L. Mellen spoke against it.

W. Mooney moved the previous question. The call was not sustained.

W. P. Harrison made an explanation.

The time was extended to allow A. H. Redford to make a statement.

Conference then adjourned, with the doxology and benediction by the Bishop.

A clergyman in Scotland, who was conducting public worship in the open air, had a portion of his notes carried off by the wind. Not perceiving the circumstance, he announced that he would now proceed to the third head or division of his discourse, and hastily turned over his notes, remarking two or three times, "Thirdly, my friends; I say thirdly," on which an old woman sitting near ejaculated: "Thirdly, sir, is awa' wi' the wund; it's ower the kirkyard wa', sir."

A Bible has been presented to every workman who labored in the construction of the Paris Exhibition buildings.

Periodicals.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.—The numbers of the Living Age for the weeks ending May 18 and 25, respectively, have the following noteworthy contents: Lecky's "History of England in the Eighteenth Century;" Quarterly Review; From the Journal to the Vatican, Macmillan; Maid of Dare, by William Black, Nos. 8 and 9, from advance sheets; Popular Buddhism According to the Chinese Canon, Westminster Review; The Poetry of Doubt—Arnold and Clough, Church Quarterly; Second Sight, a story by Rudolph Lindau, translated for the Living Age; Thomas Arnold, D. D., by Canon Farrar, Macmillan; The Comet, a story by Marie Orm, Argosy; The China-Clay Industry of Cornwall and Devon, by J. H. Collins, F. G. For fifty-two numbers, of sixty-four large pages each—or more than three thousand pages a year,—the subscription price ($8) is low; or for $10 any one of the American monthlies or weeklies is sent with the Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Gay, Boston, are the publishers.

—The London Quarterly Review for April, 1878, (American edition—Leonard Scott Publishing Company, New York) has the following table of contents: 1. The Crown and the Constitution. 2. The Church in the West Riding. 3. Geordano Bruno of Galileo Galilei. 4. Naval Education. 5. The Princes of India and the Proclamation of the Empire. 6. The Legislation of the Commonwealth. 7. Life and Times of Jameson. 8. Lecky's History of England in the Eighteenth Century. 9. The Aggression of Russia and the Duty of Great Britain.

—The Metropolitan Pulpit and Homiletic Monthly for June bears on its claim to be a monthly "indispensable to clergymen and to all who are preparing to enter the ministry." At a bird's-eye view we see what the leading ministers of the different denominations throughout the world are preaching about, and how they preach. Published by the Religious Newspaper Agency, New York. Single number, twenty-five cents, or $3 a year.

—St. Nicholas for June contains many splendid illustrations, and is filled with things amusing, instructive and entertaining. The following are titles of some of the articles: Sunday; Mr. Beer Paper's Masters; Monkeyana; The Angel Boy; How to Make Cologne; Dick Lance; Crosby Under Reading; Jack in the Public Dable Dog, for Very Little; [illegible]

—Wide Awake, April Part, May, 1878. This is a superb [illegible], profusely illustrated with [illegible] and beautiful specimens of [illegible] taste and skill. It will be a treat to the lovers of art, and a [illegible] public taste to higher and purer standards. Messrs. Osgood & Ralph, 631 Broadway, New York, are the publishers. Price, only five cents per number.

—Wide Awake—an illustrated magazine for young people—for June is at hand. It is filled with lively stories and pleasant stories, as appetizing to the young as strawberries and cream. Lothrop & Co., publishers, Boston. Price—per number, twenty cents; per annum, $2.

—The National Repository (Methodist Episcopal Church) is devoted to general and religious literature, biographies, travels, criticism and poetry. It has beautiful illustrations, has eleven articles, and a voluminous and attractive Editorial Miscellany. It is a neat and elegantly gotten-up monthly.

—The American Agriculturist for June has been received. This periodical has no equal in the number and finish of its illustrations, and its contents are invaluable to farmers, gardeners and housekeepers. Published by the Orange Judd Company, New York. Price, $1 50 per annum.

—Blackwood's Edinburg Magazine for May—Leonard Scott Publishing Company, New York—has the following articles: John Caldigate; part 7. The Gascon O'Driscol; A Ride across the Peloponnese; Mine is mine; part II; Translation from Vienna and Viennese Life; The Budget; England and the Treaty of San Stefano.

—Churches of the City of Montgomery, Ala., Embracing Their Early Organization, Progress and Present Condition. By M. P. Bine, Esq. Montgomery, Ala.: T. C. Bingham & Co., 1878. An interesting pamphlet, embracing much statistical and historical information.

—Johnson's New Method for Thorough Base is an instruction book in the art of playing church or glee music, and all other kinds that are printed in four or more parts, upon the organ and piano forte. By A. N. Johnson, Boston: Oliver Ditson & Co.

THE PREACHER'S CABINET.—A hand-book of illustrations, 72 pages, neatly printed in pamphlet form, by Rev. Edward P. Thwing, Brooklyn, N. Y. Part 1. From a hasty glance we conclude that it contains many good things. Price, twenty-five cents.

—Our China Visitor for April is a very interesting number. The Kitchen God is a very queer picture. We shall take occasion to make extracts from the Visitor when we have more space.

—The Farm Journal for June has a fine table of contents. W. H. Chambers, editor. Published by James P. Armstrong & Co., Montgomery, Ala. Price, $2 a year.

—Lippincott's beautiful and richly illustrated monthly magazine for June, 1878, is to hand, with a most readable table of contents.

The Vanderbilt Commencement.

The Nashville Christian Advocate says: We reached home from the General Conference on Saturday night, May 25. The next day, being commencement Sunday, a large congregation assembled in the chapel to hear the commencement sermon by Dr. C. K. Marshall. It was an eloquent and evangelical discourse on the language of our Lord: "I am the bread of life." He showed that man has faculties and capacities for religion, just as he has for physical food. Christ supplies it, as "the bread of life." He was cogent in his arguments, profuse in his illustrations, and popular in his address. We think it was the best discourse we ever heard from the gifted preacher.

In the afternoon Bishop Kavanaugh delivered a discourse before the biblical class, on Acts xx, 24. The venerable Bishop seemed to emulate the great apostle in "testifying the gospel of the grace of God," which he charged the young divines to preach in all its purity, grandeur and power.

The University choir discoursed some fine classical music on both occasions, together with some plain pieces—good old hymns—in which all the congregation joined. Many of the trustees and brethren, returning from the General Conference, were present. All seemed pleased and profited by the services of the day.

The Rev. Williams Kavanaugh (a brother of the Bishop,) Drs. Ames Jones, Finney and Mahon assisted in the devotional exercises.

On Monday, founder's day, the Board of Trust held two meetings; at the morning at ten o'clock to hear a lecture from Dr. Winchell on "Man in the Light of Geology." It was one of the most beautiful lectures we ever heard. It made us almost sorry that we could not accept the nebular theory, and evolution, its corollary; but nothing is clearer to our mind than that "special creation" is taught in the Scripture; and we must abide by that. Nobody doubts that God could have produced man and all other beings by evolution; but the inspired writers, if we understand them, say that he adopted a different method, and neither astronomy nor geology contradicts their statements. The eloquent lecturer received a magnificent bouquet and much applause.

On Monday night the oratorical contest came off for the founder's prize medal. It was closely contested, as the chancellor said in awarding the medal to the victor, Mr. W. R. Richardson, of South Carolina, a member of the theological class. We do not know who were the judges; but all seemed to agree with the chancellor that the speeches on the occasion were of unusual merit. George C. Jones, Granville Goodloe and A. K. Ward were formidable competitors—and just did not get the medal. "Know ye not that they which run in a race, run all, but one receiveth the prize?" The chancellor's address in awarding it to the successful contestant was singularly beautiful and appropriate.

The commencement exercises of Wesleyan Female Institute, Staunton, Va., close on Wednesday, June 19. Commencement sermon on Sunday, June 16, at eleven A. M., by Rev. William K. Boyle. Same day, at eight P. M., annual sermon before the Young Ladies' Christian Association of the college, by Rev. William E. Edwards. Tuesday, June 18, at eight P. M., final celebration of the Lee and Jackson Literary Society, and annual address by Gov. Fred. W. M. Holliday, of Virginia. Closing exercises, conferring distinctions and awarding diplomas at eight P. M., Wednesday, June 19.

Emerson says in his last essay: "That cannot be good for the line that is bad for the swarm." This is a new proverb which will not wear out with a generation or two of use. It is a good one to set to buzzing under not a few bunnets just at this time.

MARRIED.

REYNOLDS—DUNKLIN.—In Greenville, Ala., May 23, 1878, at the Methodist Episcopal Church South, by Rev. A. J. Briggs, Dr. Aristides Reynolds of Marietta, Ga., and Miss Mattie Dunklin, of Greenville.

Publisher's Department.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE offers the greatest inducements to Eastern and European travelers this season. It should be known to all that this line has been immensely improved during the past year. It has in fact been almost entirely rebuilt. It has now a line of rail 75 lbs. to the yard, new ties, and an excellent roadbed. This enables it to make as fast time as any line to New York, with entire safety, and without the appearance of rapid running. It connections from Cincinnati and Chicago being among the finest roads in the world. The train leaving at six P. M., one hour later than any other line, makes exactly the same time to New York as its quickest rival. There are no through cars to New York by any line. The Jackson route has but one change of cars, which is made in Union Depot at Cincinnati, Chicago or St. Louis.

Passengers direct to New York by the Jackson route pass through the splendid scenery and cool air of the Alleghany Mountains. Those going by Chicago pass by day light in full view of Niagara Falls and also have but one change of cars from New Orleans to New York.

SUSTAIN HOME ENTERPRISE.—As will be seen by reference to our advertising columns, Mr. J. A. Braselman of 586 and 588 Magazine street, has a large quantity of goods manufactured in this city for our own citizens, which he will sell at prices which compare favorably with those asked for the same articles manufactured in Northern cities. In every case, we think, purchasers should give the preference to home-made goods; and especially now when most of our manufacturing establishments can barely sustain themselves in competing with the North and West. Braselman has an attractive store, and deserves a share of the patronage of the public.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE COMPANY.—A succinct statement of the affairs of this corporation will be seen in the ADVOCATE of to-day. At the election for directors held recently a majority of the old board was re-elected. The coin any is under careful management, and stands well in the commercial community. Mr. John Henderson is president, and Thos. F. Bragg secretary.

TYLER'S.—George E. Strong, 115 Canal street, is successor to the old-established house of E. A. Tyler. Mr. Strong stands high in the business community as an honorable and reliable gentleman. Our readers, when they want anything in the jewelry line, should patronize this gentleman, as his prices are as reasonable as any first-class house. Give him a trial.

THE air of perfection, cleanliness and home-like comfort which is so apparent at the American House, Boston, is one of the characteristic features of that well-regulated establishment. To those disposed to economize this popular hotel offers an opportunity seldom found at so thoroughly a first class house, having reduced its rates to $3 and $3.50 per day.

ENCOURAGE SOUTHERN ENTERPRISE.—E. H. Adams & Bro's, 594 Magazine street, is one of the best places at which to get your dry goods. Toys are handled on straight, forward gentlemen. Many of our readers who have bought at this house speak in high terms of them, and of the cheapness of the goods. Country orders attended to.

B. D. WOOD & BROS. have been in the coal business here a number of years, and by their careful and conscientious attention to business, and their pleasing urbanity, have made hosts of friends. We cordially recommend them to our friends who may wish to purchase coal. See their card in this issue.

OLD VIRGINIA KITCHEN.—The cottage-house pan in the last two years became very popular with all classes. Burns is a good caterer and aims to make all of his patrons comfortable. We can recommend him to those who like a good meal at a reasonable price. See his card on this page.

WE refer parties needing steam engines, boilers, mills, gins, presses, etc., to the advertisement of H. Bailey, Chalmette Brick No. 12 Felicity street, New Orleans, La., they being manufacturers and dealers of well-established reputation.

MACHINERY DEPOT.—B. J. West, 172 Magazine street, is advertising his Tennessee Sorghum Cane Planter and Rice Planter and Cotton Planter. He has a large assortment of plantation, hardware, agricultural implements etc.

ATTENTION, BUILDERS!—Before you supply yourself with Painter's Oil, call and get the best, starting on your summer trip. Prices, 40 cents. It is the best and most reliable paint ever used.

READ carefully the advertisement, on the seventh page, of Poole & Hunt, Baltimore, Md. This concern is one of the best to the country to do business with. Send for circulars.

PERSONS OF TASTE.

The most refined nations have an appreciation of sweet odors, and find pleasure in the use of such articles agreeable to the sense of smell. Dr. Pierce's Celebrated Perfumes are pronounced by the best judges to be superior in rich fresh, flowery fragrance to any coming from abroad.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

WILHERT'S TONIC.—The Great Remedy.—The popular chill cure of the age. Conquered at one and a half dollars. Wilhert's Tonic has long held the highest place in the long list of remedies for Chills and Fever. It is no "Jim Crow" Anti-Fever Remedy to be sold at a low price, but is the cheapest remedy in the market. Chemists, Druggists, Physicians, Planters, Merchants, Steamboat men, and families generally, can find in Wilhert's Tonic a certain, safe and speedy cure. A trial saves a dollar, and saving it in this way adds to health and comfort. Try Wilhert's Tonic—a certain, safe and speedy cure. Prepared only by WHEELOCK FINLAY & Co., proprietors, New Orleans. For sale by all druggists.

POZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER is acknowledged by thousands of ladies, who use it daily, to be the only preparation that does not roughen the skin, or cause blister or leave black spots in the pores. Mothers can apply it to infants who become chafed with a surety of immediate relief. Removes all eruptions. Price, 50 cents and $1 per box. Sold by druggists, and at depot, 607 North Sixth street, St. Louis. (Lindell Hotel.)

Reports of Standing Committees to the General Conference.

Report No. 7 of the Committee on Itinerancy.

The Committee on Itinerancy have had under very careful consideration the many papers from various sources in regard to the composition and basis of representation of a General Conference, and report the following as the result of their deliberations:

1. They recommend that answers 1 and 2 to question 1, section 1, chapter 2, pages 32 and 33 of the Discipline be so amended as to read as follows, viz:

Answer 1. The General Conference shall be composed of one clerical member for every thirty-six members of each Annual Conference, and an equal number of lay members. Of the lay members from an Annual Conference, one may be a local preacher.

The clerical representatives shall be elected by the clerical members of the Annual Conferences; Provided, that such representatives shall have been traveling preachers at least four calendar years next preceding their election, and in full connection with an Annual Conference when elected, and also at the time of holding the General Conference. The lay representatives shall be elected by the lay members of the Annual Conference; Provided, that such representatives be twenty-five years of age, and shall have been members of our church for at least six calendar years next preceding the time of their election, and also at the time of holding the General Conference.

2. An Annual Conference, entitled under the second restrictive rule to one ministerial delegate, shall not be denied the privilege of one lay delegate, and he may be a local preacher.

The committee also recommend that the second restrictive rule in the Discipline, page 36, be so amended as to read as follows, viz:

"2. They shall not allow of more than one representative for every eighteen members of the Annual Conference, nor allow of a less number than one for every sixty; Provided, nevertheless, that when there shall be in any Annual Conference a fraction of two-thirds the number which shall be fixed for the ratio of representation, such Annual Conference shall be entitled to an additional delegate for such fraction; And provided, also, that no Conference shall be denied the privilege of two delegates—one clerical and one lay."

Report No. 8 of the Committee on Itinerancy.

The Committee on Itinerancy have bestowed careful thought upon each one of the subjects referred to them, which are named in this our eighth report, and do respectfully recommend non-concurrence in each of them, viz:

1. A resolution signed J. J. Wheat and J. D. Cameron, asking that presiding elders on contiguous districts be allowed to preside at each other's District Conferences in the absence of a bishop.

2. A preamble and resolution signed by H. J. Adams and J. H. Grogan, asking to strike from the Discipline the provision that, upon a call of one-fifth of the members of the General Conference, the lay and clerical members shall vote separately.

3. A resolution signed by W. A. Tarwater and T. C. Downs, providing for the arrest of the character of a traveling preacher who shall fail to make satisfactory efforts to discharge debts of his own creation.

4. Two resolutions signed by S. Black and J. F. Medley, asking that a presiding elder be not allowed to remove a preacher from one station, or appoint him to another, without the consent of the Quarterly Conference.

Report No. 9 of the Committee on Boundaries.

1. Your committee have carefully considered the petition of J. W. Compton, on behalf of the Walla-Walla district, Columbia Conference, praying for a division of the Columbia Conference. The committee recommend that the Conference be allowed to divide during the next quadrennium, if in their godly judgment they think it best.

2. A petition from the official boards of the Methodist Episcopal Church South in the city of St. Louis, asking for the reuniting of the St. Louis and Southwest Missouri Conferences; also a petition from the delegation of the Southwest Missouri Conference, opposing the union. The committee recommend that they be allowed to reunite, provided it can be effected by mutual co-operation of the Conferences, ad interim.

3. The memorial of the Arkansas Conference, praying for a certain boundary line between the Arkansas and White River Conferences, has been before the committee, and they recommend non-concurrence.

4. A resolution signed by J. J. Roberts and H. C. Allen, concerning the boundary between the Arkansas and White River Conferences, has been considered. The committee recommend that all after "Little Red river," in the Discipline, page 315, paragraph 25, be stricken out, and the following be inserted: "Thence to the mouth of Palarm creek, on the Arkansas river, so as to include all the present boundary lines of Quitman and Mt. Vernon circuits, thence to the southeast corner of Perry county, thence west by the south boundary lines of Perry, Yell and Scott counties to the State line, thence with the State line to the beginning."

5. A resolution signed by Frank Richardson, James P. Kelly and others, requesting a change in the boundary line between the Tennessee and Holston Conferences, has been considered by the committee, and they recommend that no change be made.

Report No. 11 of the Committee on Revisal.

The Committee on Revisal, to whom were referred sundry resolutions asking for a change of the Ritual for the baptism of infants and adults, signed by C. W. Miller, J. W. Fitch, A. H. Thomas, S. Block and others, have had the same under serious consideration, and, as the result of their deliberations, beg leave to report that inasmuch as they all substantially ask for the same changes, we report concurrence in the following items:

ITEM I.

Strike out, on page 201, section 2, chapter 13, the following: "All men are conceived and born in sin, and that our Savior, Christ, saith, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," and insert: "Our Savior hath taught us that little children are the subjects of his kingdom; and forasmuch as all are in need of the sanctifying influences of the Holy Spirit, of which Christian baptism is the emblem, and also the sign of covenant relation; and forasmuch as our Lord and Master hath commanded his ministers to go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Also on same page strike out the word "mercy" and insert the word "grace," and strike out the words "he may be" and insert "being," so the whole will read: "Dearly beloved, forasmuch as our Savior hath taught us that little children are the subjects of his kingdom; and forasmuch as all are in need of the sanctifying influences of the Holy Ghost, of which Christian baptism is the emblem, and also the sign of covenant relation; and forasmuch as our Lord and Master hath commanded his ministers to go and disciple all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, I beseech you to call upon God the Father, through our Lord Jesus Christ, that of his bounteous grace he will grant to this child that which, by nature, he cannot have; that, being baptized with water and the Holy Ghost, and received into Christ's holy church, he may be made a lively member of the same."

ITEM II.

In the prayer for infants, on page 202, section 2, chapter 13, we recommend to strike out the words, "Wash him and sanctify him with the Holy Ghost;" that he, being delivered from thy wrath, may be received into the ark of Christ's church," and insert the following, "And sanctify him with thy Holy Spirit, that he, being received into thy church," so that it shall read as follows: "Almighty and everlasting God, we beseech thee, for thine infinite mercies, that thou wilt look upon this child; wash him and sanctify him with the Holy Ghost; and grant that he, being received into the ark of Christ's church, and being steadfast in faith, joyful through hope, and rooted in love, may so pass the waves of this troublesome world that finally he may come to the land of everlasting life, there to reign with thee, world without end, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

ITEM III.

In the prayer on page 231, section 3, chapter 13, strike out the words, "Out of his most precious side both water and blood," and substitute the words, "His most precious blood," so that it shall read as follows: "Almighty, ever-living God, whose dearly beloved Son, Jesus Christ, for the forgiveness of our sins, did shed his most precious blood, and gave commandments to his disciples that they should go and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, regard, we beseech thee, our supplications, and grant that this child, now to be baptized, may receive the fullness of thy grace, and ever remain in the number of thy faithful and elect children, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

Report No. 12 of the Committee on Revisal.

The Committee on Revisal respectfully offer the following as Report No. 12:

1. In regard to the memorial of the Baltimore Conference, asking a revision of the Discipline, with a view to a more stringent rule in the readmission of members who have been expelled, the committee recommend non concurrence.

2. A resolution signed Paul Whitehead and John E. Edwards, requesting the addition of certain words to chapter 7, section 1, paragraph 5, and also the same change in chapter 7, section 3, paragraph 5, in regard to the reception into the church of expelled ministers and members is disapproved, and for the reason that no further legislation is deemed necessary, the law at present being sufficiently precise and comprehensive.

3. The committee having considered a resolution signed by H. V. Pullpott and J. D. Giddings, asking a change in the Discipline in regard to duties of presiding elders, the resolution proposing to insert the words, "To be present, if practicable at two of the Quarterly Conferences during the year," recommend non concurrence.

4. The resolution of S. S. Bryant and A. S. Birkhead, proposing to have the General Rules read in Church Conference, instead of in each congregation, is not approved, and the committee recommend non-concurrence.

5. A second resolution from the same (in the same paper,) proposing a change of Discipline, page 50, question 1, answer 3, with a view of making the presiding elder, instead of the Bishop, the president of the District Conference, is disapproved, and non-concurrence is recommended.

6. The committee recommend non-concurrence in regard to the resolution of the North Carolina Conference requiring pastors to report to the Annual Conference the number of accessions during the year.

7. The paper signed by J. W. Rush and W. A. McCarty, asking the restoration of the question, "Are you in debt?" to its proper place in the Discipline, to be put in the examination of preachers applying for membership in full connection, is not approved, and the committee advise non-concurrence.

8. The resolution of J. S. Gillett and D. H. Connally, proposing to make a law for the reception of members from the Methodist Episcopal Church on a presentation of a certificate, is returned with the recommendation that no additional legislation is necessary.

9. A resolution from J. D. Giddings and J. C. C. Winch, asking the General Conference to establish a judiciary committee of fifteen, etc., is not approved, and non-concurrence is recommended.

10. A resolution signed by A. H. Thomas and T. L. Boswell, seeking a change in the Discipline which shall restrict the term of service of presiding elders, is disapproved, and non-concurrence recommended.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Report of the Committee on the Hymn-Book.

Your committee, to whom was referred the subject of a new and abridged hymn-book, after mature reflection, have come to the following conclusions, and herewith report:

That our publishing interests at the present time do not justify the undertaking of such an enterprise, however desirable.

Besides, measures have been taken with a view to the assembling, at an early period, of an Ecumenical Council, to be composed of representatives of all the families of Methodism in the world.

Steps have also been initiated by which the subject of a hymn-book adapted for universal use in all branches of the church will be brought prominently before that general council. Looking hopefully for the accomplishment of so desirable an object, we deem it more economical and discreet to defer any action on the matter for the present.

But in view of the fact that a demand exists for a small hymn-book, for social, prayer and minor meetings, your committee recommend the compilation and publication, at the earliest day practicable, of such a book, and that a committee of nine be appointed to compile and prepare such a volume, in a cheap form, for publication. We think these views cover all the essential features of the resolutions submitted to us from the Missouri Conference, and signed by C. K. Marshall and T. L. Mellen; also one signed by S. W. Moore and W. W. Bennett; also one signed by W. H. Foster and W. H. N. Magruder.

We have also carefully examined the resolution signed by W. H. Watkins and C. G. Andrews, inquiring into the propriety of publishing our existing forms of baptism and the reception of members into the church in all the editions of our hymn-book hereafter, and recommend the adoption of the plan, and that the book editor be so instructed, and the committee discharged.

C. K. MARSHALL, Chair'n.

Sunday School Report No. 5.

Your committee, to whom was referred the resolution inquiring into the expediency of preparing "A Form of Service" for the opening of the Sabbath schools, beg leave to report that after a most exhaustive investigation and discussion they recommend non-concurrence therein, deeming the provisions already existing in forms or usages ample for the ends in view. Respectfully,

C. K. MARSHALL, Chair'n.

P. GALLAGHER, Sec.

Presented and laid on the table, Friday, May 17, 1878.

God is a Spirit infinitely happy, therefore we must approach him with cheerfulness; he is a Spirit of infinite majesty, therefore we come before him with reverence; he is a Spirit infinitely holy, therefore we must address him with purity; he is a Spirit infinitely glorious, we must therefore acknowledge his excellency to all that we do, and in our measure contribute to his glory by having the highest aims in his worship; he is a Spirit infinitely provoked by us, therefore we must offer up our worship in the name of a pacifying Mediator and Intercessor.—Charnock.

If I cannot see things just as God sees them, it is a comfort to know he does not see them as I do. If I fail to realize that faithfulness in little things is just as pleasing to him as faithfulness in large ones, I can rejoice that the fact does not depend upon my conscience of it.

The Bible tells us of the streams, that it may allure us to the fountain; it tells of the past acts of God's faithful love, that we may be led to set our hope on God, and to feel assured that he who hath helped will help, and that he who hath loved will love unto the end.—Thomas Erskine.

THE REASON.

The reason for the unprecedented demand for Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is the result of its being of superior strength, uniform quality, and contains no unwholesome substance. Having thoroughly tested it, we have no hesitancy in recommending it.

MACHINERY, TIES, ETC.

DANIEL PRATT'S IMPROVED

"Revolving Head" Cotton Gin.

PATENTED JULY 16, 1873.

Price Reduced to $4 Per Saw.

THIS GIN has been in use for the past five seasons, and several recent improvements have been added. It obviates all friction at the ends of the cotton box, prevents the roll from breaking, and gives a larger yield of Lint from the same Amount of Seed than any other Gin in use. The Revolving Head lightens the draft and causes the Gin to run faster with less driving power, thus doing a great deal more work with the same time, while economizing steam or animal power than any other Gin. The seed being ginned very close, the length of the staple is increased producing cotton on this account of a greater market value. This improved value, given by length of staple, with extra production of lint, added to increased amount of work done, more than cover the cost of the Gin in every 100 bales ginned. Testimonials sent by mail on application.

MEDICAL.

The German Star in Louisiana.

THE SO-CALLED WONDER DOCTOR has arrived safely in New Orleans, with his bont and family. He has made a twelve months' tour through the State of Louisiana to show to the public what he can do with his AMERICAN HERB MEDICINES for the diseased human system and organs. The Doctor is a thorough and experienced German chemist of the herb and vegetable kingdom, and has spent eighteen years in exploring America for the purpose of discovering the most valuable medical herbs growing in America. He has succeeded in discovering the secrets of all Indian tribes in connection with the vegetable kingdom, and thus is enabled as a practical physician, to prescribe these herbs to his patients. The Doctor has been wonderfully successful in the treatment of his patients, of whom he has had in his charge 1,668 within nine months. These comprised cases of sickness of every description, and of both sexes. All these patients were completely restored to health in a very short time. Everywhere in the State the Doctor had to promise to establish himself in New Orleans, which he has resolved to do and carried out, in order to relieve, as fast as Nature will permit, the long sufferings of so many of his fellow-beings. None but American herbs will be employed by the Doctor in the preparation of his medicines, and all patients who may honor him with their confidence and clientage will be treated with them.

The Doctor has established his office and a Chemical Laboratory, as well as a complete Private Hospital, at No. 106 BOURBON STREET, between Toulouse and St. Louis streets, so as to give to the afflicted from everywhere an opportunity to receive medical attention at his hands. The rooms are all well fitted up, and absolutely under his personal supervision. His terms are moderate. Letters of inquiry (with three cent stamp inclosed) will be answered promptly. Orders for medicines will be filled upon the receipt of the money, and mailed free to any place in the United States. Address

OBITUARIES.

Correspondents, please write names and dates very distinctly. We follow copy on proper names. Obituary notices should be forwarded promptly and immediately. Give only points of general interest, such as will help the living. Details of funeral services, and such phrases as 'mourn their loss,' etc., are not edifying. Verses, either original or select, not admissible in this department. Give the locality distinctly and in full. In the case of infants only a simple announcement of the death, with names and dates, will be published.

☞ All obituaries received are published as soon as convenient. If, after a reasonable time, any communication fail to appear, let a duplicate be sent instead of a complaint.

GEORGE HARMAN died at his residence in Attala county, Miss., April 15, 1878, in Kosciusko, in the eighty-fifth year of his age.

He was born in Livingston district, S. C., and joined the church in early life. He conducted himself as to win the confidence and esteem of all who knew him. He was taken suddenly ill, and lingered but a few days; but he was ready.

A Christian life of about sixty-five years did well attest him for the close of his earthly pilgrimage. He loved the church, and gave liberally to its support. About ten years ago he gave his earthly treasures to his children, that he might be the better enabled to lay up treasures in heaven. The Bible, Fleetwood's Life of Christ, and Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress were the books that he delighted most to read; and when he was on the last river he would quote appropriate passages from Bunyan's Pilgrim. Thus lived and died a devoted father, faithful friend, kind neighbor and humble Christian; to his children a heaven to join his wife, who preceded him fully six years ago. May all the children cherish his memory, imitate his example, and meet him "over there."

W. S. LAMBERT.

WILLIAM M. PACKER was born in Mobile, Ala., on the third of June, 1830. He died of pneumonia, on the seventeenth of March, 1878, at the home of Bro. Moses Wilson, on Sandy creek, in the parish of Caddo, La. He was confined to his bed only a few days. Mr. Packer was not a professor of religion, but became seriously impressed during his sickness, for salvation, and on Friday (being the day before he died), about 9 o'clock in the morning, a messenger (Jefferson Leach) reached the home of A. Wright, and from thence came to me, bearing a summons from the sufferer to visit him. The day before he died I asked him if he was prepared to die. He answered not. We talked, sang and prayed with him from time to time until he died, a change, and professed peace with God. During the forty-eight hours before he died, a short time before his death he told his weeping mother to write to his brother Joseph, that he died in peace with God.

ROBERT M. BROCKER.

It is singular that so many churches and so few sinners, when their coughers, as they say in Texas, think, never seem to be satisfied.

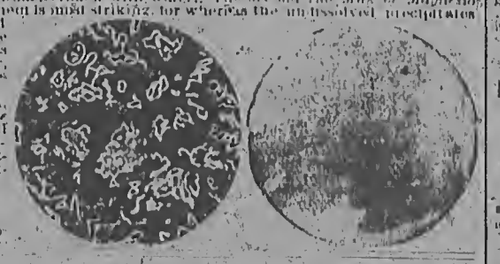
MILK OF MAGNESIA
IS THE best preparation known for all disturbed conditions of the stomach. It immediately and certainly cures DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, HEARTBURN, SOUR STOMACH and HEADACHES caused by acidity of the stomach. The pleasant taste and milk-like smoothness of this preparation renders it very valuable for infants, requiring no persuasion to induce them to take it. It positively prevents food souring on the stomach, and will act as a laxative when used as directed. It is also eminently adapted to females. The smoothness of this preparation and its perfect solubility are visible fully apparent in the following illustrations. They represent a tract one inch square, and a single drop magnified 250 now offered. The difference between them is most striking, for whereas the undissolved precipitates and particles in the drop of calcined Magnesia are exhibited with terrible distinctness, the Milk of Magnesia has all the appearance of a cloudy vapor, and relieved from the objectionable precipitates, in fact entirely dissolved.



Be sure to get MILK OF MAGNESIA. Ask your druggist for it, and take none other. It is entirely different from all other preparations of Magnesia. Physicians and others not already acquainted with this preparation can obtain explanatory circular by addressing

COMMERCIAL.

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
NEW ORLEANS, Tuesday, June 4, 1878.

The only activity in the market to be noticed is that of State consols, which have been sold in large quantities, and at low prices, compared with what they have been held at for some months past. To-day they are somewhat stronger, owing to the fact that the time for the payment of the semi-annual interest is near at hand, with every prospect of its being promptly met. Stocks of all kinds are dull, and with little prospect of improvement before the fall business opens. Money is plentiful, and interest low for first-class paper, that being about the only kind that is now negotiable.

COTTON.

The tone of the market throughout the day ruled firm, and under the influence of an active demand prices advanced ⅛c., with sales of 4,200 bales.

The following is the official closing of the Cotton Exchange:

	To-Day.	Yesterday.
Low Ordinary	9	8⅞
Ordinary	9⅛	9⅛
Good Ordinary	9⅝	9⅝
Low Middling	10⅛	10⅛
Middling	11⅛	11⅛
Good Middling	12	11⅞
Middling Fair

Sales to-day, 4,200 bales. Market firm.

Pernicious Literature.

The circulation of trashy, impure and vicious literature has become so widespread and has attained such enormous proportions that Christian parents, pastors and teachers must combine speedily and systematically for its abatement if they would keep themselves clear from the verdict of complicity in the ruin of the youth who are committed to their care and training. The great sources from which the evil flows in a perennial stream, and which are replenished from week to week by a mighty wave, are the book store, the circulating library, the news and periodical stand, and the peripatetic vendeis in the cars and on the streets. All these are passed by carelessly and without scrutiny by the parents and guardians of the children who stop at them to suck in their stealthy and deadly poison. If the children are to be saved from contagion, these pest-spots must be rooted out. And we inquire: Whose duty is it to do this work thoroughly? The children do not know that pestilence lurks in these spots, and cannot be made to understand that it does. Or even if they knew the existence of the evil, they would still lack the will or the influence to stamp it out. It is, then, the duty of the parent, the pastor, the teacher, to investigate these poison-breeding instrumentalities, and to extirpate them by the weight of their influence as citizens, as Christians, and as men loving their children, and having a stake in the welfare of the community. Or if moral suasion fails, they should then call in the aid of the law, which is on the side of the right in all this matter. There can be little doubt that if Christians everywhere, in the most insignificant towns and villages, and in our large cities, should join in a systematic crusade against this momentous evil, refusing to deal with or in any way to countenance those who perpetrate it, arraying against them the moral sentiment of their several communities, and, if need be, resorting to the rigor of the law, the plague would be arrested, and thousands of children saved from pollution and vice in this world, and from eternal misery in that which is to come.

SEWING MACHINES.

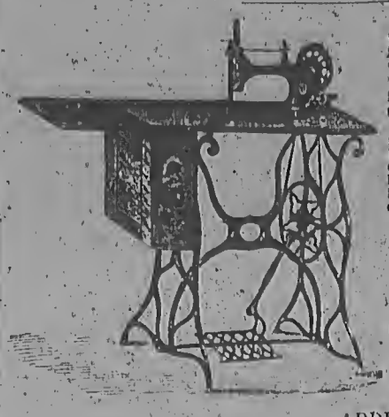
THE SINGER AGAIN TO THE FRONT!!

Great Reduction in the Prices

OF THE

WORLD-RENOWNED SINGER FAMILY SEWING MACHINE!

FOR CASH!!



The Singer Manufacturing Company, ever aware to the interest of the public, have determined to put the price of their Machines within the reach of every man, woman and child in the land.

The Genuine Singer Sewing Machine is now Offered at Prices Below the Rogue Ones or Any Other.

The fact that the only Sewing Machine which unscrupulous men have ever attempted to imitate is the Singer is sufficient evidence of its superiority over all others. There is no longer any excuse for buying any of the cheap Machines hawked about the country, with an claim for patronage but their cheapness.

BEWARE OF

Worthless Imitation Machines.

The Singer Will Last a Lifetime.

JUNE.

Was there ever a summer as sweet as this?
Was there ever among Junes as fair a June?
Birds that are singing in full throated bliss,
Ask the same question, and ask it in tune.

I would sing such a song if I would,
Birds know that my whole heart is stirred;
Life seems so loving, beneficent, good;
Why can't I trill out my joy like a bird?

Birds that are droning, how sleepy you sing;
What are you telling each other, I pray?
Whence does your secret of happiness spring?
No matter! I'm happy as you are to-day!

Birds swinging their blossoms of snow,
Birds shedding their tender perfume,
Birds are the roses in sunset's rich glow,
Birds with the dawn in the sweetbrier's plume.

Young butterflies, bright-tinted things,
Free on the wing through the slow summer hours,
Were like them, and would I had wings,
Joy-ey to the heart of the flowers.

Moments—I pray you pass slow;
Beautiful heaven so near;
Possible even below,
Months is the June of the year.

The Chimes.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—A Portland dispatch says: Additional election returns indicate that Whitaker Democrat is elected Congressman by a small majority. It is conceded that the Legislature will have a Democratic majority on joint ballot variously estimated from four to twelve. This Legislature elects a United States senator.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—It appears that the first returns brought from Louisiana were irregular, the returns of President and Vice-President being grouped. These returns were signed properly by the electors, but were replaced by others in legal form, in which the name of Judge Levisse was forged.

Pitkin and Mrs. Jenks left New Orleans yesterday to appear before the committee.

Judge Levisse's name was forged three times to the amended returns. Judge Levisse is in doubt whether Packer and Hernandez, who tempted him by a bribe of a hundred thousand dollars, were agents of the Democratic party, or the agents of the gamblers, who wished to save their bets. The weight of evidence indicates that his former impression is that they were agents of the sporting men.

The President signed the bill relating the bankrupt law.

GALVESTON, June 7.—A News special says the north-bound passenger train on the Texas Central road was thrown from the track, by a broken rail, two miles south of McKinney, this morning. The ladies' car and sleeper rolled down an embankment twenty feet, killing Rev. Knowles Shaw, the evangelist, and seriously wounding J. Todd Miller, G. W. Shaw and wife, G. C. Monteastle and two children. Twelve others were painfully but not dangerously wounded.

BUFFALO, June 7.—The American Medical Association to-night decided to hold its next meeting at Atlanta, Ga., on the first Monday in May, 1879.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The two Houses of Congress are working energetically, but the opinion is expressed that they cannot get through before the twenty-fourth instant.

The vote already had in the Senate on the river and harbor bill foreshadows its passage. Senator Bruce will move an amendment making the appropriation for repairs of levees.

After the river and harbor bill is disposed of, the bill to modify the resumption act will be pressed. Messrs. Wallace, Ferry and Voorhees say it will pass the Senate.

Mr. Matthews has not yet replied to the subpœna of the House committee, but will refuse, and the Senate will probably sustain his right to non-attendance. His course in refusing to testify is universally commended.

Butler is endeavoring to explode the Wormley Hotel conference, and will try to lay the foundation for impeachment. He will not succeed.

Manton Marble is here, and opposes the passage of the resolution recognizing the finality of the electoral count. He maintains that there is no valid or legal count of the last presidential election by the last Congress, and that the question of presidency is still an open one. He is regarded as an emissary of Tilden. Mr. Butler is working to the same effect.

The Judiciary Committee are to meet and act on the question to-morrow. A majority of the Democrats want the question treated as settled.

Enquirer.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—It is still probable that Mr. Matthews will ignore the subpœna from the Potter committee, and that the committee will appeal to the House. The proceedings in the committee to-day were brief and unimportant.

The Committee of Privileges and Elections heard further testimony in the case of Corbin vs. Butler. No result. Another meeting will be held for the purpose of closing the matter before the end of the present session.

AUGUSTA, June 10.—A storm of wind and hail prevailed in this vicinity yesterday. Thomas Winn's gin manufactory at Belair was blown down, out-houses and fences were demolished in several places, and some cotton destroyed. A vast quantity of large hail-stones fell, breaking windows, and cutting down corn and cotton. Three white children are reported killed.

PORTLAND, June 10.—The Republican State ticket is elected. F. R. Jones, Republican, for Congress, was defeated. The Democrats have ten majority in the Legislature on joint ballot. The Legislature stands 50 Democrats, 36 Republicans, 4 Independents.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 10.—Thomas Winans, the Baltimore millionaire and Russian railroad contractor, died here last night.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, June 5.—Lord Beaconsfield and private secretary leave on Saturday, by way of Ostend and Brussels. Lord Salisbury will leave on Monday.

The news from Constantinople continues reassuring. The appointment of Safvet Pasha as Grand Vizier, and the succession of Mahmoud Dahmad Paslin to the war ministry, are particularly favorable signs. Safvet Pasha is of a very pacific disposition, enlightened, and on good terms with all the embassies. The Porte received and has accepted an invitation to attend the Congress. Safvet Pasha's new dignity will permit him to meet the other plenipotentiaries on an equal footing. Seldeullah Bey, ambassador to Berlin, will be second representative.

BERLIN, June 6.—At the Prussian cabinet council, presided over by the Crown Prince, yesterday, the suggestion found favor that the European representatives in the Berlin Congress be invited to consider the dangers threatening society in every civilized country from socialism.

The municipal council of Gotha, desiring to prohibit the assembling there of the proposed socialistic congress, the legal adviser of the council has given his opinion that no provision of the German law authorizes such prohibition.

It is expected an extraordinary session of the German Parliament will be convened to discuss legislative measures for the repression of the present dangerous agitation. The Russian cabinet are also considering the advisability of adopting special measures to prevent the spread of socialism.

A special dispatch from London to the Berlin Post reports that on Saturday last London detectives informed the British government that there was great agitation among the Socialists, and important events were imminent.

The semi-official Provincial Correspondence accuses the Socialists of planning the attempt on the Emperor's life, with the object of striking terror, and states that the government will ask Parliament for the necessary means to protect society.

ROME, June 6.—The Pope has sent an appeal to the powers to protect the interests of Roman Catholics while they are regulating the affairs of Turkey.

LONDON, June 7.—The explosion of the coal pit at Hay Dock shook the earth for miles. The first explorer descended the shaft five minutes after the explosion; others followed. Ten men, rescued alive, were sent to the surface, when one died; the others suffered from after-damp. Eight more are alive, and have taken refuge in a working point of the mine; 232 are dead. The explorers state that they found bodies decapitated, reduced to shapeless masses, and some of them blown to pieces. It is expected the corpses will be brought up by midnight. A large crowd of men, women and children surround the mouth of the pit. The cause of the explosion is unknown, as blasting with naked lights is prohibited.

VIENNA, June 7.—The Political Correspondence says: 3,000 Cretan insurgents, after obstinate fighting, compelled the Turks to retire to the coast towns. The Cretans are determined to continue the struggle until they have obtained a union with Greece.

GRUMBLERS.—Don't be a grumbler. Some people contrive to get hold of the prickly side of everything, to run against all the sharp corners, and to find out all the disagreeable things. Half the strength spent in growling would often set things right. You may as well make up your mind, to begin with, that no one ever found the world quite as he would like it; but you are to take your share of the trouble and bear it bravely. You will be very sure to have burdens laid upon you that belong to other people, unless you are a shirk yourself; but don't grumble. If the work needs doing, and you can do it, never mind about the other boy who ought to have done it and didn't. Those workers who fill up the gaps and smooth away the rough spots, and finish up the jobs that others leave undone—they are true peace-makers, and worth a whole regiment of growlers.

There is no love like a mother's love, no heart like a mother's heart. Her affections go out for her offspring, no matter where he may roam or what the circumstances in which she may be placed. An instance was seen yesterday, when a mother entered the Central Station, and found her child, who had been lost from home for hours. She sprang wildly forward, eagerly caught him by the hair, and, as she hauled him around, she tenderly exclaimed: "Oh! Bob Masters, I'll wollop you for this when we get home."

"If the Bible is God's word, why didn't he make it so plain that everybody can easily understand it?" said a caviler. "If God made coal for our use as fuel, why didn't he distribute it in convenient places on the surface, instead of burying it in the mines of Pennsylvania?" was the reply.

Children Too Volatile.

I have had far more trouble with those who were transplanted into the church with the sins of twenty or thirty years sticking to their roots than I have had with those who grew up in the church from an early planting. I have seen more backsliders at forty than I have at fourteen. Those who commence the earliest, commonly do the best and hold out the longest. The boy Christian makes the best Christian man.

As for "volatility," we must do our utmost to guard against hasty steps in making a public profession of faith, either with the young or the old. Sufficient time to test the genuineness of conversion should be required in every case. Parents should be exceedingly watchful in order to decide whether the daily conduct affords satisfactory proof of a change of heart. Bearing in mind that a boy is a boy and not a man, we must simply inquire whether he is a boy who obeys or disobeys Christ's commandments. A boy who has principle enough to speak the truth always and at every cost, who is more afraid to offend God than he is to be laughed at, who would prefer a prayer meeting to a theater, and who loves to obey what his mother says, and what his Bible says, gives good evidence of a new heart. Such a germ is apt to grow. The best place for it to grow is in the soil of Christ's church, and not out among the weeds on the "devil's common."

Childish "volatility" does not disturb me half as much as the selfishness, ambition, greed and skeptical hardness of adult years. Better a heart that believes too easily and too much than the cast-iron heart that repels truth as a tin roof repels hailstones. The golden time for choosing Christ and joining Christ is childhood. Every year after fifteen accumulates difficulties and hinderances. Four-fifths of all sound conversions are under thirty years of age. "Suffer the children to come unto me," and the good mother who sent me the question had better "not forbid" her good boy to take his seat among Christ's people. I saw a prayer meeting of twenty lads last evening, and it made my heart leap to look at this bright-eyed group of boy Christians.

Evangelist.

Heaven.

"When I was a boy I used to think of heaven as a glorious golden city, with jeweled walls, and gates of pearl, with nobody in it but the angels, and they were all strangers to me. But after awhile my little brother died; then I thought of heaven as that great city, full of angels, with just one little fellow in it that I was acquainted with. He was the only one I knew there at that time. Then another brother died; and there were two in heaven that I knew. Then my acquaintances began to die, and the number of my friends in heaven grew larger all the time. But it was not till one of my own little ones was taken that I began to feel that I had a personal interest in heaven. Then a second went, and a third, and a fourth; and so many of my friends and loved ones have gone there that it seems as if I know more in heaven than I know on earth. And now, when my thoughts turn to heaven, it is not the gold, and the jewels, and the pearl that I think of—but the loved ones there. It is not the place so much as the company that makes heaven seem beautiful."

Have any of us lost dear little baby brothers and sisters, too young to learn about Jesus here? We shall find them in heaven. Did you ever think of this: that there are more children in heaven than there are grown people? It is so. Do you ask me how I know it? I will tell you. It is very well known that more than half of the people born into this world die while they are children. But Jesus takes all little ones to heaven. He taught us this himself when he took them in his arms, put his hands on them, and blessed them, saying: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven."—Rev. Richard Newton, D. D.

During the month of May, just ended, there were manufactured at the Natchez Cotton Mills 120 bales of cotton goods. The number of yards of cotton in each bale is 1,200, which would make the total number of yards manufactured 144,000. Although it would seem from these figures that the productive capacity of the mills is tolerably large, yet we are assured that their capacity is not near large enough to supply the demand.—Natchez Democrat.

A man called upon a lawyer the other day, and began to state his case in rather an abrupt manner. "Sir, I have come to you for advice. I'm a husband-in-law!" "A what?" spoke out the learned counsel. "Husband-in-law, sir!" "I have never seen that defined in domestic relations." "Don't you know what a husband-in-law is? Sir, you're no lawyer; you're an ignoramus! I am a husband in law, but not in fact, sir—my wife's run off."

Dunlop says that in all European literature there are not more than three hundred distinct plots, and two hundred and fifty of these are earlier than Christianity, and had their origin in Asia. Almost all the newspaper jokes have reached a venerable age; all the Irish bulls on record are Greek.

Little Workers for Jesus.

Under this heading Our China Visitor for April says:

The New Orleans Felicity Street Sunday School Missionary Society has again sent the sum of $77.75 for our boys' boarding school in Suchow. We thank them for their untiring efforts to aid us in the good work in China. We hope some if not all of these young men in this school will rise up some day and call them blessed. A Sunday school at Ocean Springs, Miss., sends us $20 for a little girl in Mrs. Lambuth's school. Many thanks to these dear children for their help. We assure them we highly appreciate their efforts, and pray God's richest blessing to rest upon them.

Bro. Downer, at Newton, Miss., writes me that the Sunday school at that place has determined to help us in the work among the heathen, and has organized itself into a missionary society. A good brother writes from Covington Tenn., and says the Sunday school there has organized itself into a missionary society and is anxious to help sustain a Sunday school in China. Dear children, send us your contributions, and tell us what you wish done with them. If you wish them used to support a Sunday school in China, it shall be done. God bless the dear children, and give them much of the missionary spirit! Another good brother writes from Lisbon, La., and says: "I have been in sympathy with you ever since you have been in China, and I now write to tell you about the 'little workers for Jesus.' They are ready to help you, and have already collected some money to send to you." That is right—help us all you can. Pray for us, too. God bless the dear "little workers for Jesus." Let us hear from you, dear children, all over the South. I judge that is a well-organized society at Lisbon, La. Adelaide Pickels is president. My dear young friends, as workers for Jesus you have my prayers. The sum you have raised ($6.00) would help on in the good cause a great deal. Work on, and let none discourage you. Pray for a missionary spirit, and ask God to give his Holy Spirit to you, one and all. Bro. Wilson, of Farmington, N. C., writes me that the Sunday schools there are deeply interested in the work in China, and are helping right nobly. Dear "little workers for Jesus," we are just commencing a little paper for Chinese children and church members, called the Gospel News. I am just getting out the second number now. We want all the help we can get every month, as it is to be issued once each month, containing eight or ten pages. Any one who can help me in this little enterprise will be doing a good work for Jesus. Let me hear from you, and we beg you to pray for us and for the spread of the gospel in China.

TO THE FRIENDS OF MISSIONS, M. E. CHURCH SOUTH.—You have learned before this that the Rev. A. W. Wilson, D. D., of the Baltimore Conference, has been elected secretary of the board. The doctor, I presume, will enter at once upon the duties of his office. He will find a wide and laborious, but in many respects a pleasant field of labor. He will meet many hearty responses, and will find many willing workers in the glorious cause. From henceforth the women of the church will be active co-laborers, and the children in the Sunday schools will help with liberal hands.

We commend our successor to the prayers and literally of the church, and pray that he may witness an onward movement in the grand missionary enterprises of the age.

Those having moneys in hand for foreign missions will please forward to J. W. Manier, Treasurer, Nashville, Tenn. He will send in return receipts. He needs money now. Send without delay.

J. B. McFERRIN.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, says the Methodist Recorder, of Pittsburg, has taken a noble stand in behalf of the education of the colored race. The resolution, which contemplates the giving of both money and time to this cause, was passed unanimously. The negro has no really better friends than the true Christian people of the South. Where causes of abuse are investigated, it often happens that the mischief has had its origin in a political conspiracy, in which Northern men are as apt to figure as Southerners. There are yet a few hateful Bourbons in Dixie who are hostile to the republic, and in the North, here and there, some equally unreconstructed extremists talk about annihilating the South. But these exceptional disturbers should not destroy the nation's peace.

The revivals in our city, says the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, Macon, Ga., continue with unabated interest. Morning as well as evening services are well attended, and ministers report that old and young alike are concerned. Many have connected themselves with the church, and many more are moving in that direction. May God prosper the work!

Good nature is the best feature in the finest face. Wit may raise admiration, judgment may command respect, and knowledge attention. Beauty may influence the heart of love, but good nature has a more powerful effect—it adds a thousand attractions to the charms of beauty, and gives an air of beneficence to the most homely face.

The Vanderbilt Faculty.

The Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University—a large attendance—did a great deal of work, says the Nashville Christian Advocate, at their late meeting. Everything connected with the university was thoroughly investigated, and measures adopted for the conduct of the institution during the ensuing year. The faculty is constituted as before with the exception of two or three changes.

The three months' lectureship, heretofore so ably filled by Prof. Winchell, has been abolished, and the entire duties of the School of Natural History and Geology are devolved upon Prof. Safford, the associate officer.

The School of Engineering, heretofore divided among the professors of the scientific schools, has been filled by a gentleman of Michigan, now engaged in the United States Coast Survey. He will bring to this chair excellent abilities by education and practice. Mechanical and plan drawing, topographical surveys and various constructions will be thoroughly taught. The demand for instruction in this department is increasing, and will be fully met. The name of the incumbent of this chair will soon be announced.

Prof. Arnold has, to the great satisfaction of the Board of Trust and the faculty, been adjunct professor of the Latin language and literature since the opening of the university. The time had come for that important branch of learning to be represented by a full chair. Prof. John L. Buchanan, long connected with Emory and Henry College, was the successful candidate for the position. His old students and friends everywhere adjudge him worthy of the highest honors. His reputation and ability are familiar to the country.

The vacant chair of modern languages and literature was filled by the election of a most scholarly gentleman, now completing his second year of linguistic study at Leipsic, Germany. He is an A. M. of the University of Virginia, and had taught, before going abroad, with success in a leading Southern college. His name, when announced, will give great satisfaction, and be a prophecy of high performance.

One of the Means.

Writing on "How to Resuscitate Decayed Churches," the New York Christian Advocate says:

We add another counsel, which we hope will not be considered editorially selfish, for it really is not. If you would resuscitate a decayed church, endeavor to kindle the esprit de corps of the common cause throughout its membership, and this can be done best by circulating among them our church papers. No Methodist who reads up the weekly news of the denomination about its missions, education, church extension, revivals, its struggles and victories, can be a heartless adherent of the cause. If the general campaign is going on victoriously, the troops at all local and suffering posts catch the victorious spirit, and hold up their heads in hope and courage, provided they get the news. Give them the news, then; let them hear the distant shouts of victory. We soberly believe that you can hardly do better service for a flagging church than to get all its competent families to take a good Methodist journal. Go from house to house and do thoroughly this work. If you wish to see the finances, the prayer meetings, the loyalty and energy of your church advance. The publishing enterprise of Methodism has been an integral fact in its history, from John Wesley's day down to this hour. A Methodist society without Methodist periodicals to its families must, in this age, be an abortion.

We are learning more about the Icelanders than we ever knew before. A recent traveler says of the people: "The Icelanders are a race of farmers and fishermen, and all their manufactures are domestic. Except in the vicinity of the towns, each farmer is his own mason, carpenter, blacksmith, saddler, etc. The average farmer of the country possesses from 12 to 16 head of cattle, a flock of from 400 to 500 sheep, and from 5th to 6th horses. Some wealthy farmers have as many as 100 head of cattle, and 3,000 or 4,000 sheep. Of the latter there are 1,605,000 head in the country. About 200,000 pairs of woolen stockings and 80,000 pairs of gloves, knitted during the long winter evenings, are annually exported.

"The quantity of butter consumed by the Icelanders is enormous. During the hay-making time each man receives 2½ pounds of butter daily, and each woman 2 pounds. The Icelanders live well. Meat (fresh and salted), butter, milk, oaten bread, fish, potatoes, cabbages, soups, coffee and dried fruits form the principal articles of diet, and may be met with almost in every peasant's house. There are no hotels or inns on the island, but, for the benefit of intending tourists and sportsmen, I may say that they will be hospitably received in the houses of all classes of people, few of whom will accept any remuneration for their services. Indeed the arrival of a stranger is always a festive event in the isolated households of Iceland. It is a remarkable fact that, while the sheep of the country are provided with three or four horns, the cattle are wholly without them."

There is nothing that so touches the heart of a child as love.

Books and Periodicals.

STUDIES IN LUKE. The Gospel According to St. Luke, containing the original Greek text, with an interlined word for word English translation, and a new version based on the renderings of eminent critics, with illustrative explanatory foot-notes and references. Also an alphabetical appendix of names, weights, coins, words and phrases used in the New Testament. By Benjamin Wilson. 12mo, tinted pages, fine paper, wide margins, extra cloth, prices, 60 cents. New York: S. R. Wells & Co., publishers, 737 Broadway.

The entire plan of this work is both original and unique. There is a Greek text which is acknowledged to be one of the best extant, and a word-for-word interlined English translation, the corresponding English term being placed directly under each Greek word. In a column on each page there is a new version for general reading. In this new version emphatic signs are introduced, showing which of the Greek words were emphatic in the original, thus giving a certainty and intensity, a vivacity and earnestness which are not found in the ordinary version. In connection with the above, the foot-notes and references, and the various readings of ancient manuscripts, are very full, and placed at the bottom of the page. An appendix, arranged alphabetically, embracing the geographical and proper names, weights, measures, coins, precious stones, apostolic words and phrases, etc., contained in the New Testament, is added.

THE DOCTRINAL INTEGRITY OF METHODISM. By Bishop E. M. Marvin, St. Louis. Logan D. Cameron, agent Advocate Publishing House, 1878.

This volume is a 12mo of 132 pages, and contains a series of articles written by Bishop Marvin, and published in the St. Louis Christian Advocate in 1871. The doctrines of Methodism are stated and vindicated, and the fact that doctrinal schism has never invaded any branch of the Methodist Church is brought out with clearness and force. As a doctrinal work it is far from complete, but it will be a book of value to a large class of readers. Price, $1.

—Prof. Forshey has placed us under obligations for a copy of his interesting and valuable pamphlet on "The Physics of the Gulf of Mexico, and of Its Chief Affluent, the Mississippi River." The learned and industrious author has made this subject a matter of long and painstaking study and investigation, and he has brought together in this work a vast amount of statistical information, which has direct bearing upon the improvement of the navigation of the river and the protection of the country from overflow.

—The periodicals reprinted by the Leonard Scott Publishing Company, 41 Barclay street, New York, are as follows: The London Quarterly, Edinburg, Westminster and British Quarterly Reviews, and Blackwood's Magazine. Price, $4 a year for any one, or only $15 for all, and the postage is prepaid by the publishers.

—Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for July abounds in its usual variety of articles, and is, of course, profusely illustrated. The first article—The Homes of St. John—is by the learned Dr. John F. Hurst, president of Drew Theological Seminary.

—The Magazine of Art is a beautifully illustrated monthly devoted to the cultivation of art. Cassell, Petter & Galpin, publishers, London, Paris and New York. We have received the number for May.

THURSDAY, JUNE 13, 1878.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE M. E. CHURCH SOUTH.

NINETEENTH DAY.

WEDNESDAY, May 22, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour. Bishop Wightman in the chair.

Divine service was conducted by A P Warterfield.

The minutes were read and confirmed

Bishop McTyeire took the chair.

S Register, chairman of the Committee on Episcopacy, presented Reports Nos. 5, 9, 10 and 11 of that committee, which were read and adopted (See reports)

He also presented Report No. 12 of the same committee, which was read. W G. Veal moved to lay it on the table. This motion did not prevail.

S Rogers moved to recommit.

A West raised the point of order that the report of the committee on estimating Bishops' salaries is final. He cited the Discipline, chapter 9 section 3, on "Support of Bishops," as follows:

"The Bishops shall be supported according to the following plan: 1 The allowance of the Bishops for salary and traveling expenses, and of the widows and orphan children of deceased Bishops, shall be estimated by the Committee on Episcopacy of the General Conference, and they shall divide the amount between the several Annual Conferences according to the ability of the Conference."

The chair, for obvious reasons, declined to decide the point of order, preferring that the decision be made by the Conference.

A R Winfield moved to sustain the point of order, and the motion prevailed by a rising vote—yeas, 120; nays, 101.

W G Veal gave notice that he would present a protest against this decision, to be spread on the journal.

J S Martin, chairman of the Committee on Itinerancy, presented Report No. 8 of that committee, which was read and laid on the table, under the rule.

Also Report No. 10 of the same committee, which was read and adopted (See report)

J B. McFerrin, chairman of the Committee on Publishing Interests, presented Report No. 8 of that committee, which was read and laid on the table.

Also Report No. 9 of that committee, which was read and adopted. (See report)

J B McFerrin, chairman of the Committee on Publishing Interests presented Report No. 10 of that committee, which was read, and after some discussion on motion of W Mooney, was adopted. (See report.)

Also Report No. 11 of that committee, which was read, and on motion of C K. Marshall adopted. (See report.)

Also Report No. 12 of the same committee, which was read and adopted. (See report.)

By common consent on motion of H C Kelley, Report No. 1 of the Committee on Missions, laid on the table on Tuesday, May 14, was taken up.

The report was read and adopted. (See report.)

D C Kelley gave notice that a meeting of women, visitors and residents, will be held in the First church, Atlanta, to-morrow at ten o'clock, to organize under the Constitution.

J E Evans, chairman of the Committee on Revisal, presented Report No. 13 of that committee, which was read.

W. G. Veal moved a substitute for the third item, which was not adopted.

The report was then adopted. (See report.)

J E Evans, chairman of the Committee on Revisal, presented Report No. 20 of that committee which was read and laid on the table, to be printed in the Daily Christian Advocate.

C K. Marshall, chairman of the Committee on Sunday Schools, presented Report No. 7 of that committee, which was read and adopted. (See report.)

Also Report No. 8 of that committee, which was received and laid on the table, without reading, to be printed in the Daily Christian Advocate.

R A. Young, chairman of the Committee on Finance, presented Report No. 17 of that committee, which was read and laid on the table to be printed.

Bishop Pierce presented Report No. 3 of the Committee on Appeals, which was read, as follows:

ATLANTA, Ga., May 21, 1878.

Appeal of S J Catlin, Elder, Denver Conference, suspended. Decision of the Denver Conference reversed.

G F. PIERCE, Pres't.

A. G HAYGOOD, Sec.

A. M. Shipp, chairman of the Committee on Fraternal Correspondence, presented Report No 4 of that committee, which was read and adopted. (See report.)

Also Report No. 2 of that committee, which was read and adopted. (See report.)

P. Whitehead, chairman of the Committee on the Ecumenical Conference, stated that the committee had accomplished all its duties, and asked to be discharged. The request was granted.

The unfinished business of yesterday—being the action on Report No. 5 on Publishing Interests, including the motion of W. W. Duncan to amend by striking out the last clause of item 6 respecting some of the causes of losses and depreciation of the Publishing House—was taken up.

W. W Duncan was allowed to withdraw his amendment.

The question being on the adoption of the report as a whole, A. H. Redford addressed the chair.

On motion of J B. McFerrin, A. H Redford was allowed to speak without regard to the rule of limitation as to time.

Pending his speech the order of the day arrived, being the reception of fraternal messengers from the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

A. H Colquitt, chairman of the Committee on Introductions, presented the Rev W. J. Gaines and the Rev W D Johnson to the chair (Bishop McTyeire) who introduced them to his colleagues of the Episcopal College, and then to the Conference, which received the fraternal messengers standing.

The following telegraphic message from Bishop Campbell was presented and read, as follows:

PHILADELPHIA, PA., May 15, 1878.

To the Rev. W. J. Gaines, 14 Collins St.:

You and W D Johnson are appointed by the Bishop to attend the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in session at Atlanta. Inform Johnson. Will send letter of introduction

J. P CAMPBELL.

The chair then presented the Rev. W. J. Gaines, who delivered an eloquent address, and was followed by his colleague the Rev. W. D Johnson, in a similar vein of enthusiastic fraternal sentiment. The speeches were frequently interrupted by hearty responses. The Conference then arose spontaneously and sang: "When that illustrious day shall rise!"

The chair (Bishop McTyeire) then addressed the fraternal messengers in his happiest style, expressing the heartiest congratulations on the kindly relations subsisting between the two connections. The Bishop made a pleasant allusion to the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, and expressed an earnest desire for the unification of all the beloved Methodist organizations.

The Conference then adjourned, with the doxology and benediction by the Bishop to meet this afternoon at half past three o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference met at the appointed hour. Bishop McTyeire in the chair. E A Yates conducted divine service.

The minutes were read, corrected and confirmed.

Bishop Keener took the chair.

The chair called up the question on which the Conference adjourned this morning.

A. H. Redford, having the floor, spoke at length on his relation to the Publishing House.

J. B McFerrin followed in some explanatory remarks.

W H Potter moved to amend the third item in the section on relief by adding after the first sentence these words: "After the settlement with the agent of the Publishing House, by the Book Committee here provided for, has been made, and after the sale of all property of the Publishing House, except the copyrights and stereotype plates, has been effected, and the proceeds paid to the creditors as herein provided for and the remainder of the debt of the Publishing House definitely ascertained, and not before; and then the agent be continually made until the debt be paid."

W. H POTTER.
ISAAC HARRIMAN.

On motion of W. L. Nugent the amendment was laid on the table.

D. G. Colwin called for the previous question. The call was sustained. The question was put, and Report No. 5 of the Committee on Publishing Interests was adopted. (See report.)

The time was extended to allow J. B. McFerrin to make an explanation, and the secretary to present the following communication from the stated clerk of the Presbyterian General Assembly, in session in Knoxville:

COMMUNICATION FROM THE PRESBYTERIAN GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

KNOXVILLE, May 21, 1878.

To the Secretary of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in session at Atlanta.

It becomes my pleasing duty to transmit through you, to the Conference of which you are an officer the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted by the General Assembly:

Resolved, That this General Assembly acknowledge the reception of the Christian salutations of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, now in session at Atlanta, Ga., and through our stated clerk to send like greeting, love and good wishes for harmony in their sessions, and prosperity in all their church enterprises.

JOS R WILSON,
Stated Clerk of General Assembly of Presbyterian Church in U. S.

To Rev. T. O. Summers, Secretary.

Conference then adjourned, with the doxology and benediction by the Bishop.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

REPORT NO. X OF THE COMMITTEE ON EPISCOPACY.

The Committee on Episcopacy respectfully report that they had under consideration a paper signed by W. H. Watkins and W. W. Bennett, proposing to alter the provisions of the Discipline, page 70, in relation to the publication of episcopal decisions, and recommend the adoption of the following:

Resolved, That the Bishops be requested to publish their decisions on questions of law in the Nashville Advocate for popular use, and afterward in the appendix to the Manual for permanence.

S. REGISTER, Chair'n.
S. S. BRYANT, Sec.

Presented and adopted, Wednesday, May 22, 1878.

REPORT NO. XI OF THE COMMITTEE ON EPISCOPACY.

The Committee on Episcopacy respectfully report that a summary statement of receipts and disbursements of the Bishops' fund for the past four years, by the book agent, Dr. A. H. Redford, was referred to them, which is herewith returned to the Conference, with the recommendation that it be adopted.

The committee further recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the treasurer of the Bishops' fund be required hereafter to submit to the General Conference an itemized statement of his receipts and disbursements for the preceding four years, showing clearly the amounts contributed by each Annual Conference.

S. REGESTER, Chair'n.
S. S. BRYANT, Sec.

Presented and adopted, Wednesday, May 22 1878.

REPORT NO IX OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

The Committee on Itinerancy have had under consideration a communication signed by J Boring, W. F. Cook and W. H. Potter, asking that certain changes be made in the Discipline relating to the ordination of deacons and elders. In answer to said request the committee recommend:

1 That chapter 3 section 11, page 92 of the Discipline be amended by adding to the answer to question 2 these words: "Provided, that if he has been a local preacher three years successively, and on trial in the traveling ministry for one year next following, he shall be eligible to the office of a deacon on obtaining the approbation of the Annual Conference."

2 That chapter 3, section 11, pages 93 and 94 of the Discipline be amended by adding to the answer to question 3 these words: "Provided, that if he has been a local deacon for three years successively, and on trial in the traveling ministry for one year next following, he shall be eligible to the office of an elder on obtaining the approbation of the Annual Conference."

J. S. MARTIN, Chairman.
C. G ANDREWS, Sec.

Presented and laid on the table, Wednesday, May 22, 1878.

REPORT NO VIII OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

Your Committee on Publishing Interests beg leave to report that they have considered the resolutions, referred to them, of Drs. Marshall and Oliver, asking attention to "the practicability of preparing or obtaining materials for the history of our church with a view to early publication," and that they fully appreciate the importance of such a movement.

The passing opportunities for collecting and preparing such materials should not be lost. The history must be written—will be written. We recommend the following resolutions for the adoption of the General Conference:

Resolved 1. That a faithful history of the Methodist Episcopal Church South is an important chapter in the annals of the church of Jesus Christ in the nineteenth century, and it should be preserved and put to record.

2. Resolved That the book editor of the Methodist Episcopal Church South be instructed to collect such materials as may be essential in preparing said history, and that our brethren everywhere be requested to recall such items of interest as may have been forgotten, and collect all the interesting facts in their power, and report to the book editor, to be carefully preserved by him.

Your committee has also considered the relations of the Christian Advocate published at Nashville to the other weekly newspapers published in the interest of our church, and respectfully report for the adoption of the Conference the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Nashville Christian Advocate should be published at a price that would not undermine and destroy its less fortunate competitors in the field of Southern Methodist journalism, and we believe that $2 50 per annum is the lowest amount at which it should be issued.

The committee has also considered the paper signed by T. L. Mellen and others respecting the publication, by the book agent, of books, etc., in which he has a personal interest, and recommend the adoption of the following, to be inserted among the regulations of the Publishing House:

"The agent of the Publishing House shall devote his entire time and attention to the business of the Publishing House, and during the continuance of his agency he shall not publish at the Publishing House any book, tract, pamphlet or paper in which he is personally and pecuniarily interested, either directly or indirectly, as author or otherwise."

Respectfully submitted.

J B McFERRIN Chairman.
DAVID MORTON, Sec.

Presented and laid on the table, Wednesday morning, May 22, 1878.

REPORT NO IX OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

Your committee, to whom was referred the report of the German Publishing Committee, to which were added two resolutions adopted by the German Mission Conference during its late session, properly signed by the secretary, viz:

1 Recommending the election of Rev. J B. Ahrens, D D., editor, and Rev J A G Rabe assistant editor of the Familienfreund and Kinderfreund

2 Recommending the election of a German Publishing Committee, composed of the following-named persons: J. B A. Ahrens, F Vordenbaumen, J. A. Schasser, John G. Krauter and Jacob Bader.

Respectfully report concurrence.

J B McFERRIN, Chairman.
J E COBB Sec.

Presented and adopted, Wednesday morning, May 22, 1878.

REPORT NO. X OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLISHING INTERESTS

To the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

Your Committee on Publishing Interests submit the following report upon the memorial in the paper of the Rev. R Abbey, referred to them at an early day of the session. Your committee report the following facts, which have been elicited by their investigation, viz:

1 That on the twentieth of May, 1870, the General Conference adopted a resolution, by which "the Rev. A L P Green, of Tennessee, and Isaac L. Johnson, Esq., of Washington D C.," were appointed a commission on behalf of the "book agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church South," with full power and authority to employ counsel to present and prosecute the claims of and receive the debt due the Publishing House of said church, at Nashville, by the government of the United States for rents, damages, printing material and other property pressed into the service of said government during the years 1862 to 1865 inclusive, and endowed with full power to do all acts and things pertaining to said claim. (See Journal, page 305.)

2 That on the eleventh day of July 1872 the Book Committee of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in regular meeting of which said Rev. A L P Green was president, appointed Dr. A H Redford in the place of Isaac Johnson, who had failed to act in said commission, and "authorized said Green and Redford to employ the Rev. R. Abbey to superintend the prosecution of said claim against the United States government." (See minutes of the Book Committee.)

3 That in pursuance of said authority said A H Redford wrote Dr Abbey on the twelfth of July, 1872 inquiring as to the terms to undertake to prosecute the claim, employ counsel, etc.

4 That on the twenty-fifth of July, 1872 said Redford proposed to pay the traveling expenses of said Abbey, and a commission upon what might be collected.

5 That the proposition as to payment of expenses was accepted, but that of commission declined on the ground that it would give said Abbey an interest in the claim, and thus deprive the church of the benefit of his testimony, which he deemed of importance to the Publishing House in the prosecution of the claim.

6 That the matter of compensation was agreed to be left with the Book Committee, with the assurance on the part of said Redford that they would do right, and that said Abbey would thus be relieved from any interest in the claim. (See letter of August 2, 1872.)

7 That by the letter of said Redford, agent of the Publishing House, of date August 22 1872 said Abbey was assured that his employment was by request of Dr. Green, and that they wished him to proceed to Washington, confer with Dr. Johnson, and employ counsel at his discretion, and have the claim pushed forward as early as practicable, and exercise his discretion as to the manner of prosecuting and conducting said claim to its final collection co-operating with said commission—Messrs Green and Johnson and himself, as general book agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

8 That on the thirtieth day of September, 1872 said Redford, agent, executed a power of attorney to said Abbey, investing him with full power in the premises.

9 That in pursuance of the authority vested in him, said Abbey entered fully upon his work, employed counsel upon terms deemed reasonable, and not involving any liability, except contingently, and has been engaged in prosecuting said claim, so far as your committee is advised, with unremitting zeal and diligence up to this time.

10 That in the prosecution of said claim he has incurred considerable expense, a detailed statement of which has not been furnished us. This is estimated by Dr Abbey at more than three thousand dollars over and above the amount paid him by the Publishing House, and has subjected him to no little inconvenience.

11 Your committee have received assurances that there is a reasonable ground to hope that the contest, which has been so long waged for the right in this case, will ultimate in success; but when that result is likely to be reached they have no means of determining. It is believed that the able report of the majority of the committee of the Senate in favor of the allowance of this claim will be adopted whenever it is reached in the order of business.

In this state of the case, when this important matter may need special attention it is not deemed advisable that the agency, which was created under the circumstances named, and which received the approval and indorsement of the General Conference of 1874 in the resolution found on page 435 of the journal, should be circumstanced by any direct action of this body.

The relief which success in the prosecution of the claim would give the Publishing House is a matter of the highest moment at this time of greatest need, and should not be imperiled by any hasty, impatient or inconsiderate action.

Under this state of facts your committee respectfully suggest that the best disposition to make of the whole matter at present would be:

1 To file the communication of Dr Abbey, with the accompanying documents, among the records of the General Conference, for future reference.

2 To refer the whole matter of settlement of accounts for expenses incurred in compensation and the continuance or discontinuance of the agency to the agent of the Publishing House and the Book Committee, which may be elected at this session, for adjustment.

Your committee therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

1 That the communication of Dr. Abbey and the accompanying documents be filed among the records of the General Conference.

2 That all matters connected with his account for expenses and compensation be referred to the agent of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Book Committee, which may be elected at this session of the General Conference, for settlement and adjustment.

3 That all matters relating to the continuance or discontinuance of the agency be referred in like manner to said agent and committee.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J B. McFERRIN, Chair'n.

Presented Wednesday morning, May 22 1878.

REPORT NO XI OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

Your committee, to whom was referred a resolution signed by Robert Paine, Jr., John B McFerrin and J C. C Winch, respecting the expediency of memorializing the Congress of the United States upon the subject of the claim in favor of our Publishing House, considered the same, and have prepared the accompanying memorial, which they have instructed me to report to this General Conference for their adoption, after which the secretary of this Conference shall furnish duly certified copies for each of the honorable Senate and the House of Representatives, in Congress assembled.

J B. McFERRIN Chair'n.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress Assembled:

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, consisting of three hundred delegates, ministers and laymen holding a quadrennial session of said Conference at Atlanta Ga., which commenced May 1 1878, most respectfully memorialize your honorable body and represent:

That the United States is justly indebted to the "book agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church South," a corporation located and having its principal office in the city of Nashville Tenn., which is the property of the church represented by this General Conference, and under its direction, to a large sum of money for valuable means and facilities used by the army of the United States in 1862 to 1865, which said claim has long since been prosecuted for adjustment and payment, and is now pending before Congress.

Your honorable bodies have already been informed that the claimant is a religious Publishing House—a public charity—and is one of the largest and most promising in the United States. Its object is to supply the millions more particularly in the South and West, of all classes and races, with a wholesome religious literature adapted more especially to the wants of the young and the less informed masses of the people.

We are assured that Congress is fully advised that the non payment of this debt has largely contributed to the present serious embarrassment of the Publishing House, which at this date, we regret to say, amounts to almost financial ruin.

Your honorable bodies are likewise informed of the extraordinary number of petitions now before your committees praying for the settlement and payment of this claim. We have been advised that these petitions form, as a whole, the most weighty memorial ever presented to the American Congress for private relief.

We are assured that all useful legal, moral and equitable considerations in support of this claim have already been brought by counsel before Congress, and, we doubt not, have been duly considered; and when this body, as we now do, respectfully but most earnestly request Congress to make a settlement and payment of this claim at the earliest convenience of the government, we utter only the unanimous sentiments of millions of American citizens composing our church, societies and congregations, and masses of the people who look mainly to our Publishing House for their current supply of moral and religious literature.

Signed by order and on behalf of the General Conference, at Atlanta, Ga., the twenty-second of May, 1878.

H N MCTYEIRE, Pres't.
T. O. SUMMERS, Sec.

Presented and adopted, Wednesday, May 22, 1878.

REPORT NO. XIX OF THE COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

The Committee on Revisal submit Report No. 19:

1. They have had under consideration a paper signed by J. H. Dyo and A. R. Winfield, and report that the subject matter of this paper has been already reported on by your committee, and it needs no further notice.

2. We recommend non-concurrence in the memorial of the Memphis Conference, requiring the presiding elder to furnish a list of the members of the District Conference.

3. You committee recommend that you do not concur in a paper signed by A. M. Chrelzberg and O A Darby, recommending a change in the Discipline touching the Board of Finance.

4. They also recommend non-concurrence in the paper of W. S Johnson and H P Walker, touching the record of the Joint Board of Finance.

5. No action is necessary on the paper of C. F. Harvy and J. J Roberts, as the subject matter has already been reported on by your committee.

6. We recommend non-concurrence in the paper of T S Wade and S Black, which proposes to strike out answer 3, question 1, section 12, chapter 3, page 98 of the Discipline.

Respectfully submitted.

J. E. EVANS, Chairman.
F. M. KENNEDY, Sec.

Presented and adopted, Wednesday, May 22, 1878.

J E. EVANS, Chairman.
E. M KENNEDY, Sec.

Presented and laid on the table, Wednesday, May 22 1878.

REPORT NO XVII OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Extract from the will of Mrs. Ann Christian Kent, deceased:

"I give to A. H. Redford, agent of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, or his successor in office, the sum of three thousand dollars, to be controlled by said agent, for the use of said church in spreading and disseminating the gospel among mankind, to be thus applied by said agent under the direction of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, making any disposition of said property as the General Conference shall judge best calculated to promote the object of this trust, as herein stated."

Resolved That the General Conference directs the payment of the sum ($3 000) to the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

R A. YOUNG Chairman.

Presented and laid on the table, Wednesday morning, May 22, 1878.

REPORT NO I ON FRATERNAL CORRESPONDENCE.

The Committee on Fraternal Correspondence beg leave to report the following letter in response to the address of the British Conference, viz:

To the Wesleyan Methodist Conference of Great Britain:

Dear Fathers and Brethren—Your address to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South has given us great satisfaction. We rejoice in the knowledge of the uninterrupted growing numbers in both the ministry and membership of your societies; of your enlarged views and liberal plans for the education of your people, and the training of a careful and enlightened ministry for home and foreign spheres of labor; of your continued zeal and activity in the great cause of missions, and in all enterprises for the advancement of Christ's kingdom in the world; and particularly of the good success that has followed all your labors. Thanks be unto God who maketh manifest the savor of his knowledge by you in every place. For this cause do we joy and rejoice with you.

The Christian courtesy and kindness shown by you to the late Bishop Marvin and the Rev. E H. Hoss, our accredited representatives to your Conference, deeply affected their own minds, and find grateful recognition by our General Conference, which represents a total membership of about seven hundred and seventy-five thousand souls. Of our own affairs we need not now write particularly, since our representatives were so recently enabled to give you full and detailed information. We hold with you the same standards of doctrinal truths; we are engaged with you in the like efforts to bring our fellow-men into saving contact with the truth as it is in Jesus; and we share with you the same watchfulness of mind to guard our people against the insidious approaches of a cunning infidelity and a dangerous sacerdotalism. We have diligently studied all your plans of operation, and caught inspiration from your examples, especially in the important departments of educational and missionary enterprise. Our schools and colleges and universities are well distributed through our entire territory, and are meeting in good degree the wants of our people. The subject of higher education is at this time receiving special attention at our hands; and institutions, modeled after yours, for securing and perpetuating to our church an enlightened and earnest ministry, are coming into successful use among us. Already from such institutions have gone forth the young and zealous missionary to toil in the distant fields of China, in Brazil, in Mexico, among the Germans in Texas, and the native Indians of the West. A delegate from China represents in this General Conference the interests of that far off land.

Our General Conference, at its present session, has taken the necessary steps to a due celebration of the centennial of the organization of our church in America, in December 1884, and also adopted preliminary measures to secure the assembling of an Ecumenical Council of Methodism, in which it is hoped all branches of the great Methodist family will seek representation, and from which it is confidently expected that the greatest good will result to every part of the general connection.

We most cordially reciprocate the fraternal greetings of your address; and hereby express the great satisfaction and joy it will always give us, at future sessions of our General Conference, to interchange communications with you, by representatives or otherwise, as may be most convenient for you. We can never forget the almost dying words of Mr Wesley, longing for such fraternal interchanges, and enforcing the perpetual spiritual unity of Methodism. "We want some of you," said he to Ezekiel Cooper February 1, 1791, "to give us a connected relation of what our Lord has been doing in America from the time that Richard Boardman accepted the invitation and left his country to serve you. See that you never give place to one thought of separating from your brethren in Europe. Lose no opportunity of declaring to all men that the Methodists are one people in all the world, and that it is their full determination so to continue.

"Though mountains flow and oceans roll
To sever us in vain."

Now may the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever. Amen.

A. M. SHIPP, Chairman.

REPORT NO. II ON FRATERNAL CORRESPONDENCE.

The committee recommend for adoption by the Conference the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That the College of Bishops be authorized and requested to appoint a delegation, consisting of one minister and one layman, to bear the fraternal greetings of the Methodist Episcopal Church South to the Methodist Church of Canada.

A. M. SHIPP, Chairman.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON CHURCH FORMS.

Your committee have also examined with care the forms for a church roster, a Quarterly Conference record, and a class-book, prepared by Rev. Presley B. Smith, and referred to us, and respectfully report that we regard them as very meritorious works of their kind, and well suited to the purposes for which they were designed—the preservation in neat compact form, of a clear, concise and connected history of the charges and those them. We would be glad to see them generally adopted throughout the connection.

J. B. McFERRIN, Chair'n.
DAVID MORTON, Sec'y.

Presented and adopted, Wednesday, May 22, 1878.

REPORT NO. III OF THE COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

Your committee have carefully considered the paper signed by Mrs. Mary McClellan Brown, referred to us by your body, and would report the following resolution:

Resolved, That we recommend to the several pastors of the church the propriety of holding special services in the interest of Bible or Christian temperance, at such times and in such manner as may be deemed best by the preacher.

P. P. ELLIS, Chairman.

Presented and adopted, Monday morning, May 22, 1878.

TWENTIETH DAY.

THURSDAY, May 23, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour. Bishop Keener in the chair.

B. H. Spencer conducted divine services.

The minutes were read and approved.

Bishop Paine took the chair.

W. W. Jones and others moved that at ten o'clock this morning it be the order of the day to elect General Conference officers. The motion was laid on the table.

On motion of J. C. C. Winch the order of the day for three o'clock this afternoon was made the election of General Conference officers.

On motion of John Hogan, speeches hereafter are to be limited to five minutes, unless the time be extended by vote of the Conference.

Report No. 3 on Boundaries was taken up.

N. H. Lee moved to amend the first item by adding the words: "Except the town of Jeffersonville."

On motion of F. M. Kennedy the item and amendment were laid on the table.

This item is as follows:

"Your committee, to whom was referred the memorial from the Illinois Annual Conference, and the memorial from the Gosport District Conference, Illinois Annual Conference, have had them under careful consideration, and recommend the formation of an Indiana Annual Conference, which shall embrace the State of Indiana."

The report has been printed in a former number.

The following resolution was then presented, read and adopted:

Whereas, That portion of the Illinois Conference now included in the State of Indiana has greatly prospered, and is constantly enlarging, having increased in four years from 20 to 1,200 members; therefore,

Resolved, That the Illinois Conference be and they are hereby authorized by a vote of a majority of the members, and with the consent of the Bishop presiding, to divide within the next four years so as to form that portion now in Indiana into a separate Conference, to be called the Indiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

COLIN MURCHISON,
B. R. HESTER,

Report No. 3 on Missions was called up, read and adopted.

Report No. 2 on Finance, with minority report, was called up.

A motion was made to adopt the majority report. T. M. Finney moved as a substitute the minority, which was adopted.

Report No. 3 on Finance was taken up.

A. P. Wartertield and H. A. C. Walker moved the following amendment, which was not adopted:

"Art. 3. The apportionment for the salary of the presiding elder shall in all cases be collected by the circuit or station stewards, separately from that of the pastor, and in no case shall be divide with the pastor."

The report was adopted.

Report No 7 on Finance, with the minority report, was taken up. Both reports were read.

J. C. C. Winch moved to substitute the minority report.

E. Hamill moved to lay the substitute on the table. This motion did not prevail. Yeas 93; nays, 93.

On motion of J. S. Martin the substitute was indefinitely postponed.

The adoption of the majority report was moved.

P. A. Peterson moved the following substitute for the report. A motion to lay it on the table did not prevail.:

Resolved, That our pastors are expected and directed to use their influence and authority to discourage all doubtful methods of raising money for church purposes, and that we exhort our people to abstain from all practices in this connection which cannot be pursued in the name of the Lord Jesus.

T. N. Meriwether called for the previous question. The call was sustained, the question put, and the substitute of P. A. Peterson was adopted.

Report No. 8 on Finance was taken up, read and adopted.

Report No. 2 on Education was taken up, read and adopted.

Report No. 3. on Education was taken up and read.

E. E. Wiley moved to recommit the report. A motion to lay that motion on the table did not prevail.

The report was recommitted, with instructions to the committee to report at their earliest convenience, and cancel everything in the report of a political character.

Report No. 6 on Revisal was taken up.

Item 1 was read and adopted.

Item 2 was read.

Paul Whitehead moved an amendment, which was adopted. It consists in an addition after the word "defense."

Item 3 was read and adopted.

Item 4 was read.

N. H. Lee moved to amend by substituting "take with him" for "appoint." The amendment prevailed. The item was adopted.

Items 5, 6, 7 and 8 were read and adopted. The report was adopted as a whole.

Report No 1 on Education, which was recommitted this morning as amended by that committee, was presented by W. W. Duncan, which was read and adopted.

A. M. Shipp, chairman of the Committee on Fraternal Correspondence, presented Reports Nos. 4 and 5 of that committee, which were read and adopted.

Report No. 7 on Revisal was taken up and read.

S. Rodgers moved to amend by inserting the word "non" before the word "concurrence."

After considerable discussion, J. S. Martin called for the previous question. The call was sustained, the question was put and the amendment was adopted. Yeas, 137; nays, 81.

On motion of E. E. Wiley the time was extended to allow the fraternal messengers the opportunity to take leave of the Conference.

The Rev. Dr. Douglas, fraternal messenger from the Canada connection, was brought forward and made an affecting parting address to the Conference, closing with the expression of a request that two fraternal messengers may be sent by the Conference to the next session of the Canada General Conference, which is to meet in Montreal next September. He pleasantly intimated that Bishop Pierce and Gov. Colquitt would receive a most cordial welcome.

The fraternal messengers of the African Methodist Episcopal Church followed in earnest words of parting salutation.

Dr. Douglas then arose and extended a cordial invitation to all the members of the Conference to visit the Canada General Conference—and in particular the secretary of this body.

The occasion was one of great interest.

The chair then announced the following as the committee of nine on nomination of the Book Committee: N. H. Lee, J. R. Godwin, John A. Ellis, W. B. Parsons, J. P. Kelly, J. M. Steele, George M. Bain, William Burr, W. P. Barton.

An invitation to the local preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church South to attend the annual convention of Methodist local preachers, to be held in Louisville, Ky., beginning October 19, 1878, was received, read and ordered to be printed in the Daily Christian Advocate.

Conference adjourned, with the benediction by the Bishop, to meet this afternoon at 1:15 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference met at the stated hour. Bishop Paine in the chair.

Religious exercises were conducted by C. W. Carter, of the Louisiana Conference. The minutes were read, corrected and confirmed.

The following resolution was offered read and adopted:

Resolved, That the General Conference authorize the patronizing Conferences to elect the editors of their respective church papers, and report the editors elected to this General Conference.

J. O. A. CLARK.
J. S. KEY.
N. H. D. WILSON.
JOHN HOGAN.
S. REGESTER.
S. S. ROSZELL.

The following item, numbered 11, was presented as an addition to the regulations adopted for the government of the Publishing House, as a part of Report No. 5 on Publishing Interests. It was adopted—a motion to lay on the table not prevailing.

11. The said agent, by and with the consent of the Book Committee, may employ a publisher and business manager, whose duty it shall be to superintend and manage the publishing and business department of said Publishing House, under the control and direction of said agent and committee.

J. B. WILSON.
A. G. HAYGOOD.
MOSES WALTON.
DAVID MORTON.

The Conference then proceeded to ballot for a book agent.

J. S. Martin, J. W. Heidt, S. S. Bryant and W. L. C. Hunnicutt were appointed tellers.

The first balloting resulted as follows:

A. H. Redford, 23; J. W. Burke, 27; L. D. Dameron, 26; H. F. Johnson, 9; R. W. Brew, 5; J. Hardeman, 2; J. B. McFerrin, 82; L. D. Palmer, 11; N. H. D. Wilson, 2; T. M. Finney, 3; R. A. Young, 12; J. B. Wilson, 7; T. O. Summers, 1; J. W. Rush, 1; S. Burkhead, 1; G. M. Bain, 1; O. R. Blue, 1; W. Gam, Blank, D. Morton, A. G. Haygood, H. J. Adams, J. S. Martin, R. K. Hargrove, C. G. Montgomery, W. M. Rush, W. E. Karnegay, Thos. Branch, R. J. Harp, T. G. Whitten, one each.

The whole number of votes cast was 226. No election.

At the close of the vote R. A. Young arose and said: "I am not a merchant, I am not a publisher, I am not a capitalist; and therefore I hope no more votes will be cast for me on the next ballot. I should decline if elected."

A. H. Redford, L. D. Dameron and several others who had been voted for, begged that their names might be withdrawn.

At the close of the first ballot for book agent Dr. Redford said:

"In my address before the Conference on yesterday I distinctly stated that I could not serve longer as book agent—that I had made my arrangements to return to Kentucky, and publish in the city of Louisville a paper in the interest of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, to be called the Southern Methodist. Such, I repeat, is my intention. I therefore most earnestly request my friends not to cast any more votes for me."

The second ballot resulted as follows: J. B. McFerrin, 140; H. F. Johnson, 18; L. D. Dameron, 8; A. G. Haygood, 3; R. W. Brew, 2; S. Black, 3; J. G. John, 2; J. S. McCarver, 2; J. B. Wilson, 3; J. W. Burke, 2; W. C. McMillan, T. F. Vanmeter, J. W. Gant, J. Lovett, A. W. Shipp, A. H. Redford, Johnson, Black, H. S. Johnson, Branch, Rodgers, D. Morton, Hargrove, one each.

There were 214 votes cast. J. B. McFerrin having received a majority, was declared book agent.

Conference then proceeded to vote for editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate.

The chair stated that as some spoke of voting for Thomas O. Summers, the present editor, the chair was authorized to say that he could not accept the office, and votes ought not to be thrown away on his name.

The ballot resulted as follows: There were 222 votes cast, of which J. W. Hinton received 26; T. O. Summers, 11; O. P. Fitzgerald, 61; L. Pirker, 30; H. A. M. Henderson, 3; R. K. Hargrove, 9; C. W. Miller, 31; A. G. Haygood, 11; A. W. Wilson, 13; D. R. McAnally, 6; J. M. Bland, 2; W. C. Johnson, 5; J. J. Lafferty, T. M. Finney, A. R. Winfield, W. H. Potter, W. G. Connor, R. N. Price, J. D. Barbee, I. G. John, F. M. Kennedy, one each. No election. The names of D. R. McAnally, H. A. M. Henderson and L. Parker were withdrawn.

The second ballot resulted as follows:

There were 222 votes cast, of which O. P. Fitzgerald received 115; R. K. Hargrove, 6; W. L. C. Hunnicutt, 2; L. Parker, 9; C. W. Miller, 43; A. W. Wilson, 6; J. W. Hinton 31; T. A. S. Adams, 2; T. O. Summers, 2; A. G. Haygood, 3; A. R. Winfield, W. F. Cooke, S. Black, J. Barcroft, A. H. Redford, one each.

O. P. Fitzgerald, having received a majority of the votes cast, was pronounced duly elected editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate.

On motion of D. C. Kelley, Thomas O. Summers was elected editor of books by acclamation.

On motion of T. J. Magruder, W. G. E. Cunnyngham was elected Sunday school editor by acclamation.

The order of the day was suspended to take up Report No. 6 on Missions.

Article 1 of the constitution was adopted.

P. Whitehead moved to strike out the word "and" in article 2 of the constitution between the words secretary and treasurer. This motion prevailed, and article 2 was adopted.

Articles 3, 4, 5 and 6 were read and adopted.

On motion of J. E. Edwards the remainder of the constitution was substituted by the remaining articles in the old constitution.

The time was extended to go into the election of the secretary of the Board of Missions.

On motion of A. R. Winfield the chair was requested to appoint a committee of five to nominate the officers and members of the Board of Missions.

The chair announced the following as the committee: A. R. Winfield, J. S. Key, H. P. Walker, S. Rodgers, P. A. Peterson.

The ballot for secretary resulted as follows: There were 215 votes cast, of which D. C. Kelley received 52; W. H. Potter, 28; A. W. Wilson, 38; A. G. Haygood, 7; E. R. Hendrix, 9; P. A. Peterson, 25; R. K. Hargrove, 11; S. X. Hall, 4; W. F. Harris, 8; W. G. Connor, 11; E. N. Watson, 2; A. R. Winfield, 7; A. S. Andrews, 3; J. S. Martin, R. N. Sledd, T. M. Finney, A. H. Thomas, S. Rodgers, one each. No election.

On motion of G. M. Jones, when we adjourn we adjourn to meet at 8:30 A. M. to-morrow.

The names of Hendrix, Peterson, Haygood Winfield and some others were withdrawn.

The second ballot resulted as follows: There were 207 votes cast, of which D. C. Kelley received 69; A. W. Wilson, 108; W. H. Potter, 22; A. G. Haygood, 2; Hendrix, Winfield, Peterson and S. X. Hall, one each.

A. W. Wilson was declared duly elected secretary of the Board of Missions.

On motion of J. E. Edwards, Report No. 7 of the Committee on Itinerancy was made the order of the day for to-morrow morning, after reading the minutes.

A. R. Winfield, chairman of the committee to nominate the officers and members of the Board of Missions, announced the following nominations: T. O. Summers, president; N. H. Lee, vice-president; J. W. Manier, treasurer. Managers: J. S. Martin, Baltimore Conference; W. G. E. Cunnyngham, Holston; L. S. Burkhead, North Carolina; H. A. C. Walker, South Carolina; W. H. Potter, North Georgia; R. A. Young, Tennessee; P. A. Peterson, Virginia; D. C. Kelley, Tennessee; A. H. Redford, Louisville; I. G. John, Texas; A. R. Winfield, Little Rock; J. W. Lewis, St. Louis; W. T. Johnson, Missouri; J. C. Simmons, Pacific; O. P. Fitzgerald, Pacific; J. D. Hamilton, Tennessee; C. B. Galbraith, Mississippi.

Conference adjourned, with the benediction by the Bishop.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

REPORT NO. IV OF COMMITTEE ON FRATERNAL CORRESPONDENCE.

The Committee on Fraternal Correspondence beg leave to report, for adoption by the Conference, the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That the College of Bishops be authorized and requested to appoint a delegation of two to convey, in person or by letter, the fraternal greetings of the Methodist Episcopal Church South to the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, and to the African Methodist Episcopal Church, at the next session of their General Conferences.

A. M. SHIPP, Chairman.

REPORT NO. V OF THE COMMITTEE ON FRATERNAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Your Committee on Fraternal Correspondence beg leave to report, for adoption, the following resolution, viz:

Resolved, That the second Wednesday of the session of this General Conference, to be held in the city of Nashville, in May, 1882, is suggested as the proper day for the reception of fraternal delegations, and that the evening of that day, and such other evenings as the Conference may order, shall be set apart for listening to addresses from delegations; and that all bodies in correspondence with us be fully advertised in our letters by our visiting delegates, of the day ordered by this body for the reception of fraternal delegates, their letters and their words of greeting.

A. M. SHIPP, Chairman.

Presented and adopted, Thursday, May 23, 1878.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

FRIDAY, May 24, 1878.

Conference met at the stated hour, Bishop Pierce in the chair.

The Conference ordered the General Minutes of 1876 and 1877 to be stereotyped and published as soon as convenient.

Report No. 7 of the Committee on Itinerancy was taken up. It relates to the basis of representation, and reported on numerous papers on the subject. The report is as follows:

REPORT NO. VII OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

The Committee on Itinerancy have had under very careful consideration the many papers, from various sources, in regard to the composition and representation of a General Conference, and report the following as the result of their deliberations:

1. They recommend that answers 1 and 2 to question 1, section 1, chapter 2, pages 32 and 33 of the Discipline, be so amended as to read as follows, viz:

Answer 1. The General Conference shall be composed of one clerical member for every thirty-six members of each Annual Conference, and an equal number of lay members. Of the lay members from an Annual Conference, one may be a local preacher.

The clerical representatives shall be elected by the clerical members of the Annual Conference; provided that such representatives shall have been traveling preachers at least four calendar years next preceding their election, and in full connection with an Annual Conference when elected, and also at the time of holding the General Conference. The lay representatives shall be elected by the lay members of the Annual Conference; provided that such representatives shall have been members of our church for at least six calendar years next preceding the time of their election, and also at the time of holding the General Conference.

2. An Annual Conference, entitled under the second restrictive rule to one ministerial delegate, shall not be denied the privilege of one lay delegate, and he may be a local preacher.

The committee also recommend that the second restrictive rule in the Discipline, page 36, be so amended as to read as follows, viz:

"2. They shall not allow of more than one representative for every eighteen members of the Annual Conference, nor allow of a less number than one for every sixty; provided, nevertheless, that when there shall be in any Annual Conference a fraction of two-thirds the number which shall be fixed for the ratio of representation, such Annual Conference shall be entitled to an additional delegate for such fraction; and provided also that no Conference shall be denied the privilege of two delegates—one clerical and one lay."

The report was adopted by a vote of 157 yeas to 23 nays.

On motion of J. B. McFerrin the secretary was instructed to send this report to each Annual Conference at its next session, and to furnish each of the Bishops with a copy of the same for their action.

Bishop Kavanaugh took the chair.

Report No. 1 on Sunday Schools was taken up and read.

It concurred in the memorial on annual election, at the fourth Quarterly Conference, of Sunday school superintendents, and to define their duties more fully. Adopted.

Also concurred in a resolution instructing the Sunday school editor to put as much of Methodist catechism in Sunday school lessons as will teach the doctrines of the church. Adopted.

Also in a resolution on addition to duties of pastor in instructing children. Adopted.

Also on development of greater missionary spirit among Sunday school children. Adopted.

The Book Committee is constituted as follows: Dempsey Weaver, James Whitworth, T. D. Fite, Nathaniel Baxter, Jr., Dr. William Morrow, Judge E. H. East, Dr. William H. Morgan, Rev. R. K. Hargrove, Rev. R. A. Young, John A. Carter, S. H. Dunscomb, Rev. A. G. Haygood, Rev. A. S. Andrews.

On motion of John Hogan the Conference proceeded to vote for the place of holding the next session of the General Conference.

Waco, Texas, St. Louis, Mo., and Nashville, Tenn., were put in nomination. Waco received 48 votes, St. Louis 21. On motion, Nashville was chosen by a unanimous vote.

The following resolution was then presented, read and adopted:

Whereas, The financial embarrassment of the Southern Methodist Church in Washington city has not been relieved since the session of the General Conference in 1874; And whereas The necessity for a well-sustained and truly representative church at the capital of the United States is more imperative now than ever before; therefore,

Resolved, That we renew the recommendation and reindorse the appeal made by the Bishops in 1874 in behalf of the Southern Methodist Church in Washington city.

The following election of editors of Conference papers were announced as follows: D. R. McAnally, editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate; W. C. Johnson, of the Nashville Methodist; I. G. John, of the Texas Christian Advocate; F. M. Kennedy, Southern Christian Advocate; Linn Parker, NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE; W. B. Parsons, Pacific Methodist; Z. Meek, Central Methodist.

A beautiful episode then took place. Bishop Pierce delivered an affecting address (with a copy of the Bible presented by the Conference to each) to the six little boys who acted as diligent and courteous pages during the session of the General Conference.

A. R. Winfield, on behalf of the pages, made a beautiful response.

The regular order was resumed—Report No. 1 of the Committee on Sunday Schools:

Item 1. On correctional Sunday School Union. Making Annual Conferences elect secretaries to represent the Sunday school interest to the Sunday school editor. Adopted.

Item 2. On election of Committee of Finance by the General Conference on general Sunday school interests, with Sunday school editor as chairman. Adopted.

Report No. 3 of Committee on Sunday Schools:

Item 1. Favorable on encouragement of children to attend divine services. Adopted.

Report No. 5:

Item 1. Adverse on new form for opening Sunday school. Adopted.

Report No. 3 of Committee on Itinerancy:

Favorable on insertion of question, "Are you in debt?" in Discipline, on admission of preachers on trial. Adopted.

Report 1 of Committee on Finance, on church debts and prohibition of stewards creating liens on church property, and recommending such changes in present laws as are necessary to prevent churches from running into deep debt. Adopted.

Report No. 9 of Committee on Revisal:

Item 1. Favorable on change of Discipline that Conferences sit with open doors unless ordered otherwise. Adopted.

Item 2. Favorably on memorial on change of Discipline so as to make class-leaders annually appointed, and changed when necessary.

The item was put on a division—yeas, 88; nays, 51—and was adopted.

Item 3. Favorably on resolutions asking provision against undue anticipation of churches, and changing the Discipline to that end.

The names of the Committee on Sunday Schools were announced, as follows: N. T. Lupton, J. H. McFerrin, W. A. McCarty, J. H. Carlisle, T. J. Magruder.

Bishop Pierce announced that the Rev. J. O. A. Clark was appointed agent of the Wesley Monumental Church in Savannah.

Conference then adjourned, with the doxology and benediction by the secretary.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference met at the appointed hour.

Bishop Wightman in the chair.

E. E. Wiley asked that the editors elect of the Holston Methodist be put on the minutes. They were R. N. Price and J. A. Lyons. Their names were ordered recorded.

R. A. Young, chairman of the Committee on Finance, made a verbal report that a bequest of $8,000 was made by J. T. Colvin to the widows and orphans of the traveling preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; whereupon, on motion of D. C. Kelley, it was resolved that "the agent be and is hereby authorized and instructed to pay the amount to the several Annual Conferences."

The following resolution was then offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That when the Book Committee shall have ascertained definitely the amount of legitimate indebtedness of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, and, after exhausting all other resources committed to them for payment thereof, it should be discovered that there are still debts which remain unprovided for, and cannot otherwise be paid, we regard these as debts of the church, contracted by its authorized agencies, which honor and Christian integrity alike require us to pay.

W. J. NUGENT.
R. K. HARGROVE.
H. C. KELLEY.

W. G. Veal moved that the course of study for traveling and local preachers be printed in the appendix to the Discipline.

The following resolutions were offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That the Sunday school editor be requested to assist the book editor in preparing the new Discipline for the press.

Resolved, That the book agent be and is hereby instructed to publish as soon as possible the journal of this session of the General Conference and the new Discipline.

Resolved, That we recognize the great good that has resulted from the visits of our bishops to the District Conferences; still in view of the arduous work before them in presiding the sessions of the Annual Conferences, the General Conference leaves this matter entirely to their option and convenience.

Resolved, That this General Conference is greatly indebted to Dr. Thomas O. Summers and his able assistant secretaries, including the efficient stenographer and reporter for their faithfulness in reporting the proceedings of this session of the Conference, and for the correctness with which the minutes have been kept.

Resolved, 1. That we, the members of this General Conference, hereby tender to the authorities and citizens, the churches and pastors of Atlanta, our hearty thanks for the kind, generous and delightful manner in which they have received and entertained us in their hospitable homes and churches.

2. That our thanks are due to the various railroad officials for reduced fares; to the reporters of the Daily Constitution (Atlanta), and the Morning News (Savannah), as well as to the Daily Christian Advocate for faithful reports and kindly notices; and to Mr. Stewart and assistants for constant attentions.

Resolved, That the book agent, with the approval of the book editor, the Book Committee and one of the bishops, be allowed to publish, at pleasure, in the interest of the General Conference, a small hymn or song book, suited to revival, prayer and social meetings.

Resolved, That the action of this Conference in refusing to adopt Report No. 7 on Revisal touching dancing and other sinful amusements, is not to be understood as giving encouragement to the practices heretofore condemned, but simply as a declaration of the judgment of the Conference that the general rule which forbids the "taking such diversions as cannot be taken in the name of the Lord Jesus," as explained and applied in the addresses of the bishops in 1870 and 1871, which were adopted by the General Conference, is the law of the church on these subjects; and is sufficient, if faithfully enforced, to correct the evils complained of in said report.

The minutes were read and confirmed.

The time of adjournment having arrived, the chair called on the venerable senior Bishop to lead in prayer, which he did in a most impressive manner. The doxology was sung. The benediction was pronounced by Bishop Wightman, and this closed the eighth session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; the next session to be held in Nashville, Tenn., on the first Wednesday in May, 1882.

THE FISH. BEAVERS.—York Co. beavers are sagacious animals. A man from Nankawick, hunting beaver, recently came upon a lagoon which showed marks of having been lately dammed up by these industrious creatures. Leaving his ax near a beaver-house, the trapper proceeded to explore the region round about; but on returning in about an hour no ax was to be found. This mysterious disappearance puzzled him; but his astonishment burst into positive alarm when, going to the foot of a large juniper tree, no trace could be seen of his camp kettle and provisions. Faint from hunger and fatigue, he found his way to the edge of the pond, where a small black object, gliding over the surface of the water, attracted his attention. Closer inspection revealed a large beaver swimming off with the camp-kettle in his mouth. The disgusted trapper slowly left the fated spot, minus ax, kettle and a good dinner carried off by the beavers. Whether the beavers sunk the ax in the middle of the pond or conveyed it to a place of safety is, of course, unknown; but from the method of their operations he firmly believes that they made sure of the ax first, knowing that it was the instrument with which he designed destroying their homes. The kettle, which seemed the more harmless and inoffensive weapon, they left till the last.—St. John's N. B. Telegraph.

HOW TO RUIN A SON.—1. Let him have his own way.

2. Allow him free use of money.

3. Give him full access to wicked companions.

4. Call him to no account of his evenings.

5. Furnish him with no stated employment.

Pursue either of these ways, and you will experience a most marvelous deliverance, or will have to mourn over a debased and ruined child. Thousands have realized the sad result, and have gone sorrowing to the grave.

Where you must watch, where you must see that you maintain power, is at the sources.

Call to the Ministry.

"Inquirer" requests an editorial on the nature and evidences of a genuine call to the sacred office of the ministry. First of all, is the call to be a Christian—a call which is out of darkness into God's marvelous light? The converted man must be a worker in the church. "Lord, what will thou have me to do?" is the earnest inquiry of every child of God. It is needful that some should give themselves wholly to the ministerial and pastoral office. It is God's exclusive prerogative to call men to this duty. Thus he called the prophets, the apostles and the evangelists, and ministers of whom we have knowledge in the pages of inspiration. It is still for the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers.

We must say, then: A call to preach is of God, and of God in a peculiar sense. In a certain sense every duty is laid upon the Christian by a divine vocation. He does what he believes to be in accordance with the will of God. This principle governs him in his business and in all his activities in the church. But with reference to the ministry there is a special divine call to a specific work, which involves fearful responsibilities, and separates him from secular pursuits. To this there must be the inward moving of the Holy Spirit. The conviction fastens itself on the mind—the impression is strong and clear to our own consciousness. It is made the subject of much thought and prayer. There is, perhaps, a disposition to throw it off. We have and other plans, and do not like to surrender them. But the conviction follows us—is present in all our thoughts.

If the call be genuine, the way to its fulfillment will be opened by the Divine Providence. The qualifications necessary, such as education, physical ability and endowments, and aptness to teach, will harmonize with the objects of the ministry. In the matter of education, the preparation may come after the call, but the gifts of speaking and of teaching must be already present in some degree. Our old Methodist rules are good ones by which the church tries those who profess to be moved by the Holy Ghost to preach: "1. Do they know God as a pardoning God? Have they the love of God abiding in them? Do they desire nothing but God? Are they holy in all manner of conversation? 2. Have they gifts as well as grace for the work? Have they, in some tolerable degree, a clear, sound understanding, a right judgment in the things of God, a just conception of salvation by faith? Do they speak justly, readily, clearly? 3. Have they fruit? Are any truly convinced of sin and converted to God by their preaching?"

This last question implies that the candidate has already tried his calling by exercising his gifts, and that there may have been failure as to the fruit. It is a rule that will be applied judiciously by those who sit in judgment on others, and most young preachers will need guidance and advice in its application to themselves. It is supposed that all the other tests have been met so far as to justify entrance upon the work of preaching as a local licentiate at least, and that the conversion of souls is the crowning evidence of the genuineness of the call. "Inquirer" and many others who are concerned about a call to the ministry have not gone so far as this, and for them questions first and second are applicable. While they are laid down for the guidance of the church, they are also valuable for the instruction of those who may feel that they are called to preach. A young man may not be the best judge of his own gifts and of his own qualifications, but these rules will be found helpful in self examination.

Usually a genuine call to preach comes from within rather than from without. The initial movement thereto is of the Holy Ghost, and the first impression of any force or authority must be developed in the consciousness by the voice of the Spirit. Devout and fond parents sometimes are in advance of the divine method; and admiring friends and over-hasty advisers seek to impress the young man with convictions which they entertain for him. These influences are not without their value when they coincide with the inward personal call, but through them many have been led to assume ministerial vows who were never called of God. Does the call come from within, and are the impressions of others only confirmation of convictions which the Spirit has previously wrought in the heart? It will not do to relegate the call to the judgment of others. This may come in to strengthen the conviction, but, if made the original and foundation of it there is danger. While the call, to be genuine, must come from within, there will be a spirit of docility in submitting our convictions to the advice of godly persons and to the judgment of the church.

Young men who feel called to preach cannot too carefully scan their motives. The eye must be single. If they desire anything but God, if they are impelled by other considerations than a burning love for souls, if the work is secondary and a livelihood first, they had better turn to other pursuits. Is the purpose to be a faithful and useful minister of Christ? Has all that this implies been well considered?—the renunciation of those pursuits that may bring wealth and worldly consideration, the trials and probable poverty and inconveniences of a preacher's lot. It takes a genuine call, divinely attested and sealed by fruit, and accompanied with deepest spirituality and consecration, to carry the preacher securely through the obstacles that beset his path.

Men are in the ministry who have no business there. They would do the church a service by turning to something else. In some instances they were mistaken as to their call, and the church erred in yielding to their importunities. In other cases the call may have been of God, but there has been indolence, loss of spirituality, and other kinds of unfaithfulness. On the whole, we are gratified that there is inquiry on the subject. There is occasion for great carefulness on the part of those who feel it to be their duty to preach, and of equally great carefulness on the part of those who must judge of their qualifications.

The committee of the House of Representatives, popularly known as the Potter investigating committee, which was appointed to inquire into the reported frauds perpetrated in Florida and Louisiana at the late presidential election, has been at work for ten days or more. We do not believe that there is any purpose or desire on the part of the Democrats to disturb the title of Mr. Hayes to the presidency. This was settled by Congress through the commission, and is not questioned by nine tenths of those who believe that the count for Hayes in Louisiana was fraudulent. The exposure of these frauds may be for merely political purposes, and for effect upon the fall elections; or it may be regarded as due to the truth of history and to the future well-being of the country that the facts should be made known, and that the perpetrators of a great crime should be made to bear the odium which justly attaches to their conduct. People may differ as to the wisdom and expediency of this investigation, but the charge of conspiracy and revolution is evidently a partisan clamor, gotten up to divert any damaging disclosures that may be made. The religious press of the Methodist Episcopal Church, true to its political instincts, joins loudly in this line and cry about revolution and the nearness of another civil war. There is a tremendous stake in the coming election. It is no less than the control of the House of Representatives; and the effect of an investigation of Republican frauds must be met and overcome in some way. The question is not as to Mr. Hayes' title, nor is there any purpose of revolution or civil war. It is simply which party shall preponderate in the next Congress. All this ado about conspiracy, revolution, civil war, is a mere pretext and sham, designed to fire the Northern heart, and to rally the people to the Republican standard. Whatever may be the outcome of this investigation business, we have no idea it will lead to another civil war.

The European Congress, which has been so long contemplated, is actually to meet at this date. The treaty between Russia and Turkey is to be submitted for consideration, and the affairs of Turkey to be adjusted. This is supposed to mean peace, as neither Turkey nor Russia will be likely to venture on armed opposition to united Europe. None care much for Turkey, except as her national existence becomes a necessary check to the ambitious projects of the Czar, and serves to preserve the liberties of Europe, and to protect the British empire in India. Napoleon declared at St. Helena that Constantinople was the empire of the world. No great power can be permitted to occupy it, and hence it must be left in possession of Turkey.

It is now clearly manifested that this second attempt on the life of the Emperor William has its inspiration in the socialistic organizations. As this organization is nearly world-wide, and exists in more or less force in every civilized country, the alarm is correspondingly great. It not only threatens the peace of Europe, but it is a growing element of trouble in the United States. It is assuming such formidable proportions that it will at no distant day become the great political and social problem of this country. The virtue of our people and the strength of our institutions will be tested by it as nothing else ever has tested them. The capacity of a people for self-government will be either vindicated or finally exploded whenever the Commune, fully developed, stands face to face against the established order.

The camp meeting at Seashore camp ground begins on Wednesday, July 10, and will continue eight or ten days. Lodgings and meals can be obtained at reasonable rates. A number of new tents have been built this year, and a large attendance of tenters is expected. Transient visitors will be supplied with cots, and good, substantial fare. If possible, it is always best to tent, and to remain on the ground during the meeting. Ministers will be provided for, as heretofore. A cordial invitation is extended to all. The grounds are much improved, and more beautiful than ever. Let our Christian friends remember this meeting in their prayers. May the approaching meetings be better than any that has preceded it.

Dr. Fitzgerald, the recently elected editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, has returned to California on business. He expects to be at his post in Nashville in a short time. In the meantime Dr. Summers continues in charge.

The Publishing Committee of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE will hold its annual meeting at the Seashore camp ground on Friday morning, July 12 at nine o'clock.

Address of Rev Dr Douglas.

The following address was delivered before the General Conference by the Rev. Dr Douglas, fraternal messenger from the Methodist Church of Canada:

Honored Fathers and Brethren: In response to the call of the chair I count myself happy in being permitted to stand on the sacred soil of Georgia—sacred because of its Methodistic history—and to look into the honest eyes of those men who have uplifted the banner of old Methodism throughout this great land of the South.

It has been to me, sir, a source of sincere regret that my co-delegate, the Hon. Justice Wilmot, now in New Brunswick, has been prevented from appearing with me on this occasion. My regret arises from the fact that whatever of failure may mark my representation of the church whose commission we bear, ample compensation would have been found in the fullness and accuracy of his.

We have come, sir, from the land beyond the lakes—from the valley of the lower St. Lawrence—where the borealis tastes in spective lights athwart the darkness of the sky, where the mists, like the tented fields, hang around the shores of old Acadia. We have come as forerunners of what I trust will be a long succession of friendly delegations (applause) down to the later ages and generations. We have come to you bearing the greetings of one thousand ministers and many thousand members, who hold with you a like precious faith and a like blissful experience of our common Christianity. (Applause). Though we bring no alabaster-box of precious ointment to break in your midst, we bring, we trust, that which is better—loyalty of heart to our Master divine, and sincere brotherly affection, which rejoices to hail you as companions in the tribulation of the Kingdom and patience of Jesus. (Applause.)

Mr. President, as the address intimates, some four years ago the development of our church in ever-widening fields demanded a new autonomy. At the meeting of our first General Conference we rejoiced to welcome your honored brother (Rev. Dr. Sargent, on the platform) in our midst, whose graceful urbanity, sagacious and sportive eloquence are an inspiration and a joy. Though he did not appear in our midst as your official representative, yet he tendered to us a semi-official invitation—a response which is our presence in your midst to day—an expression of our church's desire for fraternal union. (Applause.)

The Methodist Church of Canada, rough handed but leal of heart, as the Scotchman says, "has fallen in love with the fair maid of the Methodist Church South." (Great laughter and applause.) In the language of the old song: "We have come a-wooing, and to join hands till death us do part." (Applause). I hope to join in aspiring to higher consecration and sublimer endeavors to spread scriptural holiness over this grand American continent. (Applause.)

It is, sir, perhaps right that you men in the far South should once for all have a statement of the characteristics of the great field which God hath given us to cultivate. The field of the Methodist Church in Canada stretches from the summer isles of the Bermudas, off the Carolina coast, to the bleak shores of Labrador, and from where the rude Atlantic lifts its high and stormy billows against the granite cliffs of New Foundland to where the great Pacific rolls up its placid tides to kiss the sandy shores of green Vancouver's Islands. (Applause.)

In this vast territory, the area of which comprehends the half of this continent, we have a series of provinces, all of which rival those kingdoms and nationalities in areas which, for eight hundred years, have controlled the destinies of the Old World. If we begin on the sun-rise side of the continent, we have the island of New Foundland, which is as large as the combined kingdoms of Denmark, Sweden and Norway, the old Scandinavian home of the Norsemen, who delighted to sniff the brine. Though bleak in its clime, and surrounded with stormy seas, yet here the Methodist Church of Canada has planted a Conference, which holds nearly one-half of the Protestant population of that island. And of a magnificent band of consecrated men who inhabit that inhospitable coast, if time would permit, I could tell tragic tales, matching the heroic sacrifices of the most heroic period of the Methodist Church. They, with jubilant spirit, preached the old gospel around the headlands to the fishermen of the Island of New Foundland. (Applause.)

Coming to the mainland, we have the Province of Nova Scotia, which is larger than old Scotland—Scotland, which, the scholars know, has done the metaphysical thinking for the world for one hundred and fifty years. (Laughter and applause.) In this peninsula of Nova Scotia, with its shore-line of three thousand miles, and whose hardy sons are commanders on every sea, our church has formed another Conference, with some one hundred and twenty ministers, and holds the Protestant population of some one fifth the entire representation.

I rejoice sir (addressing Gov. Colquitt, of Georgia, on the platform) to see that God has lifted you up to these dignities, social and political, in the great commonwealth of Georgia. I bowed with thankfulness when told of the Methodist traditions of the chief magistrate of the State.

I say with pleasure that in Nova Scotia the refined and cultured status of Methodism has scarcely a peer in any church in the Dominion of Canada. (Applause.)

Passing to the Province of New Brunswick, we have an area larger as the Kingdoms of Holland and Belgium. This province was presided over by Judge Wilmot, governor for a term of years.

I rejoice to say we hold that gem of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, Prince Edward's Island, as large as the old Grand Duchy of Parma. Nowhere is Methodism more jubilant, and leading a more triumphant career. (Applause.) Here we have our third Conference, of one hundred and twenty ministers, and holding one-fifth of the Protestant population.

Coming to my own province, the great Province of Quebec, with an area as large as the entire republic of France, though it running the rival of your Mississippi—the noble St. Lawrence. Few have comprehended the magnitude of that stream—its tributaries rivaling the most historic rivers of the Old World. If you take the Ottawa you have a river longer than the Rhine, mightier than the Danube, and pouring out more water than the Nile or the Ganges—draining an area of the province eight times the size of Vermont, or twelve times that of Massachusetts, and capable of sustaining a population of eight millions, while it has the finest pineries in the world. The population of the Province of Quebec comprehends one and a half million, and a quarter are of French origin. It is my sorrow to say that in that great province we have one of the most aggressive and defiant types of Romanism on the face of the earth. When the country was conquered from the French, the over-generous instincts of the conqueror forgot the claims of posterity, and perpetuated those fatal feudal institutions. It is the misfortune of this province to be the only spot on the American continent where the church can tithe the land, and the right hand of the governing power enforce the claim. As a result of this power, the country is impoverished and the church is enriched. In the very city from which I have come we have some of the most colossal church edifices on the continent, some holding audiences of ten thousand, on whose frescoed walls may be seen copies of the grand conceptions of Raphael and Correggio—conceptions which were to the Latin world an inspiration and a song before the art of printing was discovered, or before the "schoolmaster was abroad," or modern literature was born.

It is from this standpoint that you will pardon me for a personal appeal. Coming, as I do, from the land where despotic Romanism tramples intelligence in the dust, you will pardon me if I cry in the ears of you men of the South that ceaseless vigilance is the price of spiritual liberty from the despotism of Rome. (Great applause.) We have heard afar of the hierarchy relative to the great land of the South. We have found out in the Province of Quebec the purposes of that mighty and overwhelming power. Let me say to you that the policy which is begun is to sap and mine, to open the galleries below in the lower strata of society. Thus, little by little, through your universal suffrage, they will become the political controllers of the great land of the South. (Sensation.) Allow me, then—let one who for forty years and more, has stood under the shadow of this mighty despotism—to cry: Beware! beware! (Applause.)

In the Province of Quebec we have our fourth Conference—two hundred ministers and one-sixth of the Protestant population. We bespeak for them your sympathy. In spite of the sacrifices and ostracisms to which our men, especially our French ministers, are subjected they are going to succeed in upholding the ensign in the most Catholic land of this continent. (Applause.) I say even in the South that Ontario is one of the fairest lands on the face of the earth. By the genius of Dr. Ryerson—who assured me that but for his great age he would have been happy to have been with you, (applause)—by the genius of Ryerson, thirty years a minister and superintendent of public education, one of the finest school systems in the world has been inaugurated. He took the salient points of the German system, the popular power in the American system, and the discipline of the English high school system of education, combining, harmonizing and blending them so that it gives the son of the lowest man in the land an education that will admit him into any university. (Applause.)

In this province Methodism has been grandly triumphant. Here we have two Conferences of impressive power, comprehending six hundred ministers, and over one-third of the entire population of the intelligent Province of Ontario.

And now we sweep out into the great Northwest. I will summarize by naming the Province of Manitoba, the Province of Keewatan, the Province of Saschatawan. The reporters will please spell right here. (Great laughter.) They are in the heart of the continent. The Saschatawan is a navigable river of one thousand miles, and there are coal fields three hundred miles long, with almost the deepest strata on the continent of any known to the science of geology.

This vast area is as large as the empire of European Russia. Its lakes are unnumbered—its rivers unknown to song. Already the vanguard of a mighty population are coming in to take possession of this fertile land. Some are here whose young eyes shall see it—when the earth will tremble with the tread of the free-born millions in that vast region. (Applause.)

Passing beyond the mountains, we have the British Columbia and last, but not least, the green Isle of Vancouver, which almost rivals in area "that Emerald isle of the sea," which has given forth more poetry, inspiration and song unsurpassed. Bishop Kavanaugh, than any on earth. (Laughter and applause.)

I say this because one of my allegiances is with the Irish. Throughout this vast area we have established missions which will become wider for Conferences in the coming years.

Now, sir, before dismissing this department of my subject, I will say that I stand in your midst with a proud mable pride. Though the Methodist Church of Canada came after the Anglican Church, and after the manly Presbyterian, yet it is not unbrotherly to say that more sing the songs of Wesley and hold to the Methodist Church of Canada than to any other Protestant Church in the Dominion of Canada. The honor of founding the Methodist Church of Canada belongs equally to the Methodism of the motherland and the Methodism of the great republic. Ever green shall be the memory of those men who, when my venerable friend (Dr. Lovick Pierce) was younger, or a little before him crossed the great lakes and went out into the trackless wilderness, seeking the lost sheep in that land of the North Star. (Applause.) It is a remarkable fact, and we glory in the fact, that one of the first Methodists on the American continent found a last resting-place nigh where the thundering rapids that lift forevermore their voices, and sing their ceaseless requiem over the sainted dead. (Great applause.) Around the names of Barbara Heck, Garretson, Bangs, Bishops Asbury, George and Hedding, we Canadians bind the immortelles of deathless fame. (Great applause.) The ages shall hold the memory of their names and tell the story of their heroic deeds. (Renewed applause.)

While the American church sent out agents into the West, the English Methodists sent to the East as far back as Wesley's day. It is thus, sir, you see the providential condition of the Methodist Church of Canada—aggressive as the American and conservative as the Methodism of motherland—both combined in the Methodism of Canada.

As the address intimates, some few years ago a desire was kindled for organic union.

The Eastern Wesleyan Conference and the New Connection Conference agreed to join their fortunes with the larger Canadian Conference in one organic whole—America with the American. We adopted your scheme of confederated Conferences, with the quadrennial General Conference, perhaps the wisest human scheme that we have sought to perpetuate the Presbyterian principle which obtains in the constitution of the old world Methodism. (Applause.) (Not as though we had already attained, either were already perfect.)

We are still students, Mr. President, as you are, confronting the unsolved problem of how to strengthen Methodism in the cities and centers of intelligence and wealth; how to perpetuate the freshness and power of the old, time-honored class meeting; how to build up a ministry which shall be fast anchored in the fundamental truths, while at the same time it shall spring triumphantly to the upper realms of thought and meet the tremendous issues which are coming upon us. (Applause.)

How, in a word, to bring our economy into harmony with the spirit of the times, that the discipline and power of the church may be perpetuated, and be a growing force in the coming generations. Those problems we came here to study. They confront the Methodist Church in Canada. Our church seeks to recognize its responsibility to this great age and its all pregnant issues. With us in the Dominion of Canada, as with you, the spirit of question and doubt is abroad. Philosophic research and scientific analysis have driven, as far as they could, the plowshare of ruin through the systems of truth seeking to build a monument of victory upon the destruction of old Christianity.

The skepticism of this age is not the roistering folly of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The infidelity of this age comes to us with the pale cast of thought upon its brow, with anxiety in its burning look, and hesitation in its tread, waiting only the admission of Huxley: "I would believe if I could. I find no gospel." or as Schiller in the ultimate truth to which I am being driven;" or as Schiller in his Pilgrim puts it:

"Ah! the pathway is not given;
Ah! though all I cannot near;
Earth will never reach to heaven—
Never shall the there be here."

This specious and seductive infidelity is appealing to some of our best minds, and unsettling some of our most promising youths.

I am thankful to say our church is one with yours in taking higher education under its specific guidance. We have founded two universities and manned them well. Through them a large portion of our ablest sons are passing, enriched with the wealth from a Christian standpoint. They are coming out into the walks of public and professional life, leaving their influence on the side of spiritual Christianity, and standing by the Christian religion. (Applause.)

I am rejoiced to say that the Methodist Church of Canada holds in honor, as you do, the men of the past; and still there linger with us some whose bronzed and worn countenances are transfigured and glorified in our eyes by reason of the moral victories they have won.

It is to their honor to say that the most anxious men among us for the culture of the coming ministry come from this class—both lay and clerical.

Under the inspiration of these fathers of the church three theological colleges have been established through which a majority of our rising ministry pass. It is our ambition that, graced with culture and armed with truth, they may yet hold fast to the enthusiasm of the thunderous legions that are gone, and the triumphant banners of the church shall be the coming generations. (Enthusiastic applause.)

I have observed that in your discussions you are in sympathy with us about literature. We cannot close our eyes to the gigantic colossus whose great tread and searchings is a power for good or evil. For many years we have had book concerns in Toronto and Halifax, under the able management of Drs. Briggs and Nicholson, and are weekly sending out from the press of these establishments our periodical literature, under an able staff of editors, among whom Mr. Durant has won a distinction at once enviable and influential. (Applause.)

No department of Christian work is so dear to the heart of the Canadian Methodist as the missionary department. (Applause. Hear! hear!) This rises to my mind. In coming to the wealthy South—you are going to be wealthy again—(applause and laughter) to say to you: Take notice that we in the dioceses North annually raise one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for missions (applause—hear! hear!) which is a little over one dollar for every member in the church. (Great applause.)

Where is the China man? Yung J Allen, delegate from China. (Great laughter and applause.) Can you raise seven hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars you could establish a caravan of missionaries and go right over and take China by storm. (Loud applause and laughter.) Our address says (lest I forget I mention it) that we have missions to lone settlers, to the French Canadians—the most perilous and dreadful positions for missionary service. I have been a missionary in the South, and bear the marks of service there. (The speaker's head were bent and his fingers drawn together.) I tell you, dear brethren, I would sooner go to the Spanish Main for the rest of my days than confront the dread forces which reign in the Province of Quebec. (Sensation.)

We have missions to the German. Our most triumphant mission is to the aborigines in the Northwest, of which have come gems from the perishing race to enrich the heaven forever. (Applause.)

Here we are with little difference in our Discipline, and they sink into nothing. I rejoice to look into your manly faces to say that we are one with one in the essential attributes which constitute Methodism all the world over (hear, hear, and great cheering)—one pledged in the solemn league and covenant (you see I am Scotch) (laughter) to perpetuate the influence at all hazards—one to vindicate our experience: that testimony which finds expression in class meeting and love-feast. God be thanked. (Long and loud cheering.) As I came in on Sunday morning I walked here to see the Southern Methodists. My heart was fired as I chanced to hear you speak the same language. (Applause.)

We are one in holding fast to the grand old theology which looks every man in the face, which is generous as God's own sunlight, and says: I have a message of good news for you. A theology which is profound in its spiritual significance beyond the dreams of medieval mysteries, of Bernard, the Montanists and others, which hold to a supernatural union and divine attestation with the spirit of man; a theology which holds to a progressive perfection, to be perpetuated with the ever-ascending power of an endless life; a theology which has a historical basis, which is founded in the logical harmonies of Scripture, and which are believed to be largely the theology of the church of the future. And by the ministry of Methodism, wherever is found the raven-crested brow and a beating heart, which tells of a spirit panting for the immortal good, it commands the intellect, and commends itself to every man's constant reverence in the sight of God. (Applause.)

Now I have done. ("Go on!. Go on!") I am sorry I have trespassed so much on your time. ("No!")

Accept, brethren, thanks for your kindness, which has been tenderly felt. One in faith, one in blessed experience, we join hands to walk the ages. As your Webster said: One and inseparable, now and for ever." (Applause.) I have stood on the hills of a Southern Isle of the sea, and watched the tropic sun as it gradually marched to its seeming rest, casting its sheen upon the placid waters. I have seen it dip into dark seas, and then, as if an angel's hand had drawn on the curtain of the scenes, I have seen its refracted light flash up in a triumphal arch, adorned with brilliant bloom and garnished with gold, till it seemed as if the everlasting gates had lifted up their heads; while far in there was an excess of glory, beyond all comparison. Through the golden archways of the future our Methodism is going on to the brightness that is beyond. Christianity, angel of the morning—I see her skipping on the mountains and stooping down by the ministers of the churches, lifting up our lost humanity, and clasping them to our heart of love. So shall we advance when we have passed on the heavens." (Great applause.) Some time ago I crossed the Suspension Bridge and, looking at the glorious cataract, I observed that the waters from the American fall and the waters from the Canadian commingled at the base, and rose up a misty incense, which curved and embraced and kissed by sunlight, blushed and blossomed as a rainbow uniting the American shore and the Canadian shore. (Great and continued applause.) and, resting forevermore as the symbol of perpetual peace. (Great and continued applause.)

And so I have thought that the Methodism of the South, and the Methodism of the North, combining sympathy and brotherly affection, too, shall flourish and bloom as this rainbow of eternal peace. (Immense applause.) While along the future, thrilling many a right-hearted race, we shall shine as the stars for ever and ever. (Renewed applause.)

Mr. President, I knew you some years ago. I have loved the glory of my intercourse. I shall, with a gladsome heart and strong determination to confront the great enemy of the future till I can cry on the death and rise to the eternal life, God bless you. (Long applause.)

Conference arose and sung, "Send to be the lie that binds," after which the president (Bishop Kavanaugh) said:

Brother, I had a right to be a beloved brother. I am glad that in the wisdom of God you were sent to us. Nothing that more cheers our hearts than the unbending of the religion through the instrumentality of the Methodists. I hope that it is so strong in your own Delights me to know of the success our ministers engaged in this glorious work, and the success of the conditions of recruiting and the revival of the people in them and the missionary enterprises; I thrilled heart to know that the contributions to this cause augmented to one hundred every member. (Applause.) We never forget it. I think, sir, that never will. It will make us more warm hearted and open-handed.

Brother, sir, to congratulate you on your address. (Applause.) You have printed it upon every soul with unbounded applause.) We felt that a revival fire was upon the Methodists of this day. I think our sister denominations are rather persuaded we have cause for exultation in regard to Methodism.

But, sir, I am not a bigot; I cannot be. My history would forbid it. My father was an Episcopal minister, and I lived five years with and was trained by a Presbyterian divine. (Laughter.) My mother was a Methodist lady. I got converted, sir, I did not know my theological whereabouts. (Great laughter.) After months of struggle I landed in Methodism with good humor—the land of free thought, burning love, where I can live and die exultingly, and go home rejoicing. (Applause.)

I have the whole family of Methodism. I would not stay out of heaven any longer than necessary. I want to see a grand ecumenical council of Methodists. (Great applause.) I pray God's blessing upon you and your church.

C. G. ANDREWS, Prest.

Bishop Pierce, and the Hon. Alfred Colquitt, Governor of the State of Georgia, have been appointed fraternal messengers to represent the Methodist Episcopal Church South in the Canada General Conference, which meets in Montreal next September; and the Rev. S. W. Moore, D. D., and the Hon. Milton Brown, fraternal messengers to represent the Methodist Episcopal Church South in the General Conference of the Colored M. E. Church in America, which meets in Jackson, Tenn., next August.

The Mississippi Educational Association will hold its second annual meeting at Oxford, on Friday, June 28—the day following the university commencement day.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE offers the greatest inducements to Eastern and European travelers this season. It should be known to all that this line has been immensely improved during the past year. It has in fact, been almost entirely rebuilt. It has now a fine steel rail track upon new ties, and an excellent road-bed. This enables it to make as fast time as any line to New York, with entire safety, and without the appearance of rapid running. It connections from Cincinnati and Chicago bring among the finest roads in the world. The train leaving at six P. M. one hour later than any other line, makes exactly the same time to New York as its quickest rival. They are in the night service. New York by day line. The Jackson route has but one change of cars, which is made in Pidon Depot at Cincinnati, Chicago or St. Louis.

Passengers direct to New York by the Jackson route pass through the splendid scenery and cool air of the Alleghany Mountains. Those going by Chicago pass by daylight to full view of Niagara Falls, and also have but one change of cars from New Orleans to New York.

SUMMER TOURISTS.—Leaving the Crescent City by its most excellent and newly-equipped Great Jackson route, we pass through the States of Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky, and, connecting with the famous Pan Handle at Cincinnati, we travel through the grandest scenery in America, on this latter road, the finest in the country, we pass, with rapid speed and perfect safety, the beautiful towns and cities of the Middle States, passing during daylight to the degrees and magnificent farms. Sweeping like a bird over the highest mountain scenery in the world, between the far famed Horse Shoe Bend and the Alleghenies, we have the finest opportunity to observe the grandest effort of native the Americans.

The Pennsylvania railroad stands second to none in every respect, and last connection reach New York or Philadelphia in time, quicker than any other route. The result of W. M. Washington is the agent at Southern agent, and can be found at 227 Camp street.

THE TRIUMPH BAND PULLER, advertised in another column will add much to the working capacity of shops, and will lessen the tasks of thousands who are now employed at the press and have much less labor than they have necessary heretofore.

It was overlooked a gentleman near Vicksburg, Miss., who has been at work on it for several years, and on the trial some weeks ago, when it was first tested gave complete satisfaction to experienced men. Parties interested should call at the factory, corner of Julia and Delta streets, and inspect them on hand.

Those wishing a pleasant ride to the lake should take the cars of the New Orleans City Railroad, which leave City Station every few minutes, to the Bay. This is the first route to the lake, and the carrying capacity of the cars is double for any number that is ready to go. More speedy than our Chantilly cars, as the cars are more comfortable and less time is taken in the trip. See time table on this page.

THE air of perfection, cleanliness and home like comfort which is so apparent at the American House, Biloxi, is one of the characteristic features of that well-regulated establishment. To those disposed to renounce this popular hotel offers an opportunity seldom found at so thoroughly a first class house, having reduced its rates to $3 and $2.50 per day.

ANY of our friends who wish to buy shoes of any kind would do well to call on M. Andrieu 159 Poydras street, who will sell good shoes as low as can be bought in the city. Those in the country who cannot come should send an order, and I will be promptly filled. See M. Andrieu's advertisement on another page of this paper.

TREMONT HOUSE CHICAGO.—Parties visiting Chicago this summer should go to the above hotel. It is one of the finest hotels in this country. Jewett Wilcox, the excellent manager, has no lot of friends, and is one of the most popular men in Chicago.

WE REFER parties needing steam engines, boilers, mills, gins, presses, etc., to the advertisement of H. Dudley Coleman & Bro., No. 12 Calhoun street, New Orleans, La., they being manufacturers and dealers of well established reputation.

FOR LADIES ONLY.—Ladies wanting to make money should solicit for Madame Striksmith's corsets. This lady is perfectly reliable, and her corsets give satisfaction to everybody who wears them. See advertisement.

THE STONINGTON LINE.—Take the Stonington line from New York to Boston. It is the safest and best line leaving that city, and arrives in Boston ahead of all other lines.

DENTIST.—Dr. Kells stands high in his profession, and his prices are very reasonable. Call and see him.

THE TRIUMPH Steam COTTON BAND PULLER AND BUCKLER.

THE ATTENTION of the Compressowners in the United States is called to this

NEW AND IMPORTANT INVENTION.

This STEAM PULLER has been thoroughly tested, and has demonstrated the fact that we can apply to Cotton Bands any required tensil strength and BUCKLE THEM AT EXACTLY THE HIGHEST POINT REACHED, and no slipping of the bands through the buckle, all the bands being drawn taut and buckled at the same instant, turning out a perfect bale, and without regard to the size, weight or shape of the bale.

THE BUCKLE is simply perfect; it is cheap and strong, and can be furnished on the order of a day by the million. The old bands are used as they come off the bales, and NOTHING IS LOST.

THE PULLER can be attached to any size or style of press, and at an expense that is slight compared to the benefit to be derived by the compress. It is simple and can be operated by regular compressmen without danger of getting out of order. The speed is equal or greater than ordinary handling.

PRAIRIE WEED.

CONCRETE, CAYUGA CO., N. Y.

DR. DONALD KENNEDY, Dear Sir.—With feelings of profound gratitude, I write to tell you the value the Prairie Weed has been to us in our affliction. Though our son has passed the second mortal care, his life was prolonged, for months, by the wonderful medical virtues of your medicine. The conviction now is, that if we had tried it some time before we heard of it, we obtained of our druggist a bottle, and I am incredibly short time could see its beneficial effects. At that time he was failing very fast, and the anguish of his sufferings was exceedingly painful not only to him, but to our whole little family circle. The continual question harassing all our thoughts was, What can we do for him? All medical remedies and prescriptions from eminent physicians had failed, our anxiety, and anguish were beyond description. He witnessed his suffering, and found the nothing for him that would afford any relief. But when your Prairie Weed came, it relieved him of pain and distress in the stomach, which had always followed immediately after taking even the simplest food into his stomach, and instead of it, and comforting him as his breath the Prairie Weed did its work. Your medicine relieved him entirely of pain, his appetite returned, and food sat easy, until blest ceased. His kidneys, which had ceased their functions, resuming their regular course, and the amount of what they should, and that very much increased, began to flow freely, and the amount of what they should, and that very much increased, began to flow freely, and the amount of what they should, and that very much increased, began to flow freely

The Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, JUNE 13, 1878.

Report No 8 of the Committee on Sunday Schools.

The committee, to whom were referred the memorials and other papers on the Sunday school interests, beg leave to report that they have carefully considered the matters submitted to them, and after prayerful and serious deliberation, have agreed upon and returned to your body several important changes, the adoption of which we have recommended, while others laid before us were deemed to have been amply provided for in the Discipline, and have so reported to your body.

In closing our labors we feel that it is due to the Sunday school interests and to the church at large that, in our final report we should offer some views on matters of general moment to the cause.

Devoutly grateful to the great Head of the church for the remarkable success hitherto attending our Sunday school department of Christian instruction, we feel that we cannot pause for an hour in the blessed work so eminently owned and honored by him.

Respecting the true value and growing importance of the institution we cannot better express our views than in the following eloquent and forcible language employed by our beloved Bishops in their address before this body. They said: "Our Sunday school department has fully kept pace with the progress of the church in every other direction, if it has not surpassed it in all others. Its indispensable connection with the church growth, in the present age, has been thoroughly demonstrated in the past four years. It has replenished our membership with its largest numbers and its best materials, and has assumed proportions prophetic of yet grander results.

"The last General Conference settled, by law, a principle of prime importance when it defined the relation of the Sunday schools to the pastorate by conferring upon it the right of nominating superintendents.

"Our Sunday school literature has bloomed into great beauty and perfection, equal to the most advanced necessities of the cause, and ought, without exception, to be introduced into all our schools. Its new phase, happily inaugurated by Dr. Haygood, has been successfully developed and improved by Dr. Cunnyngham, both in matter and form. The adoption of uniform lessons, accompanied with our own interpretation, is, at the same time, an element of vigorous catholicity and denominational strength. The inculcation of our doctrinal views, by the constant use of our catechisms, remains to complete our system of Sabbath school instruction. It is of sufficient importance to justify a special enactment on the subject by the General Conference."

Fully concurring with those views concerning the excellence of catechetical instruction from our own standard works, we respectfully urge the universal adoption and constant use of our own serial catechisms as the best extant. And while we fully approve of the use of the Uniform Lessons, we repeat the words of the episcopal address: that they should be "accompanied with our own interpretations" in all cases.

Such has been the rapid and encouraging improvement in our Sabbath school literature and standards of doctrinal exposition that we most heartily congratulate this General Conference, and the Sabbath school workers at large, on the complete and unequaled appliances and facilities we now possess. The Sunday School Magazine has now attained an eminence that leaves nothing to be desired, save that, as Sunday schools grow by the progress of scriptural knowledge and religious culture the necessities and tastes of the current age may find its instructive columns still enriched with the freshest contributions of the consecrated minds and hearts of the friends of the young.

And what we say of the Magazine may, to a considerable extent, be said of the other monthly publications; while we feel satisfied that the able and efficient editor will not permit any of them to fall behind these and kindred papers; if they may not really excel them all; and if superseded in his editorial task, an event we should deplore, we trust that these publications—now so essential to our Sunday school interests—may continue to rise in the esteem and attachment of our Sunday schools, and shed their refining and life-breathing influences over the hearts of their unborn successors for ages to come.

Such books, magazines and papers as now teem from the press must lay the safe foundation for a solid and symmetrical growth of education and Christian improvement. The Sabbath school does not aim at a scientific or commercial education, but the taste and desire of learning are cherished there, and the young man who attentively inquires into the import of the words, "The just shall live by faith," will have no opportunity of fanning the dust out of the problems of scientific and secular knowledge; for the study of God and his holy word possesses an inspiring and quickening power over the intellect unrivaled by any other motive.

"The entrance of thy word giveth light" was uttered to reveal the illuminating power of divine truth over the affections, over the conscience, over the understanding, over the will, over the fullness and completeness of the entire man. Hence, to the youth's perplexed and solicitous inquiry, "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way?" the answer comes: "By taking heed thereto according to thy word." It cleanses his way by cleansing his heart; it cleanses his intellect by expelling low and vulgar estimates of man and woman and life. It cleanses his way by sweeping from his path the dust, the smoke, the clouds, that must otherwise hold the true way in deep eclipse; it cleanses his way by giving power to surmount obstacles and triumph in the hour of disaster through the divine strength of the great Redeemer.

In the light of God's word we find a value set upon the individual child—the solitary Sunday school pupil—for which the universe has neither a currency to match nor a power of enumeration to state; and, because of this, Christendom has awakened to the hitherto little appreciated magnitude of this institution, and its best men, like the wise men of the East, have seen its star, and are flocking to the lovely bed of its mighty attraction with gifts, gold, frankincense and myrrh, profoundly penetrated with the belief that the triumphs of the millennium are rocked in the cradle of the Sunday school. Nor can the significance and blessedness of this Christ-teaching school be fully estimated or conceived. In moral grandeur it stands alone. In its power to command the tender care, loving sympathy and Christian affection of the gentle, the wise and the good it has no competitor.

Happily, we may say it has well-nigh girdled the world. It is the right arm of our foreign missionaries. And through all the gloomy dens of idolatry, superstition and sin the voice of Jesus is heard through the Sunday school calling the little children, as of old, to come unto him.

Your returned messengers and missionaries from "around the world" have told you here that only in Christian lands are children honored, prized and loved—especially female children. They have seen the infants of dark, heathen countries sacrificed to the crocodiles, or given as a prey to the birds of the air. But in those heathen lands the teachings of the Sunday school are changing the whole type of civilization and religion, while the spectral horrors of pagan rites and superstitions are fleeing rapidly before the rising star of the "Babe of Bethlehem."

Nor can we doubt that in coming years the divine book and the divine man, each being a counterpart of the other, and either inexplicable without the other, will more and more command the attention, daily solicitude, investigation and study of the world; for the holy book can no more be exhausted than the fountains that feed the fires of the sun, and the Sunday school pupil stands on the same plane. The least one of them, in his little frock, with his first lesson, is now, and ever will be, an unsolved mystery—a deep unfathomed by the sounding-line of any created being. Nay, the loftiest conception of the imagination, in its efforts to measure the supreme One, has not risen high enough to reach the majestic stature of that tiny soul. How blessed and Christ-like the task of those who engage in the work of the salvation of such a rising generation! The work already accomplished is the glad and sure prophecy of future success. The great majority of Sunday school pupils now stand in scriptural knowledge where parents and teachers of the last generation stood, and soon will attain to the place where their teachers now stand. Then the institution will unite adults with children; and parents, teachers and pupils, studying together in the college of the church, will realize the consummation of the labors and prayers of its countless friends. In order to succeed we must make the children of the church realize the fact that their welfare and salvation is the principal consideration with the followers of Christ. From their ranks the church is to reap her grandest harvests, and consequently the ablest and most efficient instrumentality should be utilized in their Christian training.

But let parents take heed lest they commit the error of allowing the Sunday school to take the place of home love, home care and home culture. Nothing on earth is equal to the love of a true mother. Her influence must ever be held supreme. She can form the heart and mold character as no one else can. And it will be a sad day for a mother when her precious children pass her by, and seek in preference the teachings, example and prayers of strangers. Better have no Sunday schools than that parents should neglect the solemn obligation to train up their own children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. And yet there be many parents without spiritual solicitude, religious motives or faith in God, and for their offspring we must care and watch and pray, and lead them to Christ.

The Sunday school aims to lay the foundation of a natural and rational development of the entire capabilities of the pupil. In no other way can the character be formed and maintained. The mind and heart must rise and grow and move together, like the normal movement of a locomotive along its normal two rails. Enlighten the understanding, but refine and elevate the affections. Let intellect and sensibilities go hand in hand. God hath joined the Psyche and the Pneuma together, and the union should never be disregarded. Just now the enemies of the church aim at the dissolution of this union. They are trying to adjust the powers of our dual natures so as to run, if possible, on one rail. Here, it may be, one class accepts the mere intellect alone; while there another relies on the emotional functions alone.

Men given to moral extravagances we deem fanatics. But are they not as truly fanatics whose sole endeavor is to ignore the moral functions of our natures, and run the car of manhood upon the single rail of rationalism? Hence a vast portion of the clamor about education is purely fanatical. It simply means to store the memory, stimulate the mathematical faculties, and fill the mental grasp with appropriate wealth for the enablement of the intellect alone.

In the end, the moral and spiritual functions, having been neglected, depressed and depraved, your half-educated pupil rises on the horizon of society, an intellectual Commodus, with a breech-loading godless repeater on his shoulder, regarding men as mere animals of godless origin, irresponsible life and brutish destiny.

The early impressions of truth and the converting power of divine grace have thus far proved a bulwark of defense to thousands of our people, who learned to love the gospel in the Sunday school, and who otherwise might have been ruined by such ill-directed efforts to cultivate the mind.

This institution is a monument of divine beneficence. It has accomplished a work the most fervid imagination could not have anticipated. Indeed it may be safely said that no improvement in the arts, no progress in the sciences, no discovery in the vast field of adventure, no invention in the realms of mechanism and philosophy have been so remarkable or have wrought half so great a change in the tone and tendencies of our age, the triumph of truth, the elevation of the social relations and the preservation and improvement of the rising generation, as has the Sunday school.

It has brought childhood to the front. Childhood, that for ages seems to have been regarded as an impracticable and valueless thing, except for the mere errands and drudgeries, or the "scapegoat" of personal passion on the one hand, or, on the other, as a rare and beautiful toy to amuse or divert young parents, was in no signal manner regarded as possessing any great inmate dignity or worth. Young children were in the way. Opulent parents relegated them to the watchful care of teachers and nurses, often little superior to those fabled of Romulus and Remus; while the poorer classes sent their little ones to the streets and slums of idleness and mischief, or occasionally to some ex emporized school master, to whom the profound mystery of the "three suggestive R's" had never been fully disclosed.

But the idea that the child was to be taught the love of God, and grow up from tender years a Christian and be a useful member of the church, would have shocked the sense of propriety in all Christendom.

The very clergy of the past, with rare exceptions, took but little notice of children. Cold, formal catechetical lessons were sometimes attended to, but in the same spirit, and with no aim at higher results, as a rule than when the multiplication table or the history of the country were the subjects of study. The heart of the modern church has been renovated, and childhood has been taken into its embrace, its sympathies and yearning love.

While the old stilted style of preaching to those of ripe and advanced years alone has yielded, in some degree, to the demands of the "lambs of the flock" for their share of pulpit instruction, is not something more due to the children from the pulpit? Can sermons be more profitably addressed to the old and comparatively indifferent hearers of a large congregation? Must ninety per cent of all pulpit teachings be such that the young can take little or no interest in them? We think Mr. Spurgeon eminently happy, in a recent hint on the "star-high style" of many ministers, when he said that "from a want of fitness in the food, and the high places in which it was deposited, it would naturally be inferred that the preacher supposed, when the Savior said, 'Feed my lambs,' he meant, 'Feed my camel leopards.'" An evil of fearful significance.

Hence sermons are too often regarded as fugitive songs to be heard and forgotten, whose aim is at one and the same time puts them under the lethean sod, and crystallizes them into a head stone and an obituary.

In this connection we congratulate our people on the increase in the character and zeal of the great body of our Sunday school teachers. This is a very marked feature of the times. We realize the purport of the prophecy that "kings shall become nursing fathers, and their queens nursing mothers," in Zion.

Men and women of the highest positions, social and official, as well as the thousands of our excellent young people, are constantly engaged on this great work, and regard it as the noblest in which they could engage.

And yet it matters little who teaches, or what proficiency is made in the lore of the Scriptures, if the primary object of teaching be lost sight of.

The great aim is not mere catechetical instruction, however well in itself, but to lead childhood to Jesus—to fill their young hearts with the love of the crucified One, to plant in their tender bosoms the seeds of God's words; that may grow up to eternal life. It is a matter of small importance that a child should know who was the first man, who the oldest man, who was cradled on the wavelets of the Nile; but it may prove a matter of eternal moment to him for a teacher, without book or lesson, to pour into his tender and receptive soul the fragrance of the flower that sprung up at the foot of the bleeding cross. Let the Sunday school unite with the pastors in lovingly leading the children, "the lambs of the flock," to Jesus, the great Shepherd, and the world will soon realize the change, as when the sun bursts from the dark and frozen sepulcher of December, and drags in its train the clustering bounties that give life to the world.

Your committee have been gratified that measures have been adopted for the increase of the efficiency of our Sunday school system, by the arrangement for a committee to assist and sustain the editor of our Sunday school literature, and to inaugurate measures for its wider dissemination.

You have also suggested the importance of organizing missionary societies in all our schools—a measure fraught with the most excellent results, not merely, or perhaps chiefly, to the missions, but also to the formation of the character of the pupil, who will be early taught that it is more blessed to give than to receive—to do good than receive good. Besides, you have urged upon parents and teachers the indispensableness of the attention of their children upon the services of the sanctuary and the preaching of God's word. Better that a child do not go to Sunday school after he is ten years old than that he should, through the Sunday school, be led to the neglect of the public services and worship of God.

May the General Conference date a new departure in the onward movement of this precious institution. Let the Sunday school workers, parents and pupils, take fresh courage, and resolve upon still greater achievements. The world is before them. Millions of children remain to be gathered into Sunday schools, and taught the unknown wonders of the Redeemer's cross. Foreign lands,

"Where every prospect pleases,
And only man is vile,"

call with Macedonian persuasiveness to the young children of our church to help them, and the call will be responded to, and pagan, heathen and Mohammedan empires, be made glad for the coming of the Sunday school evangel.

Then the music of the Sabbath-bells on all the hills and plains through all the hamlets and cities over all the rivers and seas of the distant lands, shall chime melodiously with the music of millions of pattering little feet hurrying joyfully to the meeting of the Sunday school, and thus help in pushing the victories of the cross around the world,

"Till o'er our ransomed nature,
The Lamb for sinners slain,
Redeemer, King, Creator,
In bliss returns to reign."

C. K. MARSHALL, Chairman.
P. GALLAGHER, Sec.

Presented and adopted, Wednesday, May 22 1878.

DANIEL PRATT'S IMPROVED
"Revolving Head" Cotton Gin
PATENTED JULY 15, 1873.
Price Reduced to $4 Per Saw.

THIS GIN has been in use for the past five seasons, and several recent improvements have been added. A tin lap shall friction at the ends of the cotton box, prevents the roll from breaking; and gives a Larger Yield of Lint from the same Amount of Seed than any other Gin in use. The Revolving Head lightens the draft as raises the lint to run lighter with less driving power, thus doing a great deal more work with the same time, while economizing fuel or animal power, than any other gin. The seed being given very close, the length of the staple is increased producing cotton of this season of a greater commercial value. This improved value, given by length of staple, with extra production of lint, added to increased amount of work done, more than cover the cost of the Gin in every bale ginned. MEDICAL.

The German Star in Louisiana.

THE SO-CALLED WONDER DOCTOR has arrived safely in New Orleans with his boat and family. He has made a twelve months' tour through the State of Louisiana to show to the public what he can do with his AMERICAN HERB MEDICINES for the diseased human system and organs. The Doctor is a thorough and experienced German chemist of the herb and vegetable kingdom, and has spent eighteen years in exploring America for the purpose of discovering the most valuable medical herbs growing in America. He has succeeded in discovering the secrets of all Indian tribes in connection with the vegetable kingdom, and thus is enabled as a practical physician, to prescribe these herbs to his patients. The Doctor has been wonderfully successful in the treatment of his patients, of whom he has had in his charge 1,668 within nine months. These comprised cases of sickness of every description and of both sexes. All these patients were completely restored to health in a very short time. Everywhere in the State the Doctor had to promise to establish himself in New Orleans, which he has resolved to do and carried out, in order to relieve, as fast as Nature will permit, the long sufferings of so many of his fellow-beings. None but American herbs will be employed by the Doctor in the preparation of his medicines, and all patients who may honor him with their confidence and cleanliness will be treated with them.

The Doctor has established his office and a Chemical Laboratory, as well as a complete Private Hospital, at No. 104 BOURBON STREET, between Toulouse and St. Louis streets, so as to give to the afflicted from everywhere an opportunity to receive medical attention at his hands. The rooms are all well fitted up, and absolutely under his personal supervision. His terms are moderate. Letters of inquiry (with two cent stamp inclosed) will be answered promptly. Orders for medicines will be filled upon the receipt of the money, and mailed free to any place in the United States. Address

"When the Grass Grows Over Me."

New Song. Who will come above the sighing / That may fill the lonely grave? / From their kissing presence lying / When the grass grows over me.

An attractive melody, sympathetically expressing the feeling of the poetry. It is already very popular.

Price, 35 Cents, Postpaid.

NEW TEMPERANCE CANTATA,

'House of Rechab.'

By J. C. Gutierson.

DEDICATION.

To the Temperance Organizations who have Striven to Reform the Drunkard.

In two acts, and not beyond the reach of similar talent. The scene is laid in Jerusalem. The incidents are derived from the Bible, and present the most powerful and striking argument in favor of total abstinence. The music is replete with spirited effects, disarming melodies.
Full directions accompany the work.
Single copies, $1. Circular, with full particulars, free.

OBITUARIES.

Correspondents, please write names and dates distinctly. We follow copy on proper names. Obituary notices should be forwarded promptly and immediately. Give only points of general interest, such as will help the living. Details of funeral services, and such phrases as 'mourn not,' 'loss' etc., are not edifying. Verses, either original or select, not admissible in this department. Give the locality distinctly and in full. In case of infants only a simple announcement of death, with names and dates, will be published.

All obituaries received are published as soon as practicable. If, after a reasonable time, any communication fail to appear, let a duplicate be sent instead of a complaint.

DIED, on the nineteenth of February, at Hynson Springs, near Marshall, Texas, where she had gone a few days before from the vicinity of Shreveport—MARY BARRETT, daughter of Capt. John H and Sarah G Farrell, in the nineteenth year of her age. We feel as if the angel of the household has gone, such was the beauty and intelligence, earnest, young life. Her countenance, beaming with intellect, sensibility and gentleness, convinced you that she was no ordinary life. With maturity of mind far beyond her years, she was the delightful companion, the hope and stay of her widowed mother, and at the same time the obedient child. Life's homely tasks were never shunned by her, but performed with cheerfulness and good will that, coming as they looked upon them as a part of the work. Her kind and gentle manner endeared many friends. She carried on a correspondence for one of her years on no trifling subjects. Devotional in spirit, the Sunday-school and church were her delight. About a year and a half ago she was converted at the Methodist Church, and sabbath in speaking of her conversion said she never felt as happy as then. Her convictions and deeply religious views were clear. From the first day was ill, which was consumption, I anticipated this issue, and resigned her into the hands of her heavenly Father's will. The patience and resignation of her last days will long be remembered in the household. God favored her life, though brief, was employed, for she made the best possible confession, and witnessed a good confession, and died in that house of many mansions, the Savior went to prepare for her.

HER GRANDMOTHER.

ELIZABETH PAUL was born in Virginia, in August, 1822. From her parents moved to the State of Georgia, and they finally settled in Dale county. There she joined the Methodist Church, and was converted in 1839. In 1845 she was united in marriage to Peter Paul, a local preacher. The fruit of her conversion down to the close of her life she lived an exemplary life. A stroke of paralysis was the cause of her death. She died on the 6th of May, 1878. Sister Paul was a lovely and an affectionate wife. She lived in peace with her husband, living in peace with all men, and was kind to all. As deep as was her silent majesty, so her powerful weight of influence was felt to pierce the surviving relatives to the grave to mourn a missing one. It is hoped that they may follow her example. Two others are with her in Canaan. She leaves a widowed mother, and a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. She has gone to rest, and we hope to meet her in heaven.

D. C. STANLEY.

We learn that Mr. Fletcher, of Texas, was possessed of a very irritable temper. His father intimated to him the propriety of his speaking another to Mr. Fletcher proceeded gently to continue in his service. "I cannot bear your temper," said the butler, "I am passionless," said Mr. Fletcher; "I am no more on Monday." "Yes," rejoined the butler, "but you'll be no sooner off than it's on."

There is more than one of these dwells upon the inspired record which is a great crime to become the instrument of bettering the nature of any of those committed it. The voice of conscience become dead. The self-hate he pushes him on to reach the point where he shall begin to have a deeper respect himself and taste of the like happiness.

Listen to any one's convictions, pray keep your dollars to yourself, I have plenty of my own.

BREECH-LOADERS.
WE take this opportunity of informing customers and friends that the first installment of our fall stock of these goods (unexpectedly delayed a few weeks) has arrived, and is ready for inspection. In Breech-Loading Shot Guns alone our assortment in store comprises upward of 80 different styles and patterns, ranging through every desirable grade. These fresh importations can be profitably offered at less than ever before, owing to present low cost of gold, and sterling exchange, while our entire stock has been marked down to meet the shrinkage in value from decline in gold. Don't take our word for it, but call and see for yourselves as we like to run what we have now or not.

MILK OF MAGNESIA
IS THE best preparation known for all disturbed conditions of the stomach. It immediately and certainly cures DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, HEARTBURN, SOUR STOMACH and HEADACHES caused by acidity of the stomach. The pleasant taste and mild, soothing use of this preparation renders it very valuable for infants, requiring no persuasion to induce them to take it. It positively prevents food souring on the stomach, and will act as a laxative when used as directed. It is also peculiarly adapted to females. The smoothness of this preparation and its perfect solubility are made fully apparent in the following illustrations. They represent a exact part of a single drop magnified 250 diameters. The first the calcined Magnesia stirred with water. The second the Milk of Magnesia now offered. The difference between them is most striking, for whereas the undissolved precipitates and particles in the drop of calcined Magnesia are exhibited with terrible distinctness, the milk of Magnesia has all the appearance of a cloudy vapor, entirely free from the objectionable precipitates. In fact, a perfect Solution.

Be sure to get MILK OF MAGNESIA. Ask your druggist for it, and take none other. It is entirely different from all other preparations of Magnesia. Physicians and others not already acquainted with this preparation can obtain explanatory circular by addressing

COTTON.

The Times reports the cotton market as follows:

The market opened with a good demand, but factors seemed disinclined to sell in the absence of news from Liverpool, which caused buyers to retire from the market, and the sales were consequently confined to 1,400 bales. The ruling at the close was firm.

The following is the official closing of the Cotton Exchange:

	To-Day.	Yesterday.
Low Ordinary	9	9
Ordinary	9⅜	9⅜
Good Ordinary	9⅞	9⅞
Low Middling	10⅜	10⅜
Middling	11⅛	11⅛
Good Middling	12	12
Middling Fair	.....	.....

Sales to-day, 1,400 bales. Market firm.

Tone of Market—To-day, quiet and steady; yesterday, steady.

A TRIFLING PREACHER.—A clergyman once preached a very awakening sermon. A young man in the congregation was much impressed and finding that the clergyman was to walk some distance home, joined him, in the hope of having some conversation as to how to be saved. The clergyman was walking with several others, and instead of conversation turning on religious matters, it was light, and even indecorous. Some years afterward the clergyman was called to see a dying man in an inn. As he entered the dying man started: "Sir," said he, "I have heard you preach." "Thank God for that." "But, sir," continued the man, "I have heard you talk, and your talking has ruined my soul. Sir, do you remember the day I heard you preach? That sermon brought conviction to my heart. But I sought conversation with you, and I walked home with you, hoping to hear something about my soul's peace; but you trifled—trifled—trifled. Yes, you did, and I went home believing that you knew all the solemn things you said in the morning were lies." It appears [illegible] added, but never saw him [illegible] again—no more. [illegible] but I will meet and curse you," etc., before the bar of God." And so saying the man died.

A RAID OF KANGAROOS.—A great invasion of kangaroos recently occurred in various settled parts of Australia, especially Queensland, the animals being, no doubt, driven from the interior, by the drouth and its effects, in search of food. They came in thousands, devouring everything in the shape of herbs or grain, so that the sheep and cattle were often reduced to dry leaves for fodder. The colonists promptly met the attack, in some cases driving the kangaroos into an inclosure and shooting them. In one battue more than four thousand kangaroos were killed in four days.

The grandest office of life is the proper guidance of leisure.

SEWING MACHINES.

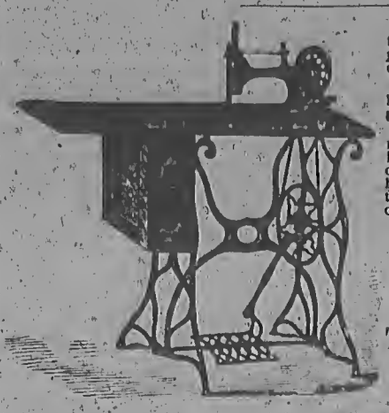
THE SINGER AGAIN TO THE FRONT!!

Great Reduction in the Prices

OF THE

WORLD-RENOWNED SINGER FAMILY SEWING MACHINE!

FOR CASH!!



The Singer Manufacturing Company, ever awake to the interest of the public, have determined to put the price of their Machines within the reach of every man, woman and child in the land.

The Genuine Singer Sewing Machine Is now Offered at Prices Below the Bogus Ones, or Any Other.

The fact that the only Sewing Machine which unscrupulous men have ever attempted to imitate is the Singer is sufficient evidence of its superiority over all others. There is no longer any excuse for buying any of the cheap Machines hawked about the country, with no claim for patronage but their cheapness.

BEWARE OF

Worthless Imitation Machines.

The Singer Will Last a Lifetime.

Send for Circular and Cash Prices.

HOUSE-CLEANING.

The housekeeper giveth a cheerful hop,
And we hear the musical dip! dip! flap
Of the moisty, misty, maddening mop,

And in the maddening horrors rush
All want our souls at the sandy gush
Of the slippery, slimy scrubbing-brush.

From early morn till evening gloom
We hear the scratching in hall and room
Of the boisterous, hustly-bobbing broom.

And now there cometh a woesome wail—
That augurs a generally rusty gale
From a man with his leg to the scrubbing-pail.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—The steamer Oceanic, from Hong Kong, via Yokohama, bringing 575 Chinese passengers, arrived here to-day, with Hong Kong advices to May 8, and Yokohama advices to May 20.

While the famine continues to devastate the northern provinces of China, great destruction of life and property has been caused in the south by heavy floods.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The Judiciary Committee of the House to-day, by a vote of 8 against 1 decided to report a resolution asserting in substance that the Forty Fourth Congress was the properly constituted body to count the votes and declare the result of the presidential election, and that no subsequent Congress has the power to reverse the action thus taken, nor can Congress confer powers upon the Supreme Court or any other to reopen questions which have thus been settled.

GALVESTON, June 11.—A special to the News from Laredo says: A courier brought news yesterday to the effect that Col. Alegria and 150 government troops attacked 200 revolutionists under Garcia, Ayala, at a place called Los Ladore, forty miles south of New Laredo, and after a severe engagement completely routed them, taking many prisoners, and capturing arms, horses, etc. Many were killed and wounded on both sides, but details are wanting. There is great rejoicing in New Laredo over the above news. The revolution is regarded as a complete failure in this section.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Mr. Bryant is a comatose state. The physicians are almost afraid to give him nourishment. He sleeps all the time.

GALVESTON, June 12.—The News has just from San Antonio says the following will appear in the morning Herald, and is authentic:

A gentleman just returned from Fort Clark says that on Friday last Gen. Marco, commanding Mexican government troops, was killed by Toledo's soldiers, near that place. On Saturday Gen. McKenzie and Col. Shafter, with a strong force, crossed into Mexico in pursuit of them, about forty miles north of Eagle Pass. That night they were to return to Texas and immediately telegraphed for reinforcements. Twenty companies of cavalry have been sent to their assistance, also a section of artillery, consisting of two Gatling guns and two rifled guns.

It is believed at Fort Clark that the brigade force has re-entered Mexico. The troops have fifteen days' rations and a heavy train, with two experienced guides. Exciting news is expected.

NEW YORK, June 12.—William Cullen Bryant died at 6.35 this morning.

At two o'clock this morning a sudden change for the worse came over Mr. Bryant, and his breathing became heavy. His daughter, Miss Julia Bryant, and his grand-daughter, Miss Goodwin, Mr. John H. Grahara and his doctors were at once summoned to his bed-side, and remained with him to the last. He passed away peacefully, and evidently suffered but little pain. He has been unconscious ever since the day of the accident which caused his death, except that for a few moments he could evince signs of returning consciousness, and would count one, two, three, four, and so on, slowly, as if testing his memory.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.—Dispatches received at military headquarters here confirm the reports concerning Indian depredations in Idaho, Utah and Nevada. The uprising is considered almost universal among the Bannocks, and it is believed all the military of the division of the Pacific will be required to subdue the savages. Companies K and H, of the Fourth Artillery, left Winnemucca to-day, by rail. Three companies of the Eighth Infantry are en route from Arizona. One company of infantry is leaving Camp Fort Bidwell for Camp McDermit, and all the troops that were at Fort Harney are in motion.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.—A Boise City dispatch, dated last night, says: Gen. Howard arrived this morning, and soon learned the situation, and came to the conclusion to amass his troops at the sheep ranche on the Winnemucca road, and take the field himself, making his headquarters temporarily at the ranche, where he can use the telegraph.

LITTLE ROCK, June 13.—Gen. Bankhead Magruder, the oldest officer on the retired list in the United States army, died at Fort Smith, aged eighty-five years.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Mr. Wadleigh, of New Hampshire, from the House Committee on Privileges and Elections, reported adversely on the joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution of the United States prohibiting the several States from disfranchising persons on account of sex. He also gave notice that a report of the minority committee in favor of the proposed amendment would be submitted by Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts. Ordered that the reports be printed, and the joint resolution to be placed on the calendar with the adverse report.

GALVESTON, June 14.—The News' Decatur special says: Lieut. Peakes' State troops and the sheriff's party had a lively fight with the Bass party, who robbed trains in northern Texas lately, at Salt Creek, in this county. One robber was killed, several horses wounded and killed and the balance captured. The robbers escaped on foot. The rangers are in hot pursuit.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 15.—A cable special from the News and Courier's correspondent, dated Sierra Leone, May 10, via Madeira, to-day, announces the arrival at the former place of the bark Azore, which sailed from Charleston, April 21, with 250 negro emigrants for Liberia. There was much suffering on the voyage, the water having become short, shipfever broke out, and 23 emigrants died. The rest were in good spirits at having reached Africa.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Mr. Morgan of Alabama submitted a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution of the United States, so as to allow the President to approve any part of an appropriation bill, and to disapprove any portion of such bill as he may think proper. Referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The Senate confirmed Leonard as district attorney of Louisiana, by a vote of 44 to 9.

The Senate agreed to the concurrent resolution of the House to extend the session until four o'clock P. M. on Tuesday, June 18.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—A Boise City dispatch says: Gen. Howard's scouts report the hostiles concentrating in large force at Stein's Mountain and Gen. Howard is moving his troops in that direction. Crover's expedition to Camas Prairie, with Sanford's, Summer's and Bendire's companies, will be turned back and go directly to Stein's Mountain.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The June returns to the Department of Agriculture indicate an increase of fully 3 per cent in the area planted in cotton. The percentages, as compared with the average of 1877, are: Virginia, 100; North Carolina, 101; South Carolina, 103; Georgia, 102; Florida, 100; Alabama, 101; Mississippi, 100; Louisiana 101; Texas, 103; Arkansas and Tennessee, 98. Condition of the crop better than in June last year.

The figures indicating it are the same as in 1877 in Virginia, Georgia and Louisiana, and higher in all other States; thus: Virginia, 88; North Carolina 87; South Carolina, 90; Georgia, 101; Florida, 98; Alabama, 101; Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas, 98; Tennessee, 97; Texas, 104. General average 99. The stand is generally good; in limited districts imperfect, owing to the planting of seed of impaired vitality. The season is ten days earlier than the last crop, and further advanced than usual in some districts, and in a few localities three to four weeks ahead of last year.

The low condition in North Carolina results from wet weather and cool nights. In South Carolina and Georgia planting was unusually early, with seasonable weather until the first week in May, since when comparative drouth is reported. In several districts of Georgia the prospects are better than for many years. In Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas frequent rains have occurred in some districts—in some cases injuriously heavy. In Texas favorable weather for insects is reported. The cut-worm was a partial cause of defective stands at many points on the Atlantic coast. In limited areas west of the Mississippi plants begin to be infested with flee—injury very slight; the fields unusually clean in culture, and labor increasingly efficient.

House.—In the Louisiana contested election cases Robertson and Elam were declared entitled to their seats, and leave to take additional testimony was given in the Alabama contested case of Harrison against Shelley.

FOREIGN.

HAVANA, June 11.—The so-called Brig. Gen. Guillermo Moncada and Col. Freyero, with 1 000 men and 500 members of insurgent families, comprising those who were unable to cross the swollen river a few days ago, and being the last of the Cuban insurgents, have surrendered at Baracoa and Cobre.

QUEBEC, June 12.—Laborers on a strike have been plundering Renaud's flour store on St. Paul street, stopping traffic on the street, and forcing truckmen to assist them in carrying off the plunder. B Battery and the police are now engaged in dispersing the mob.

Later.—The riot is on the increase. The strikers number about 1,000. B Battery has been forced to retreat. The riot act has been read. Capt. Provost, adjutant, and some of the men have been badly cut with stones. The mob took from Renaud's store nearly 200 barrels of flour. The military are marching up and down St. Paul street.

2.30 P. M.—The military are attempting to disperse the crowd without avail.

Later.—The riot act has just been read, and firing commenced. One man reported killed, several wounded; several rioters and spectators were wounded. Capts. Short and Provost are badly cut with stones; some bullets are also believed to have taken effect in their arms and legs. Two or three of the mob have received saber-cuts from the cavalry. Everything is now quiet. The rioters have dispersed. B Battery is guarding the Parliament house.

BERLIN, June 12.—The plenipotentiaries to the Congress passed the day in exchanging visits. Prince Hohenlohe and Counts Andrassy and Schouvaloff visited the Earl of Beaconsfield. The Turkish plenipotentiaries are expected at ten o'clock this evening. The Ottoman embassador resident at Berlin will therefore alone represent Turkey at the opening of the Congress. The Congress will choose its own president, but Prince Bismarck will doubtless be selected. At the outset of the proceedings it will be announced that complete secrecy is to be observed. An oath to that effect will be imposed on the printers who are to print the private report of the sittings.

BERLIN, June 13.—It is understood that to-day's sitting of the Congress was merely devoted to formalities—electing the president and bureau. The presidency was conferred upon Bismarck at the suggestion of Count Andrassy, who advocated his election not simply on the ground of traditional custom, but for the eminent services which Bismarck was on all sides acknowledged to have rendered.

The first real working sitting of the Congress will be held on Monday.

BERLIN, June 13.—Soon after one o'clock this afternoon the plenipotentiaries to the Congress drove up to Prince Bismarck's palace in carriages belonging to the different embassies. Each plenipotentiary wore the usual diplomatic dress of his native country. At 2.30 o'clock the flag of Germany was hoisted over the palace, betokening that the Congress had opened.

LONDON, June 13.—The Daily News Constantinople dispatch says 25,000 Russian troops are sick of typhoid fever. A similar disease prevails in this neighborhood.

HAVANA, June 11.—King Alfonso sent a congratulatory telegram to Captain Jovellar and General-in-Chief Martinez Campos, thanking them for the great service rendered to Spain, and expressing likewise his gratitude to the troops, marines and the volunteers.

The Chamber of Deputies of Spain sent a similar telegram. The daily proofs of affection his majesty receives restores his confidence in the fidelity of his people.

LONDON, June 14.—The Times' Berlin correspondent says: Prince Bismarck, replying to Count Andrassy, at the Congress, expressed his belief in the success of the Congress and his particular desire to see harmony established.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 11.—The Russians refuse to permit 20,000 refugees, encamped around Varna and Shumla, to return to their homes unless the fortresses are surrendered. The Porte still declines to give them up.

BONN, June 11.—The Old Catholic Synod by a vote of 70 to 22, adopted a resolution in favor of the marriage of the clergy.

BERLIN, June 14.—The Emperor slept well last night. His condition is satisfactory.

ST PETERSBURG, June 16.—The Journal de St. Petersburg says: The wisdom and moderation of the statesmen assembled in Berlin and of the governments they represent, are sure pledges that nothing will be left undone to secure for Europe a solid peace, to restore order in the East, and to remove all cause of apprehension in the future.

LONDON, June 17.—The Times' dispatch from Berlin reports that Count Andrassy, in private conversation, admits the mobilization of one hundred thousand men to enforce the decision of the Congress.

The Standard has the following:

BERLIN, June 17.—A report is received from Vienna of a meditated attempt on the life of Crown Prince Frederick William. It caused some sensation here to-day. One hundred and thirty Socialists were arrested to-night at the Tivoli Bier Garten, near this city.

VIENNA, June 17.—Dispatches from Berlin to the Political Correspondence say: Austria records with England about effecting a stable organization of the remaining Turkish territory. Preliminary discussions on the Bulgarian question have encountered several obstacles, but an ultimate understanding is certain.

HAVANA, June 17.—Peace festivities continue. Gen. Campos assumed the office of governor of the Island to-day. Gen. Jovellar embarks for Spain to-morrow.

BERLIN, June 17.—The Congress met at two o'clock this afternoon. The sitting lasted nearly to five o'clock. Prince Gortschakoff was present.

A tramp walked into the Third Street Bank, Cincinnati, the other day (if we trust the Fat Contributor,) and, stepping to the counter, said: "I want to know if all the greenbacks have been retired from circulation?" "Oh! no, no," replied the clerk. "There are about four hundred and fifty millions of them yet." "Thanks, thanks!" said the man, with visible emotion. "You take a cloud off my mind. It is so long since I have seen one that I was afraid they had all been retired." And then he slowly retired himself.

Mrs. Clutter's House.

The other day I nearly broke my neck over Mrs. Clutter's tiger-rug. Why are there tiger-rugs, I demand to know? Why must people, in blind subjection to the tyrant Fashion, make their houses preposterous curiosity-shops? Mrs. Clutter's house, and not your ideal, is the true example of the prevailing rage. She has shut out all the light from her windows with horse-hair curtains an inch thick, which once would not have been thought good enough for horse blankets. She has laid down her floors in many-colored rugs so thickly that one might think himself in a carpet dealer's warerooms; and the visitor must be wary, or he'll be tripped up by them at every step. She has covered her walls with gorgeous jugs, bowls, jars, urns, vases, of every conceivable variety, in which, for the most part, ingenuity in the way of ugly design has done its worst. She has hung screens in her doorways, and cabinets over her mantels. She has mounted old brass fire-dogs over her book-shelves, and planted emblazoned shields of metal over her door-lintels. She has bought all the old worm-eaten furniture she could find, and asks you to sit on chairs that were made for ranking before backbones were discovered. She has turned the gas out of the house and illuminated it with painted candles. She goes to bed with a Roman candlestick, sleeps under a Moorish ring, eats off of cracked China discovered in a Marblehead fisherman's cottage, wears a mediæval gown that is all straight lines; and she talks all da of Mellerian porcelain of Roman amphoræ and Etruscan vases; of grès de Flandre, Dutch delft, and Raffaellesque and mezzo-majolica; of Pompeiian and Henri Deux, of Chinese celestial blue and crackle, of Japanese éloisonné, old Satsuma, and Hispano Moresque, of Sèvres and pate-sur-pate, of Chippendale and Eastlake furniture, of Queen Anne and Renaissance and Marie Antoinette and so on ad infinitum, with a skill at spouting catalogues and reeling off names that is amazing. Is this a true house that is made up of curious trifles from the shops—that is simply a chaos of colors, knick-knacks, and all forms of fantastic foolishness? Are there breadth, humanity, heart, life, dignity, intellect, felicity in this jumble of misnamed art? Unless art broadens the imagination and stirs the faculties, there is no excuse for its being; but the art that Mrs. Clutter is prostrate before dwarfs the imagination, narrows the intellect, and impoverishes the whole nature. She has no sympathy with men and women; it is all absorbed by her teacups and saucers. She has no perceptions of life except as a surrender of the mind to her paltry toys, and she is more concerned in the downfall of a cracked plate than in the wars and calamities that afflict the world outside of her bazar. Her children are hidden away in nurseries; she dares not permit them to bring their active bodies and restless spirits into her rooms, lest they knock down her glass screens or break her precious jars.—Appleton's Journal.

Was It an Accident?

Many a seeming accident illustrates Cowper's lines:

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

Dr. Hamlin, so long the head of Roberts College, Constantinople, tells of one of these "accidents." One hot day in July, 1833, while passing the Galatta custom-house, a crowd attracted his attention. Forcing his way through it he saw a poor sailor lying by the side of the wall, apparently dying of cholera.

"Do you speak English?" asked Dr Hamlin.

"Yes," said the man, following the word with an oath.

"Are you an Englishman or an American?"

"American"—another oath.

Worse expressions showed that profanity had become his mother tongue. Dr. Hamlin, after many appeals to the crowd, whose brutal natures were stirred by the prospect of seeing him die, secured assistance and removed the sailor to a house.

For several weeks he was nursed and visited by the missionaries. He recovered and sailed for Boston. On the morning he left he called on his missionary friends to say good-by. Lingering for a moment by the door, he said:

"I have been a very wicked man, Mr. Hamlin, and have done all the evil I could in the world, and now I am going to do all the good I can."

Three years after Dr. Hamlin received a letter from him, which thus began:

"DEAR MR. HAMLIN: Thank God, I still survive the ded! I am here workin' and blowin' the gospel trumpet on the Eri-kanal."

When Dr. Goodell, an old missionary, saw the letter, he asked that he might begin the answer, and, taking a sheet of paper, wrote:

"DEAR MR. BROWN: Blow away, brother, blow! Yours, in blowing the same gospel trumpet, WILLIAM GOODELL."

Twenty-five years after, Dr. Hamlin, while dining at a hotel in Paris, was accosted by an American gentleman.

"I am just from Honolulu, Sandwich Islands," said the gentleman. "I have known a man there by the name of Brown, who has done a great deal of good among the sailors. He can go everywhere and may where with the Bible. He has told me how he was once dying, a blasphemous dog (his own words,) in the streets of Constantinople, and you picked him up and saved him, soul and body. Is this all true, or is it in part a sailor's long yarn?"

What seemed the accidental passing of Mr. Hamlin down a street in Constantinople was the means by which God saved "a blasphemous dog," and sent him "blowin' the gospel trumpet" along the "Eri Kanal," and among the islands of the Pacific. Is there such a thing as an accident in God's moral government?—Youth's Companion.

The Method of Great Authors.

The great French critic, Ste. Beuve, expended incredible pains on every word, and two or three octavo pages often represented a whole week's incessant effort. Gray would spend months over a short copy of verses; and there is a poem of ten lines in Waller's works which, he he has himself informed us, took him a whole summer to formulate. Miss Austen, Charlotte Bronte, Hume and Fox have all recorded the trouble they took. Even Macaulay, with all his fluency, did not disdain the application of the file; and there are certain passages in the first chapter of his history which represent months of patient revision. There is a good tale told of Malherbe, the French poet, which illustrates very amusingly the elaborate care he took with his poems. A certain nobleman of his acquaintance had lost his wife, and was anxious that Malherbe should dedicate an ode to her memory, and condole with him in verse on the loss he had sustained. Malherbe complied, but was so fastidious that it was three years before the elegy was completed. Just before he sent it in he was intensely chagrined to find that his noble friend had spliced him with a new bride, and was consequently in no humor to be pestered with an elegy on his old one. The unfortunate poet, therefore, lost both his pains and his fee. So morbidly anxious was Cardinal Bembo about verbal correctness that every poem he composed is said to have passed successively through forty portfolios, which represented the various stages toward completeness. The great Pascal affords another instance of similar literary conscientiousness. What he especially aimed at was brevity. He once apologized to a friend for writing him a long letter, on the ground that he had no time to make it shorter, and the result is that his "Provincial Letters" scarcely yield to Tacitus, or to the "Letters of Junius," in concise, epigrammatic brilliancy.—Cassell's Magazine.

VITAL QUESTIONS.—Can you say, before him who is the Searcher of hearts—before him at whose dread bar you must soon appear—can you say that God has made you to differ from what you once were? Can you say that God has called you out from living in sin, and made you a sensible, sin-burdened, sin-convinced, and sin-hating soul? Can you say that you have that in your soul which you did not once possess, that will not allow you to go on in sin? When the fear of the Lord is implanted in the soul, that sinner cannot live and delight in transgression and sin as formerly. Can you say that God has called you away from trusting in any works of your own, and that you have felt it solemnly settled as a certain fact in your mind that you are not only guilty and ruined, but lost and undone forever for anything that you can do toward saving yourself? * * * Without a true, sound beginning to a man's religion, even that which God has traced out in his word—the "fear of the Lord," and a conviction of sin—all is false and rotten, and will leave thy soul at last to find that all was delusion.—(Proverbs ix: x; John xiv: xvi.) "I called my soul out of Egypt." * * * Can you say that God has not only showed you that you are naked, guilty and ruined by union to a fallen parent and your own actual transgressions, but that if ever you are cleansed and clothed it must be in the blood and righteousness of Jesus?

Other refuge have I none,
Hangs my helpless soul on Thee;
Leave, ah! leave me not alone,
Still support and comfort me.
All my trust on Thee is stayed,
All my help from Thee I bring;
Cover my defenceless head
With the shadow of Thy wing.

Hart.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.—Rev. Mr. Christopher once called on an aged class-leader, and, after having prayed with the family, said:

"Brother, how is it that you have been a church member so long, and yet are not converted?"

"Are you my judge?"

"I know you by your fruits. You have no family worship."

"Do you know that I have no family worship?"

"Yes, I know it."

"Well, it is true; but I would like to know who told you."

"No one told me; but I know that had you been in the habit of having family worship, that cat would not have jumped, frightened, out of the window, as it did when we knelt to pray."

The fact was true in that case. The brother confessed that he had omitted family worship, because he did not wish to hinder his workmen. He was touched with the reproof, and immediately set up a family altar, and years afterward testified that he found it profitable, even financially, to acknowledge God in the house. Since he had made his religion real in his daily life his workmen had been more industrious and faithful.

Old Bottles.

To the sneers which some men affect when they have occasion to recognize the existence of the Bible, the London Athenæum makes the following vigorous and refreshing response:

A great living savant has characterized the Bible as "a collection of the rude imaginings of Syria," "the worn out old bottle of Judaism into which the generous new wine of science is being poured." The great savant was angry when he said so. The "new wine" of science is a generous vintage, unquestionably, and deserves all the respect it gets from us; so do those who make it and serve it out; they have so much intelligence; they are so honest and so fearless. But whatever may become of their wine in a few years, when the wine dealers shall have passed away, when the savant is forgotten as any stargazer of Chaldea—the "old bottle" is going to be older yet—the Bible is going to be eternal. For that which decides the vitality of any book is precisely that which decides the value of any human soul—not the knowledge it contains, but simply the attitude it assumes toward the universe, unseen as well as seen. This attitude of the Bible is just that which every soul must, in its highest and truest moods, always assume—that of a wise wonder in front of such a universe as this—that of a noble humility before a God such as he "in whose great hand we stand." This is why—like Alexander's mirror—like that most precious "cup of Jemshid" imagined by the Persians—the Bible reflects to-day, and will reflect forever, every wave of human emotion, every passing event of human life—reflect them as faithfully as it did to the great and simple people in whose great and simple tongue it was written. Coming from the Vernunft of man, it gets straight to the Vernunft. This is the kind of literature that never does die; a fact which the world has discovered long ago; for the Bible is Europe's one book. And with regard to Asia, as far back as the time of Chrysostom it could have been read in languages Syrian, Indian, Persian, Armenian, Ethiopic, Sythian, and Samaritan; now it can be read in every language, and in almost every dialect, under the sun.

If the following announcement be true, every civilized masculine heart will be gladdened. Appleton's Journal makes the announcement, with these sensible comments upon the fact announced: "It has been intimated to us, from a trustworthy source, that a very marked change in the fashion of ladies' dresses is impending. This is the abolition of redundant trimming, of gimps, jets, bugles, bends, ribbons, and what not, that our women are so fond of hanging about their persons. In nothing have our women so unmistakably indicated their inferior intellectual plane to men than in their fashions of dress. That they should be attired richly and elegantly is what every man of liberal taste concedes; but that they should carelessly mistake meaningless ornament for beauty is what every man of cultivated taste deplores. It is specially in dress-trimmings that deficiency of culture is manifested, for these outhangings are almost invariably senseless additions. They destroy simplicity and unity of design; they break up lines and diffuse effects; they destroy the nobility and the largeness and the essential character of the dress upon which they are attached. There is another extreme of baldness; but better this than the current taste for a display that is essentially barbaric in its nature. A woman who loads her dress with ornaments, simply because they are ornaments, is actuated by the identical impulse that stimulates a savage to cover himself with beads. The distinct difference between the barbaric and the civilized, in the use of decorations, is that the one is intelligently directed to a unity of plan and harmony of parts, while the other is an impulse that delights in the extraneous for its own sake." Artlessness in behavior is certainly a very charming grace in the fair sex; but the present extreme "artlessness" in its dress is a source of constant suffering to every artistic mind.

ROSEWOOD.—It has puzzled many people to decide why the dark wood so highly valued for furniture should be called rosewood. Its color certainly does not look much like a rose; so we must look for some other reason. Upon asking we are told that when the tree is first cut the fresh wood possesses a very strong rose-like fragrance—hence the name. There are half a dozen or more kinds of rosewood-trees. The varieties are found in South America, and in the East Indies and neighboring islands. Sometimes the trees grow so large that planks four feet broad and ten feet in length are principally used to make the tops of piano-fortes. When growing in the forest the rosewood tree is remarkable for its beauty, but such is its value in manufactures as an ornamental wood that some of the forests where it once grew abundantly now have scarcely a single specimen. In Madras the government has prudently had great plantations of this tree set out in order to keep up the supply.—Montreal Gazette.

GOD'S BY AND BY.

Be quiet, restless heart! The long light lies
In gleams of lingering sunshine on the hill:
The lonely bird, yet silent, twittering as he flies,
Makes silence seem more still.

The shadows deeper grow, and in the woods
The air a listent sweetness holds in fee
As some fond child of yet unblossomed buds—
So like, dear heart, to thee.

Far distant in the soft, cerulean deep
Where the horizon bounds the nether world,
Great ships becalmed, like brooding birds asleep,
Lie with white sails loose furled.

In peace the day is ended, and the night
Falleth as doth a veil upon the sea.
Along its bosom come with swift-winged flight
The gray mists silently.

O anxious heart, how Nature speaks! Her power
How leisurely she uses! How intense
The infinite peace of her most fruitful hour!
How soft her influence!

Time hath she for her storms to sweep the main;
To rock the tree-tops with her winds of wrath;
To bring forth fragrance in the summer rain;
And time for snow she hath.

So, dear, for all thy eager soul desires
She keeps sweet times and seasons. In her mood
Is hid for thee all passion's subtle fires
To refund thy womanhood.

Cease, then, and in this dewy twilight lie
As one who asks not whither, cares not why;
This gift for all holds still the eternal love—
God's endless by and by.

A Wonderful Book.

THE PRIEST, THE WOMAN AND THE CONFESSIONAL.—BY CHINIQUY.

MR. EDITOR: We desire to call attention to the book with the above title, written by a converted Roman Catholic priest. It will accomplish much in the coming conflict—it has done so already. We have read it carefully, and with great astonishment. It should be widely circulated. Every Protestant family in the whole land should have one copy, and every Catholic household two. Louisiana needs one hundred thousand copies of it. That number would accomplish a work in five years that will take, at the present rate of success, Protestantism five hundred years to do. A Roman Catholic gentleman in this place was prevailed on to read it, and immediately ordered twenty copies for distribution. We would say to patriots, philanthropists and religionists: If you want to do a great work, circulate the book. God is with it.

From chapter 1, entitled "The Struggle Before the Surrender of Womanly Self Respect in the Confessional:" "More than once I have seen women fainting in the confessional-box, who told me afterward that the necessity of speaking to an unmarried man on certain things, on which the most common laws of decency ought to have forever sealed their lips, had almost killed them. Not hundreds, but thousands of times I have heard from the dying lips of single girls, as well as of married women, the awful words: 'I am forever lost.' * * * Shame has sealed my lips and damned my soul.' The history of that secret, fierce, desperate and deadly struggle has never yet been fully given. It would draw the tears of admiration and compassion of the whole world, if it could be, with its simple, sublime and terrible realities."

Chapter 2—"Auricular Confession a Deep Pit of Perdition for the Priest"—closes with these words: "Christian nations, if you would know what would become of the virtue of your daughters, if you allow secret or public slaves of Rome to restore the auricular confession, with what a storm of holy indignation you would defeat their plans." Same chapter, page 29, we read the words of one of the fallen: "Twice I have been destroyed by my confessors, and I have known several others who have been destroyed in the same way."

Chapter 3—"The Confessional is the Modern Sodom"—ends with the assertion "that auricular confession is the most powerful invention of the devil to corrupt the heart, pollute the body and damn the soul of the priest and his female penitent."

Chapter 4—"How the Vow of the Celibacy of the Priests is Made Easy by Auricular Confession." Speaking of an incident related in it, he says: "Let those who have ears to hear and eyes to see understand by this fact that pagan nations have not known any institution so depraving as auricular confession."

Chapter 5—"The Highly Educated and Refined Woman in the Confessional. What Becomes of her After her Unconditional Surrender, her Irreparable Ruin." Comparing this with the lower classes, Mr. Chiniquy writes: "I must say that, once on the down-hill road of perdition, the high-bred lady runs headlong into the pit with a more deplorable rapidity than her humbler sister." This chapter, and the sixth—"Auricular Confession Destroys all the Sacred Ties of Marriage and Human Society"—are full of horrible wonders, and should have a tractate circulation. On page 77 we read: "In the Church of Rome the thoughts and desires, the secret joys and fears of the soul, the very life of the wife, are sealed things to the husband. * * * The confessor is the master, the ruler, the king of the soul. The husband, as the grave-keeper, must be satisfied with the carcass." Page 88: "Not long ago a printer in England was sent to jail and severely punished for having published in English the questions put by the priests to the women in the confessional." Again: "After twenty-five years of hearing the confessions of the common people, and of the highest classes of society, of the laymen and of the priests; of the grand vicars and bishops and nuns, I conscientiously say, before the world, that the immorality of the confessional is of a more dangerous and degrading nature than that which we attribute to the social evils of our great cities." Page 89: "The confessional is in the hands of the devil; what West Point is to the United States, and Woolwich is to Great Britain—a training of the army to fight and conquer the enemy. It is in the confessional that 500,000 women every day, and 182,500,000 every year, are trained by the Pope in the art of fighting against God by destroying themselves and the whole world, through every imaginable kind of impurity and filthiness."

The seventh chapter is a strong one—"Should Auricular Confession be Tolerated Among Civilized Nations?" Speaking of the "Latter-Day Saints," he says: "Joe Smith perished when attempting to keep his captive wives in his chains. Brigham Young had to fly to the solitudes of the far West to enjoy what he called liberty of conscience with the thirty women he had degraded and enchained under his yoke. But what is this confessional-box? Nothing but a citadel and stronghold of Mormonism."

We have made only a few quotations out of a multitude that are fully as pointed. Enough has been said to give some idea of its contents. Chapter 8 asks: "Does Auricular Confession Bring Peace to the Soul?" Chapter 9—"The Dogma of Auricular Confession a Sacrilegious Imposture." Chapter 10—"God Compels the Church of Rome to Confess the Abominations of Auricular Confession." Chapter 11—"Some of the Matters on which the Priest of Rome Must Question his Penitents—a Chapter for the Consideration of Legislators, Husbands, Fathers, etc." This chapter is in Latin. I believe the price is $1. It is published by F. E. Grafton, corner of Craig street and Victoria Square, Montreal, in French and English. I will close with a beautiful and appropriate illustration, page 116: "Woman is to society what the roots are to the most precious trees of your orchard. If you knew that a thousand worms were biting the roots of those noble trees—that their leaves are already fading away; their rich fruits, though yet unripe, are falling on the ground—would you not unearth the roots and sweep away the worms? The confessor is the worm which is biting, polluting and destroying the very roots of civil and religious society by contaminating, debasing and enslaving woman."

OBSERVER.

Alabama Conference Journal.

MR. EDITOR: At the late session of our General Conference the Committee on Itinerancy, after inspecting the journals of the several Annual Conferences, submitted a report, which was a gem in its way, and I now propose to pay my respects to that part of it which relates to the journal of the Alabama Conference.

In that report the following errors were pointed out. I quote the report, simply numbering them for the sake of convenience:

1. "Parchments of a local elder returned. No cause given. Page 21."

2. "Deacons of one year. No record of having passed the committee.—Page 102."

3. "Traveling preachers elected elders. No record of having passed the committee.—Page 102."

4. "John S. Moses, deacon of one year, asked for further time to go before the committee. No record of what was done. But on page 107 J. S. Moses was passed to deacon of one year, no record being made that he had gone before the committee."

5. "Are the preachers blameless? etc., page 109. The record is: 'The roll was called, and one by one the characters of the preachers examined, and all were passed.' No names given."

6. "Certain preachers admitted into full connection who passed an approved examination, but no mention of having satisfactorily answered the disciplinary questions, page 184. Same of deacons of one year, page 187. Same of those who remain on trial, page 187."

7. "The journal does not give the number of the members of the Annual Conference so as to show what number of delegates to the General Conference they were entitled to."

Now, inasmuch as these charges of inaccuracy do to a certain extent impugn the administration of Bishops Doggett, Marvin, Paine and Keener, the good sense of the Alabama Conference and the fidelity of the secretary, I propose to review the reviewers, and notice the charges in the order above given.

1. I have yet to learn that a local elder is compelled to give a reason for returning his parchments, or that a Conference or secretary should be blamed for not forcing him to do so.

2. The rules governing secretaries say that an approved examination is "a condition precedent to reception on trial, continuance on trial, and election to deacon's and elder's orders." Deacons of one year do not come under any of the above classes, and any one who knows anything about it knows that it is sometimes impossible to show upon the journal that all embraced under that answer passed an approved examination.

3. Was an actual omission, and the committee did right to point it out.

4. There never was a John S. Moses in the Alabama Conference. There is no such name upon our journal, and if there were their own statement shows nothing wrong on the journal.

5. The report says: "No names given;" but the journal shows the name of every member of the Alabama Conference entered upon the roll at that session, and they had only to turn to it to see who were passed. But here is richness!

6. The report says: "No mention of having satisfactorily answered the disciplinary questions, page 184." The record shows the following entry: "The candidates for admission into full connection came forward as their names were called, were addressed by the Bishop, answered the usual disciplinary questions, and were admitted into full connection." Now that was certainly "satisfactory" to our Bishop and Conference, and I am sorry that "your committee do not concur."

Again, the report says: "Same of deacons of one year, page 187. Same of those who remain on trial, page 187." When the sapient committee find a rule requiring deacons of one year and preachers who remain on trial to "satisfactorily answer the disciplinary questions"—which the Bishop is allowed to put to none save those who are admitted into full connection—I have no doubt secretaries will note the fact. But, furthermore, there is no mention on page 187 of either deacons of one year or preachers on trial.

7. As for this item, it was extra-judicial to note it at all, even if it were true, which it is not; for at each session of the Conference a complete roll of the body is given, and they had only to count it, if they were inquisitive as to our affairs, and ascertain the number of delegates we were entitled to. It would seem they were unequal to the task.

Now I have no feeling against that committee or any member on it; but as I submitted in silence to an incorrect representation of my journal in 1874, and now find it has grown so alarmingly worse in 1878, I think it time to speak out against such a wholesale butchery as is here exhibited, and to insist that it is not right to bring six false indictments to keep in countenance one insignificant one which happens to be true.

R. B. CRAWFORD.

Future Punishment.

MR. EDITOR: As the public mind has been somewhat agitated here of late upon the subject as to whether there be any punishment for the wicked in the future state or not, I would like to submit a few facts, as the legitimate deduction from other facts, that no man can disbelieve, no matter whether the Bible be silent on them or not. I shall take it for granted that there is a God; and I presume that no Universalist will deny this fact. It is true that inspiration nowhere labors to prove it, but the volume opens with this assumption:

1. This God, to be the creator of all things, must be infinite in all his perfections, such as wisdom, power, goodness, etc., to have been equal to the task.

2. If God is the creator of all things, then all must have been made good (man not excepted); whether the Bible states this fact or not.

3. Man must still be good if he is the creature of God, or it must be admitted that he is fallen from holiness to unholiness, and hence that it was possible for him to have done wrong, and by this wrong-doing he has become evil, which is a fact open and patent to our senses, and needs no demonstration.

4. It follows that God must rescue man from this state of things, as he has permitted him "to multiply and replenish the earth."

5. It must follow from hence that the state of happiness which God proposes must be perfect, since the happiness which he lost by the fall was perfect in its kind, and to admit otherwise is to admit the imperfection of the atonement, and also limit the wisdom, power and goodness of God.

6. That state of perfect happiness, if realized at all by man, must be either in this life or in the future one. That it is not here all admit.

7. If it be future it must be either partial or universal. If partial, that destroys Universalism at a single stroke. If universal, that destroys the fall of man at a single stroke, since Universalism and moral agency cannot go together. But this fall of man is a fact which all are bound to admit; therefore Universalism is false. Again, if Universalism be true, there can be no distinction between right and wrong, good and evil; therefore Universalism is false.

Again, if, to avoid this, Universalism should deny the fall, which they are compelled to do or give up forever in despair, then it must follow that man is as good now as he ever was. Then, if God made him as good as he could at first, which is a fact, then man is as good now as God can ever make him; and if Universalism be true, all men are saved and perfectly happy now; and if all men are saved and perfectly happy now (I mean in a state of nature,) then universal salvation and universal condemnation are both true at once; but the truth is that neither the one nor the other is true, as all men are not in a state of nature, and hence condemned; nor in a state of perfect happiness, and hence saved.

Again, let us look at it in the light of nature. No man will deny that the God of all nature is the God of Universalism—if Universalism be true. From hence it will follow that there must be harmony between the two—that is, nature and Universalism; if Universalism be true. Discord here will prove nature or Universalism, one or the other, to be false. There is in all men a desire for perfect happiness planted there by the God of all nature. This is one of nature's great facts. It is a truism.

Universalism teaches that perfect happiness can and will be realized by all as soon as mortal life ceases; and that it cannot be obtained on this side of the grave is a fact; therefore it must follow, if Universalism be true, that there will be a constant craving of and longing after death by all human nature everywhere, in every age; and to desire death is therefore a law of human nature. But what are the facts in the case? Do all men everywhere crave death? No, in nowise; but exactly the reverse. Therefore it follows that if God and nature be in harmony and true, Universalism is false, which is a fact. Hence if a man still persist, in the face of all this array of indisputable evidence, given to all reflecting minds, that the dogma of Universalism is true, it surely has happened unto him as Paul says in Second Thessalonians ii, 10, 11, 12: "Because they receive not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusions that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

T. H. MCCLENDON.

Pastor and Steward.

MR. EDITOR: I noticed in a recent number of your paper a letter signed "Itinerant," in which he lashes "Ex-Steward" and "Presiding Elder" very nicely. I do not know what the presiding elders have to contend with at other places, but here it is a hard matter to get any one to act as steward. I presume the cause is that the stewards have been too much abused of late years.

I think "Itinerant's" plan is the very one for some of our preachers. Let them be their own stewards. Then they will be compelled to visit the people, and if they will not pray with them they will, at any rate, have to talk very pretty, or they will come out very short in their quarterage.

I have served as steward a good many years, and never have failed as yet to pay the preacher his assessment, though several times I thought the assessment too great; but whenever we get a preacher who acts as preachers did when I was a boy, I find it but little trouble to get his quarterage; but when we are so unfortunate as to get one who acts Young American, I only get his quarterage by a few men paying it, who are able to spare the money, and act from church pride.

Yours truly,

OLD METHODIST.

The sanctuary is the house of God, the living God, in which Jesus is ever present with his Spirit, and in which he has deposited the treasures bought with his blood. Here the believer, unlike the Israelites of old, gathers his double portion of manna on the Sabbath day.

Whosoever would work wisely and with success must have clearly before him the ends he wishes to accomplish.

OBITUARIES.

Correspondents, please write names and dates very distinctly. We follow copy on proper names.

Obituary notices should be forwarded promptly and immediately. Give only points of general interest, such as will help the living. Details of funeral services, and such phrases as 'mourn their loss," etc., are not edifying. Verses, either original or select, not admissible in this department. Give the locality distinctly and in full. In the case of infants only a simple announcement of the death, with names and dates, will be published.

☞ All obituaries received are published as soon as convenient. If, after a reasonable time, any such communication fail to appear, let a duplicate be sent instead of a complaint.

DIED, In Hazlehurst, on the morning of the eighth of May, Miss ELLA G., eldest daughter of Rev. H. H. Montgomery, of the Mississippi Conference.

A noble life is ended, and gloom rests upon our entire community, where she was known and greatly beloved, having lived here for four years, engaged in teaching music. Gentle and lovable is disposition, pious and gifted, she moved among us, while the graces of her beautiful character exhaled sweetness, in harmony with the music drawn by her cultivated fingers. Her life was one of usefulness and noble self-sacrifice. Reared in the bosom of the church, she was identified with all the interests of the Redeemer's cause. It was the custom of her family to read the chapter together, selected for their morning and evening devotions; and though away from home, she continued to read the same chapters they were reading, and kept with them all the time. She died away from home and mother, but many devoted friends ministered to her comfort, and her father reached her before she fell asleep.

Dear Ella! Her exalted virtues were fresh and visible, and of her it may be truly said:

"None knew her but to love her,
None named her but to praise."

For several weeks before her death she was animated with thoughts of going home, and the loving hearts awaiting her return. She has now gone home, and sleeps as peacefully as a child, where no vexations or wasting cares can disturb her heavenly rest. She will awake no more on this sin-stained earth, but will live in many devoted hearts. Rest, then, in peace, true-hearted and self-sacrificing friend. You bore yourself nobly and triumphed. Slumber, then, in thy hallowed grave, while thy soul reposes in heaven. She cast the anchor of her hope fast by the throne of God, and her frail bark has swept into the haven of endless peace, amid the musical shouts of the redeemed. Let us all pray that her sorrowing parents and sisters, in this sudden and sad bereavement, may be enabled to lift up their eyes from the gloom and wreck of their hopes, and say, with the Master: "Father, thy will be done."

S. G. WEEMS.

The following resolutions on the death of Miss Ella Montgomery were adopted by the Wesleyan Society of Hazlehurst:

Whereas, Our beloved sister, Ella G. Montgomery, has been withdrawn from our midst to occupy her place in heaven; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while our hearts are filled with unutterable sorrow over our great loss, we feel that she has only left us, to receive the reward of the faithful.

Resolved, That in the pure and consistent life of our dear sister, Ella Montgomery, we recognize a worthy example for us all.

Resolved, That in her death the Wesleyan Society of Hazlehurst, in common with the church and community, sustains a great loss.

Resolved, That we tender the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathies and earnest prayers, and commend them to the mercy of our heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

MRS. S. F. TOMLINSON, Pres't.
MRS. L. M. WEEMS, Sec. pro tem.

ON Dante's tomb is this inscription: "Here am I, Dante, laid, shut out from my native shores." What a tinge of sadness, how unlike the descent of the child of faith to the portals of death: "I know in whom I have believed." "I have fought the good fight of faith." "For me to live is Christ, to die is gain." "I am ready to be offered up." "There is laid up for me a crown of rejoicing." "Since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead; even so, through Christ, shall all be made alive." Well may the Christian, in anticipation, exclaim: "O, death! where is thy sting? O, grave! where is thy victory?" In bereavement the Christian may not sorrow as those without hope. Death cannot shut out Christ's children from their native shores. It only opens the prison-doors of our fleshly tenement and sets the captive free.

So Sister REBECCA WILLIAMSON, wife of Rev. H. Williamson, of the North Mississippi Conference, after more than forty years of faithful, active toil and sacrifice in the Master's employ, was, on the twenty-seventh of February, 1878, set free and crowned a happy heir of immortal life.

She was born in Chester district, S. C. She was married to her now bereaved husband in 1834. They had born to them ten children, only five of whom survive her, to learn by sad experience the extent of their loss. Sister Williamson's character attained a high degree of perfection. Under any circumstances the vigilance, care, self-denial and patient painstaking incident to rearing a large family must beautify the mother's character; but when these services are superadded to the not less important ones of a minister's wife, with the poverty incident thereto, and she performs them as successfully, as meekly and as gracefully as Sister Williamson did, her life is absolutely sublime. As Christian, wife, mother, mistress, hostess, she was faultless. How her patience, under the burdens, sustained her husband in his long ministerial life—too often among those who could little appreciate his calling or sacrifices, and gave little help to lighten the cares at home. As a mother, what a sacred treasure of untrouly fidelity and love she has left her surviving children. In her hospitality, who ever surpassed her? Her memory will linger with us long. Her love of the Savior was sweetly exemplified by her patience, meekness, gentleness, goodness. We are sad to think of the loss to husband and children, to church and community, and the many loving ones who are bereft by her departure. But the other side is all brightness. Our loss is her gain. Thanks be to God, who hath begotten us again to a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. A little while and the faithful husband's work in the vineyard of the Master will be done, and he dismissed to join her, with precious ones on the other shore, and be ever with the Lord.

W. P. HARTON.

IN MEMORIAM.

REV. N. A. SKIPPER was born in the State of North Carolina, August 7, 1799; was married to Elizabeth Terry, December 12, 1830, with whom he spent a long and happy life, terminating in his death, at his residence near Ozark, Dale county, Ala., April 16, 1878. He joined the Methodist Church when about eighteen years of age, was licensed to exhort at the age of twenty years, and to preach in the year 1831.

Bro. Skipper was a model Christian; indeed was he "in light that could not be hid, and the fire of the Holy Ghost burned finally on the altar of his heart." Having a cheerful disposition, and with it a great degree of sociability, the weak and despondent found in him a friend and counselor. Ever ready to labor in the vineyard of the Master, no opportunity was lost to speak a word for his name. Willing to assist in bearing the burdens of others, those bowed down with the cares and trials of this life received from him words of encouragement, and were thereby enabled to battle on with renewed strength. Many, yea, very many, within the circle of his acquaintance can now testify to the help received from him in hours of trial and despair. It was a peculiar characteristic in him to look after, hold up, and succor those weighed down with afflictions when they most needed the help of older and more experienced members of the church. And surely his crown of rejoicing will be bright with many stars. This he lived a long and useful life, and died shouting the praise of God with almost his latest breath.

But he is gone. He has paid the debt to duty, his spirit is reaping the promise: "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." Though the church has lost one of its pillars, the community a good citizen, and his family a faithful husband and father, we would not, if we could, call him back to earth again, for certainly he is free from pain and trouble, and our loss is his eternal gain. We pray the Father of life and Giver of all good that his mantle may fall upon some one who will emulate him in his good works; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Quarterly Conference of Ozark circuit, Alabama Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, That we hereby tender our Christian sympathy and condolence to the bereaved wife and children of our deceased brother, and pray our heavenly Father to overrule this dispensation of his providence to their spiritual good.

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be furnished his beloved wife, a copy to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and that the same be spread on the minutes of this Conference.

SISTER MATILDA MARLER, daughter of William and Sarah Driskill, was born in Hancock county, Ga., in the year 1800; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in the age of seventeen years; was married to George C. Marler in 1827; moved to Alabama in 1838, and from thence to Scott county, Miss., in 1841, where she died, of pneumonia, on the seventeenth day of March, 1878, in the sixty-ninth year of her age.

She was sick for eight weeks, during which time she bore with Christian fortitude and patience. I visited her during her illness, and frequently prayed with her, which she seemed to enjoy very much. On seeing her children weeping she requested them to be quiet, saying that she was prepared, and insisted on their meeting her in heaven, which was responded to by her children. She then looked above, as if there was no more she desired on earth. Sister Marler lived near the church, of which they belonged for thirty-four years, and her house was all the while a comfortable welcome home for all the preachers. She lived right, and we believe has gone home of the blessed. She leaves a number of children and many friends to mourn their loss.

J. N. W.

MRS. EMILY LEE PHILLIPS, wife of Dr. Thomas A. Phillips, of Canton, Miss., and daughter of Esquire David and Mrs. Cipes, was born in East Feliciana parish, La., February 12, 1817; was married in 1833, and died in Canton, Miss., May 1, 1878. Sister Phillips joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South at a camp-meeting near Brownsville, Hinds county, Miss., in the year 1833. Her first home was in Vicksburg, where she lived till 1869, when she moved to Canton.

She had been sick for a long time, and suffered very greatly, but bore it patiently. She often said to her husband that her peace was made with God. Her last words were to her husband: "The Lord will take care of me." She leaves three sons and one daughter to mourn the irreparable loss of a kind and faithful mother. But it is well. After so much painful suffering she is at rest. At five o'clock on Saturday afternoon she laid her in the silent grave, to await the coming resurrection morn. May God comfort the weeping family.

R. D. NORTHCROSS.

ARTHUR FOSTER was born in Monroe county, Ala., on the eleventh of August, 1857, and died, of hemorrhagic fever, on the 3d of November, 1877. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South in August, 1876, and from that day till the day of his death he lived to illustrate those sublime elements of Christian character which we call singleness of aim and thoroughness of religious purpose.

Arthur was a universal favorite, beloved by all who knew him, and by reason of his ever cheerful nature no cloud of despondency could ever rest upon any one associated with him. Of his kindness and obedience to his parents, and his affectionate, loving tenderness to his sisters, we could not say too much. God bless the grief-stricked family.

THE SENSE OF LOSS.

The following lines are carved to Kensal Green cemetery, in memory of "Anna," of whom only the dates of her birth, marriage and death at Funchal, in Madeira, are recorded:

It is not at the hour of death,
While mourning on the parting breath;
It is not while we look our last,
The present all—forgot the past;
It is not while we watch the eye
Closing with death's last quivering sigh—
We feel our loss.

It is not when we gently lay
The loved remains in death's array;
It is not while with noiseless tread
We gather round the sleeping dead,
Or for a few sad mourning days
On what was precious fondly gaze—
We feel our loss.

It is not when love's labor done,
The coffin closed, we one by one,
With trembling awe, approach and kneel,
And on the lid a farewell seal,
From lips that cannot speak a prayer,
To keep the struggling feeling there—
We feel our loss.

And when the last dread, solemn rite
Ashes to ashes must unite,
In sable garb we stand around,
Bathing with tears the burial ground,
While o'er our treasure mute we mourn,
Then, then, indeed, a grief we feel—
But not our loss.

But when a few more days are gone,
And we yet weep, but weep alone,
While all is as it was before,
Save one we never can see more,
While others take that vacant place
So lately filled by one dear face—
We feel our loss.

Amid the year may pass away,
And many a sunbeam round us play
And many a cloud of heavy woe
Darken our pathway here below,
Each joy or grief can ne'er efface
What memory's pen alone can trace—
There is our loss.

The Phonograph.

The phonograph differs from the telephone in being entirely independent of electricity or magnetism. It simply makes a record of the sounds, or rather of the vibrations that produce them; and this record can be converted at will into the original vibrations and sounds by purely mechanical means. Our readers are, doubtless, ere this familiar with the construction of the machine, for no recent invention has been so much written about "in the papers." They are aware that it consists of a mouthpiece with a vibrating disk much like that of the telephone; that this disk has a needle at the back, which each vibration is pressed against a spirally rotating cylinder covered with tin-foil, upon which it makes a slight indentation. The successive indentations produce a spiral line of these indentations, which, though showing but slightly to the eye, are really an exact record of all the varying sounds that have caused them. This is the listening operation of the machine; to make it talk back what it has heard, the needle is made to traverse again the spiral line of indentations, throwing the disk into vibrations similar to those recorded, and thus repeating the sounds.

The precision and distinctness with which every inflection and peculiarity of speech can thus be reproduced are marvelous, and yet no more wonderful than many phenomena of sound with which we have long been familiar. When we are sitting in a close room we can often hear what is said on the other side of a wooden or even a brick partition. In this case the sonorous vibrations are transmitted through the air until they reach the wall. Here we might suppose that they would be stopped or destroyed. What force can the weak air-waves exert against that solid barrier? The slight aerial undulations may have originated in the throat-chords of a canary-bird's or an infant's throat, and will they shake that stout and heavy wall? Such is the strength of those aerial waves that they compel that lumpish partition to sway in unison with themselves. It takes the complicated vibrations, and what is more surprising, it gives them out again to the air on the other side, and this transmits them to our ears. The sounds have lost nothing of clearness in passing through a thick and rigid obstruction, but have retained enough of their original character to be heard and understood without difficulty. Here the wall is a vibrating disk like that of the telephone or the phonograph, a big clumsy one; but how sensitive those undulations of the air, how quick to catch them, to thrill in sympathy with them, to give them out unchanged! If the multiplied and complexity of vibrations in such spoken words can be transmitted without material loss through a barrier apparently so unfit for the purpose, need we wonder at their registration and reproduction by this listening and talking machine?

Our familiarity with these common phenomena of sound renders us insensible to their marvelous character. Miracles that are repeated every day, every hour, cease to be miracles; it is only when they take some fresh and novel form that we see their true nature. The telephone excites our admiration, but the air is a telephone as we have been using all our lives. When it carries to our ears the sound of a distant bell, we must admire and wonder if we reflect upon what occurs. The bell, when struck, vibrates through a mere fraction of an inch, and yet the air-waves, started by this slight motion, roll away for miles in every direction, and repeat effects on the tympana of thousands of human ears. Myriads of these sounds are sending their undulations through the air at the same time, crossing one another's paths in every direction, yet not interfering so seldom that what is known as the "interference of sounds" is one of the rarest of acoustic phenomena. So that the atmosphere is forever a tablet whose network of swiftly moving undulations. It is a telephone conveying millions of sounds at once, without confusion or disorder. All this intricacy of movement could be made visible, if we could see these innumerable sound-waves agitating the great aerial ocean, how poor and mean in comparison would all these acoustic devices of man's making appear! These are indeed curious and admirable, but at best they are feeble imitations of the mechanism of nature.—Journal of Chemistry.

Gossip of the Studio.

Francis Grant, addressing the students of the Royal Academy in London recently, related some interesting traits of worthies at the Scottish capital. Lord Eldon, better known as Sir John Scott, possessed a fine collection of ancient masters, and was esteemed a high authority in all matters of art, and was himself no mean artist. He was addressing a young student, and he said to him, in his broad Scotch: "Sir, do you know" (or rather, he said: "Do ye ken") something, and that is that every picture must have a sun?" The learned judge then paused for a reply, and the student said: "I presume your lordship means a principal light?" "Quite right," quoth the judge. "But, sir, it must also have a moon." The student said: "I presume your lordship means a secondary light?" "Right again," said the judge; and then, fixing his keen gray eye upon the young man, he said, "And it maun hae satellites about the moon," which, being translated into English, means the moon must have satellites.

Now it always strikes me that there could not have been a more perfect and simple description of how a picture ought to be composed—the principal light the sun, the second light the moon, and the satellites forming a smaller light to enlighten the gloom of the rest of the picture. Now a picture may have a great deal of truth, and possibly some taste and refinement; but if not carried out on sound principles of art it will fail to be attractive, and therefore it will be well, I think, for students to remember the old Scotch judge's simple but sound recipe—sun, moon and satellites. I believe the reason why Sir Joshua Reynolds was so true to nature was his method of placing his likeness close to the sitter, and then retiring to the end of the room and comparing the two. Now I am satisfied nothing can be so good in painting as having the object your are painting before you. If a student has to paint the leg of a table, the leg of a table should be before him. Now I remember two occasions that came to my notice when an eminent artist showed his zeal for obtaining truth. I once went to call upon William Allan, who afterward became president of the Scotch Academy, and as I entered his room he said: "Stop; don't move—don't move for the world." I was very much surprised until he pointed out to me a number of broken bits of a fiddle scattered over the floor. The picture he was painting represented a poor fiddler who made his living by fiddling on the violin. Some idle boys had tormented him very much, and on one getting a little near him, in his anger he had made a rush at him and broken his fiddle over his head, and the moment the picture represented was that when the poor unhappy musician stands looking at the fragments of his broken instrument, which is utterly destroyed.

Well, I found that Sir William Allan had actually bought a fiddle and broken it over the head of his lay figure, and then cut the fragments on the ground, in his desire to obtain truth. Well, on one other occasion that rather amused me, I went to call upon Mr. Watson Gordon, who afterward also became president of the Royal Scottish Academy. I found him painting a shipwrecked mariner, and his model was his own brother, a very good-looking young man. He was clinging to a number of trunks and boxes which were tumbled together to make rocks, and I was very much struck by the wonderful way in which he had represented the wet shirt clinging to his skin, and the wet nether garment; for his dress only consisted of a shirt and a pair of trowsers. I could not help complimenting him upon the wonderful success with which he had caught the wet linen and cloth, upon which he said, in his broad Scotch, which I cannot imitate: "I'll tell ye how I managed that." Pointing to a large can of water which stood in the room, he said: "I just watered him with that, and when he got dry I watered him again." Well, I am happy to say that this amiable young brother sustained no bad effects from the two hours and a half douche he received, but is now, I believe, a hearty and happy gentleman, living in Edinburg. But I mention this class of things to you not to surprise you so much as to show you the zeal which able artists display in their search after truth.—Home Journal.

The Person of Christ.

The word person expresses a somewhat indefinable but yet a well-understood and quite comprehensible idea. It is that John is himself and not another, and that Peter is likewise himself, while both John and Peter are distinct and individualized entities. Beyond this individualization of the entity there must be in it, in order to its personality, a rational soul, with self consciousness and affection and free will. Such a being may be contemplated as an intelligence objective to the contemplatant, and capable of thought and reflection in himself, and he may therefore appropriate to himself the pronouns of the first person singular, ego and me, and also claim as his own all the attributes of his being. We accordingly appropriate to Jesus Christ, in his unipersonality, both divine and human characteristics, each kind belonging alike to himself, but, in either case, by virtue of only one of the two distinct natures that unite in his person. Because he was God he could claim to be eternal, almighty, omniscient able to forgive sin—appointed to be the Judge of the world. Because he was a man we can trace him from his birth (in the flesh) through infantile weakness, into youth and physical and intellectual manhood, increasing "in wisdom and stature." We see him hungering and thirsting, rejoicing and weeping, suffering and dying, yet all these things belonged to the same person, because in that personality the divine and the human were conjoined. The person of Christ included, on the one hand, the completeness of the human character, and beyond, and infinitely above this, "in him dwelt all the fullness of the godhead bodily"—that is, in his personal embodiment.

Among others of the spiritual attributes of manhood are free will and self-consciousness, both of which must be predicated of Christ's humanity. These attributes also belong to the godhead; and the conjunction of the two natures in the person of Christ, therefore, presents him with a double consciousness and two wills, each cognizing or acting for itself. Christ's human righteousness, being that of a free moral agent, was something more than holy impulses, and sanctified desires, and heavenward tendencies of soul. It included also and pre-eminently the godly obedience of a freely determining moral agency—a human will attuned to perfect harmony with the divine. In this consisted his exalted virtue. It was especially in this that he "grew in favor with God." It was because of the completeness of the accord of his interior will—the soul's moral self-hood—with the mind and purposes of eternal godhead, that the Father was "well pleased" in him. All devout contemplation of Christ's exalted goodness must recognize his human will, ever active, ever self-determining, and moving by its inherent tendencies and spontaneous proclivities in unison with the divine will. This alone can give a proper sense to his numerous professions of obedience to, and his delight in, the will of God. This view of Christ's free-will also shows most clearly the value of his perfect obedience. The task assigned him was, to the last degree, painful and laborious. Yet at every stage he accepted it voluntarily, and endured it of choice to the end. His sufferings and sorrows were all of the nature of perpetually renewed self-denials.—National Repository.

Sports of Asiatic Georgians.

The "tournament" of the Middle Ages still survives here, and is conducted much in the same way as formerly in England, in the thirteenth and fourteenth centories. On one occasion we heard that one was to be held in a retired spot in the forest, not far from Koutais. We rode thither, and found a gay and animated scene. A large space was cleared for the lists, round which groups of spectators took their stand, in holiday attire, that of the women affording great variety of color. The gown is often yellow or magenta-colored, while the bodice, buttoning close to the waist, but open above, may be black or blue; over this a jacket, matching the skirt, is worn, and a white veil, confined by a gilt crown, gives a picturesque though somewhat theatrical effect to the costume. Their demeanor is composed and somewhat reserved, though various little episodes may be observed, in the course of the day, proving that the event of the combat is of more importance to these calm spectators than one would judge from their quiet manner. Many a glove or ribbon is bestowed by each fair damsel on her chosen cavalier, who pins the favor to his sheepskin bonnet; and it is said that the single combats with which the tournay begins frequently decide the pretensions of rival claimants.

The Georgians, mounted on well-trained horses, divide into two bodies on opposite sides of the lists. Each horseman carries at his saddle-bow a store of light birch-wood lances about six feet long. A horn is sounded, and from either side a horseman advances toward the center. Crossing lances, they return, but, just on reaching home, wheel round, and, spurring their steeds, make for each other at full gallop, hurling their lances as they pass. These missiles are sometimes dexterously caught by the opponent as they whiz past, or else he avoids the blow by sheltering himself behind his horse, dropping suddenly down, and recovering himself with extraordinary agility, the well-trained animal performing his part to perfection. Again and again the maneuver is repeated, till either the stock of shafts is exhausted or one of the combatants is wounded, when he at once acknowledges defeat. The sports end with a general melee in which all take part, and much confusion prevails.

The horses used in these tournaments come chiefly from the Tartar villages round Elizabetpol. They cost from three hundred to five hundred roubles each. Seldom bigger than an English pony, their form suggests both speed and strength. The pas is an amble, to which they are trained in much the same way as in California and South America.—Fraser.

The process of book printing in China is as follows: Two pages are written by one trained to the business, on a sheet of thin paper, divided into columns by black lines, and in the space between the two pages are written the title of the work and the number of page. When the sheet has been printed it is folded down through this space, so as to bring the title partly on each page. The sheet, when ready for printing, is pasted, face downward, on a smooth block of wood, made from the pear or plantree; as soon as it is dry the paper is rubbed off with great care, leaving behind an inverted impression of the character. Another workman now cuts away the blank spaces by means of a sharp graver, and the block, with the characters in high relief, passes to the printer, who performs his work by hand. The two points that he is to be most careful about are to ink the characters equally with his brush, and to avoid tearing the paper when taking the impression. From a good wooden block some 15,000 copies may be printed, and when the characters have been sharpened up a little it is possible to obtain 6,000 or 10,000 more impressions.

Religious Intelligence.

—There are 1,000 Christian congregations in Madagascar, and 45,000 children taught in the mission schools of the London Missionary Society.

—The Catholic bishops in the United States are stated to have held $9,000,000 property in 1850, which is estimated to have increased now to $110,000,000.

—The present chief of Kaffirland, South Africa, is a Methodist class-leader. His father, who is still living, has been a consistent Christian since 1825, and is spoken of as a "fine specimen of the Christian Kaffir gentleman."

—Rev. P. O. Oakey presents facts in the New York Observer, intended to show that the oldest existing Presbyterian church in the United States is that at Jamaica, Long Island. Presbyterian worship was established in Jamaica as early as 1662.

Says the Independent: "The many who are interested in the establishment of Christian missions in Central Africa will be sorry to hear that the first of these enterprises, attempted soon after the death of Dr. Livingstone, by the Free and United Presbyterian Churches of Scotland, and bearing the great explorer's name, on Lake Nyassa, will probably have to be abandoned on account of that pest and destroyer of domestic animals—the tsetse fly."

—The statistics of the Reformed (Dutch) Church are as follows: Churches, 506—same as last year; ministers, 549—increase, 3; families, 43,380—increase, 42; received on confession, 6,250—increase, 257; received on certificate, 2,129—increase, 156; communicants, 78,631—increase, 4,031; infants baptized, 4,371—increase, 121; adults baptized, 1,601—decrease, 353; catechumens, 23,511—increase, 484; Sabbath schools, 621—increase, 50; Sunday-school scholars, 77,305—increase, 4,051; benevolent contributions, $200,398—decrease, $9,637; raised for congregational purposes, $809,048—decrease, $63,756.

—The Church Journal apprehends that the foundation for important changes has been laid in the government of the Protestant Episcopal Churches. It says: "They are changes which were involved from the start, in the plan of small dioceses, and grow naturally out of them. In the end New York will work out its own church ideas, get its own bishops, and arrange its own services, without reference to Illinois. Illinois, having its Nicene complement of bishops and dioceses, will do the same without reference to New York. There will be a score of provinces, with independence which, by Catholic law, belongs to provinces, and they will be connected by the bond, only of mutual Christian brotherhood, and the General Convention will be a thing of the past. Every new diocese to which it gives birth hastens its own end."

—Protestantism in Mexico is represented by the following denominations, which entered the field in the order of their names: Congregationalists (Monterey, 1863); Baptist (Montemorelos); Episcopal Church of Jesus, 1863; Friends (Matamoras, 1873); Presbyterian (1872); Methodist Episcopal Church (1872); Methodist Episcopal Church South, 1873; Presbyterian Southern Assembly (Matamoras, 1874); Independents (Tolnca, 1873); Congregationalists (Guadalajara, 1871). Number of missionaries foreign: male, 49; female, 22; native, 57; school teachers, 35; Bible colporteurs, 12; all other agents, 22; congregations, 137; members or probable adherents, 12,000; churches, 16; other places of worship, 121; parsonages, 6; probable value of church property, $171,800; Sunday schools, 45; day schools, 36; male pupils, 636; female pupils, 501; orphanages, 3; orphans, 105; theological seminaries, 3; students, 21; Bible and tract depositories, 14; presses in use, 11; periodicals issued, 7; amount of circulation, 5,200; pages of all religious literature issued during current year, 3,680,850; amount of appropriation, for current year, $107,850.

JERUSALEM.—Twenty years ago the European population of Palestine was below 100; now the German Protestant colony alone numbers about 1,000, of whom 500 have settled in Jerusalem. They have built nice, comfortable houses outside the city. Catholic churches, convents and schools are springing up in every direction. But most significant is the rapid flow of the Jewish people to the land of their fathers. Fifty years ago the Jewish community in Jerusalem consisted of about 400 families, and there were only two or three wretched synagogues. Now the Israelites in the city number about 15,000 souls, and have fifteen synagogues, mainly well kept, and eight large Medrashim, which serve as synagogues as well as schools for the study of the Talmud. There are also two hospitals and two societies to care for the sick. A generous provision is made for poor Jews and for orphans. Meals are furnished at a low rate for poor workmen. Rothschild and two others have built dwelling houses for the poor. Moses Malelia has built 20 houses for widows and orphans, and the Sephardim 110 houses for 330 widows. Near the city Sir Moses Montefiore and Judah Touah have built 31 houses for the poor. There are also 7 building societies, which assist their members in building houses. The Agricultural Society has 100 members, already has bought ground on the road to Jaffa, and are negotiating for the purchase of the plain of Jericho, offering $15,000 for it. The venerable Episcopalian Bishop of Jerusalem has issued his annual letter, in which he claims that the Christian congregation in the city "can be compared with the best congregations in Europe in many respects." Every Lord's day there are six services under his care in four different languages, all well attended. Of the schools he says: "Altogether we have 33 Protestant schools in Judea, Samaria, Galilee, and beyond Jordan, containing between 1,200 and 1,500 children of both sexes, of five or six Christian denominations, besides Jews, Moslems, Druses and Samaritans."

WHAT THE WINDS BRING.

BY EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN.

Which is the wind that brings the cold?
The north wind, Freddy, and all the snow,
And the sheep will scamper into the fold
When the north begins to blow.

Which is the wind that brings the heat?
The south wind, Katy, and corn will grow,
And peaches redden for you to eat,
When the south begins to blow.

Which is the wind that brings the rain?
The east wind, Arty; and farmers know
That cows come shivering up the lane
When the east begins to blow.

Which is the wind that brings the flowers?
The west wind, Bessy, and soft and low
The birdies sing in the summer bowers
When the west begins to blow.

From Our Little Friends.

ISNEY, ALA., March 1, 1878.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen a letter in your paper from Isney, I will try to write you one. I am a little girl ten years old, and I love to go to Sunday school; but our Sunday school has been suspended through the winter months. We expect to commence it again soon. Our minister is Rev. W. H. Wild. We all like him very much. It was Elisha who plowed with twelve yoke of oxen. It was also Elisha upon whom Elijah threw his mantle. You will find it in First Kings xix, 19. I will ask a question now: In what month did the children of Israel start from Egypt? Wishing you success, I am

Your little friend,
MARY IDA PEEL.

CANTON, ALA., March 2, 1878.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: We are all Presbyterians in this neighborhood, but that does not keep me from loving the ADVOCATE. I will answer Horace Roberts' question: The Lord sent ten plagues on the Egyptians. The first was the turning of the rivers into blood. The last was that the first-born of every house was slain. I will ask your little readers a question: Where is the garden of Gethsemane?

Ever your well wisher,
VIRGINIA MARSH.

GUNBO, ALA., February 12, 1878.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: It was James and John, the sons of Zebedee, who were surnamed Boanerges; it is found in Mark iii, 17. Obed was David's grandfather; it is found in Ruth iv, 17. I will ask the young folks a question: Where is the verse found in the New Testament which says: "Come, see a man which told me all things that ever I did." Is not this the Christ?

I am, as ever,
Your young friend,
EMMA JOSEPHINE HOWELL.

GUNBO, ALA., February 12, 1878.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: I will ask the young folks a question: Where is the verse in the Bible which saith: "Look unto me and be ye saved, all ye ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else."

Your friend,

Trotty and Spotty.

Trotty was tired of dolls and all such playthings. She had something alive to play with. It was a little mite of a pig, and its name was Spotty.

It was all white, except on its back were two spots about as big as pens. And what a cunning curl its tail had! Not for anything in the world would Trotty have that tail cut off, as papa wished.

You should have seen Trotty rocking it to sleep, as she did every day. The way the little fellow squirmed and kicked and grunted, and was finally made to lie still and be rocked and sung to, was funny to see.

About this time there was a daily wonder with mamma how could it be that Trotty's aprons got so very dirty. It might be a white one, or a pretty pink one with ruffles and pockets, that was nicely buttoned round her every afternoon. No matter. Before night it was ti for nothing but to go into the wash.

It seems that Spotty had a piggish habit of getting into all the dirt that he could find; so when Jane, the kitchen-girl, washed Trotty's soiled aprons to wash, underlook to find out why there were so many every week, she soon knew just how it was; for, seeing Trotty making very hard work of climbing the stairs one day, she followed her and found her to a room all by herself, with piggy wound up in her apron.

"What a naughty girl to carry that dirty pig in your apron!" said Jane.

"Well, I fant tarry him no ezzer way, he squirms so," retorted Trotty.

"What makes you carry him, then? Why don't you have him under the shed?" asked Jane.

"S'pose he dun't never want to come in ze house?" said Trotty indignantly.

"Certainly not; and now we'll march him right straight to his pen, and then come and have off that apron."

Trotty followed Jane, holding piggy closer than ever, and talking soothingly in his ear.

"You's 'mungle sight han'somer 'n she is, Spotty, 'n I like you. But they s'ant cut off your tail, Spotty; no, they s'ant."

Trotty didn't carry the pig about in her drop after that. She found an empty flour sack, and used to drag him around in it, till one day it burst open and piggy curling his little tail tightly over his back, was off with a squeal.

What a chase Trotty had after him! Round and round the little garden, till he ran into the middle of a flower-bed, and curled himself up there for safety. He was right under a big zinnia, and looked far all the world as if he was going to sleep.

Trotty held out her apron to him then, and told him to come to her, or she should get a "great big knife and cut his tail smack off."

Perhaps that was more than Spotty could bear the thought of; at any rate, he went to her at once.

One day Trotty's mother went down the cellar after something for dinner, and you never would guess what she found Trotty doing there; so I will tell you. Spotty was with her, of course. He always was with her when she was in mischief. She had him by his hind feet, and was holding him over a pan of cream, so that his nose was half buried in it.

"I never fought you'd see me," she said. "He's jess a 'tarvin'. He 'queels and 'queels, and he don't grow the leastest mite. Jane says so, and I don't want him to starve when 'ere's cream a was'in'."

Trotty was a very little girl, and she was almost frying, so mamma thought best not to say much to her just then. But she took her away, and Trotty was soon out on the grass with Spotty, and was doing her best to stuff his unwilling mouth with plum-cake and with sugar candy.—Youth's Companion.

Grandma's Magic.

What cannot love and kindness do, joined with a gentle voice? Good Grandma Watson tamed two little "eye-brights," which had their home in an old oak-tree just outside of her window. She saw the little gray backs almost as soon as they chose that site for their new cottage, and she took great pleasure in watching them flit about, almost as lightly as the birdies, in their leafy home.

Grandma had been a "master hand" at taming things in her younger days. She "trained" a young colt at her father's farm, which her brothers tried in vain "to break." She always maintained that training was better than breaking any day. Now she determined to train these little squirrels to cheer her lonely hours, and little by little she gained their friendship, until they came as regularly as two children to be fed. If grandma was late, they peeped in at her window, and scratched the glass with their tiny paws.

But they had their little capers, which would not have been right in a child. They would slip in at her window and steal all the lumps of sugar from her sugar-bowl, if she chanced to leave the bowl uncovered and handy. They must have had quite a little store of sweets somewhere, for grandma was forgetful, and they emptied the dish several times. They loved best to sit on the window-sill and take unroasted peanuts from her fingers; and it was one of the dear old lady's many pleasures to give them this treat every morning.

"You must work for your living part of the time, little pets," she used to say. "If you do nothing but play, you will set a bad example to all the little boys and girls." The children loved to come trooping in to see grandma's little four-footed friends; and, though the squirrels were a little shy, yet they liked to see the children come, for there was sure to be an extra treat of some sort in somebody's pocket. Grandma declined all offers of "cages," and said that would spoil it all. It was because they were so free that they were so happy.

When cold weather came she gave them some warm old woolen socks to make into a bed in the hollow of the old tree, and there, if you could only have peeped in, I dare say you would have seen each little pet all warm and snug.

His nose tucked in between his paws,
His tail wound round his head.

Grandma's magic was the art of love and gentleness, and everybody who came near her felt its power.—Child's World.

THE EYE THAT ALWAYS SEES.

When a very little boy I remember reading of a child who was in the habit of going to an upper room or loft where there was a store of apples; but as she went, from time to time, to steal these apples she met with something that greatly troubled her, for there happened to have been placed in that store-room an old oil-painting.

It was a large face, the eyes of which, go to what part of the room the little girl might, seemed to follow her; and they appeared to be saying to her, as she stooped down to take up the apples: "Ah! I see you. It is very naughty. I'll tell upon you. You are sure to be found out."

Well, this so annoyed the little girl, from time to time, that she was determined to put a stop to this speechifying of these two great staring eyes; so she got a small knife, or a pair of scissors, and stuck them out.

Ah! but there were still the two large holes in place of the eyes, and she never could look at them without thinking of the eyes, and what they used to say to her. She had put out the eyes, but she had not, nor could she, get rid of her conscience. Moreover, the very means she had adopted for silencing without rebuke only served to discover her guilt; for when what had befallen the painting came to be found out, it led to such inquiries as at last to reveal the whole truth.—Episcopalian.

"I am tired to death!" So you have said very often, yet you are still alive and well. "I had not a wink of sleep all night!" yet your bed-fellow heard you snore many times. "I would not do it for the world!" And yet you have done things equally bad for a penny. "We were up to our knees in mud!" You know very well that the dirt was not over your shoes.

Kind and loving efforts for their salvation will have a melting effect upon cold and icy hearts.

Not After Man.

Paul affirms that he received the gospel directly from Christ as a distinct and special revelation. It did not come to him through other and inspired men, but it was taught him by an immediate revelation. It came to him from first hands—from its divine source, from the Lord himself. And yet it is the same gospel that is foreshadowed in the Old Testament, and perfectly agrees with that which the other apostles expounded on the day of Pentecost. In a still wider sense we may affirm that the gospel is not after man. It is not such a system as man would or could originate.

Its doctrines could scarcely have originated in the unaided reason. Jesus Christ, as a creation of the human mind, is an impossibility. The reality of the God-man alone accounts for the matchless portraiture which is given us in the gospels. The doctrine of sacrifice must have originated in a divine revelation, and justification by faith is manifestly more than the product of human philosophy. The doctrine of the cross was an offense both to the Jew and to the Greek. It is not after man. It is rather out of accord with the thought of the learned and of the ignorant, of the religious and the skeptical, in the times of the apostles. Knowing as we do, the convictions and tendencies of both Jews and Gentiles respecting the service and worship of God, we may safely conclude that the doctrine of Christ could not take its rise in uninspired men.

The moral teachings of the gospel are as evidently divine as are its doctrines. Who can imagine that the decalogue originated from a purely human source in an age of comparative darkness and ignorance, and among a people who had been degraded by centuries of oppression, and corrupted by long contact with idolatry? The law must have come from God, and it is far easier to believe that the commandments were written by his finger upon the tables than it is to suppose that they were the product of an uninspired man. As the law is presented in the gospel in its deep spiritual import, and as it is applied to the duty and relations of men, it is not after man, but contrary to the desires and practice of men. It could no more have a human origin than water can rise above its level, or than the laws of gravity can be set aside. A clean thing cannot be brought out of an unclean, and the great law of love never could have sprung from the carnal mind. It is, indeed, the farthest stretch of credulity to believe that the moral teachings and precepts of the gospel were evolved from human nature.

When we consider the spiritual character of the gospel, and its influence in changing the bad into the good, the case is still stronger. This is the grand demonstration: that it saves men from sin; that it is the power of God unto salvation to them that believe. The gospel does reform men beyond doubt. There are instances within the knowledge of most honest observers. There are hypocrites, and those who relapse into sin, and there are worldly, selfish and sensual people in the churches. There are notable instances of fraud and defalcation among those who profess the faith of Christ. But, admitting everything of this kind that can be truthfully charged, still there remains a great cloud of witnesses in favor of the reforming and saving power of the gospel. No system of human philosophy, no school of socialism, no organization of unbelief, pretends to any such power as this. The gospel in this respect stands alone in its claims to supernatural power, and in its evidences of being directly from Heaven.

It seems to us that no fair minded man can examine the gospel carefully, and come to any other conclusion than that it is of God. The moral and experimental evidences are enough. There is more of the miraculous in them than in the miracles themselves, and to the honest inquirer they are more conclusive than the fulfillment of prophecy. The miracles may prepare the way for the study and investigation. Prophecy fulfilled challenges the attention, and, to a certain degree, the assent, but the moral evidences crown the work of conviction in the minds of sincere inquirers after truth. The goodness, benevolence, wisdom and purity of the gospel are sufficient to demonstrate its source. There is, perhaps, a stage in the course of inquiry when the miracles attest the truth of the doctrines and teachings of the gospel, but this may be reversed afterward, when the miracles are believed because inseparably connected with teachings which in themselves are so evidently divine.

The mature Christian finds no difficulty in the record itself. That God should raise the dead is certainly not incredible, but he has the witness in himself. The doctrine attests the miracles even more than the miracles attest the doctrine. To him, if miracles seal the doctrine, experience seals the miracles. Experience, once reached, throws back upon the earlier evidences a refulgence of its own, and is to the believer a supreme satisfaction—a conscious manifestation of the truth of the gospel. Conversion is no more after man than is the gospel. The change must be from God, and the gospel through which it is wrought must be of God. Every soul born of the Spirit can certify that the gospel is not after man. However mere theorists may be tossed about, the experimental Christian is fast anchored in his knowledge of a present personal salvation from sin.

Coming to Years.

The time is not such as can be definitely fixed by reference to the family record. It is not reached all at once. The young bird tries its wings again and again, and returns to the nest, but there is a final flight when it goes forth to take care of itself. So the time comes when the child becomes responsible for his own religious character and course, when he must choose for himself to serve God or to cast him off. In the secular outlook the responsibility comes also. What to do, and whither to go, are questions that must be answered by taking actual steps in one direction or another.

The young man now has charge of himself. The world is before him, but circumstances cannot be altogether controlled. If disposed to regard the world as his oyster, the opening of it may prove a difficult undertaking. There are prizes in the race of life, but the race must be run with diligence and patience. Competition will be found in every pursuit, and it will not always be governed by principles of honor. Antagonists of knightly generosity are exceptional. There will be a plenty of selfishness, no little of meanness, and a great deal of duplicity, mixed up in the great battle of life.

Whether it is the better or the worse for the beginner to have backing and pecuniary resources for the start, is a matter about which we may differ. The grandest successes have been achieved by the pluck, perseverance and native ability of those who had to depend only on themselves. But for the rest there have been instances of respectable achievements where capital was under control at the beginning, and where the earlier years of professional toil were not burdened with the ever-present specter of starvation. For the most, this beginning with but little to begin with is the experience in store. The boys who leave college have but little besides the education they have acquired; and others, from necessity, must go out to battle with the world without this most important preparation. Whether we look at the moral and religious, or the secular and social aspect of the matter, this coming to years is a crisis and an epoch in the history which is calculated even to sober the most ardent spirit.

Relief from restraint is welcomed by many. It is their hour of enlargement, and deliverance from authority. But they will not go far before they learn that their newly-acquired liberty has devolved upon them the necessity of providing for themselves, and of taking measures which they must themselves choose, and for which they alone must be accountable. They will find themselves alone, their friends and associates, like themselves, intent on their own affairs, and each with his own fortune to mar or to make. Personal responsibility dawns but gradually upon the mind, and is never fully realized until the young man is away from home, and begins the work of providing for himself. His freedom is attended with care; his liberty is trammeled with many pressing necessities. In his religious course there are new and strong temptations which he could know nothing of until embarked in business. The character may have been formed in the school, in the church and in the home, but the severest trial of it comes in launching out into the world.

With none on whom to lean but himself, it will be well if the young man takes God for his strength and help. This is the most important thing on which he is to decide. The profession he may prefer, the business that most commends itself to his taste and qualifications, is of small moment in comparison with the stand that he takes in reference to religion. Whatever way he takes without Christ must end in the loss of his soul. His life may be crowned with worldly success, but he himself will be a cast-away. Carefulness in the choice of a business is to be commended, but this will be of little avail for earthly happiness if the prime condition be neglected. It is only by making the kingdom of God first that we have any right to expect or to count upon the blessing of Divine Providence. Christ is the better part, and the one thing needful, because the portion which he gives shall never be taken away. Riches make to themselves wings and fly away, honor and fame are but a transient breath, the pleasures of sense and appetite perish with the body, and learning, divorced from faith, is a sterile field. Christ and his grace are alone the abiding and the imperishable treasure.

Every young man has before him a noble life, a course of usefulness and honor, and an immortal crown. But the determining condition of all is the position that he takes in reference to the duties and principles of religion. If in coming to years he ignores the teachings of his childhood, and throws off the restraints of the gospel, his path will be beset with perils, and the end of it will probably be moral disaster and everlasting ruin.

General Conference Impressions.

MR EDITOR: Now that the noise has subsided and quiet been restored, let us look with calm eyes and rested minds upon the last General Conference. The impression is abroad that a General Conference is made up of the ablest men in the church—that men of the highest culture and deepest piety are the ones selected as representatives—that when one sees this body he sees all the venerableness and wisdom of the church in their highest development. My opinion, based upon seeing and hearing, does not absolutely contradict this idea, nor does it fully agree with it. Many of the members of the last Conference were able men—men of far-reaching wisdom and mature judgments—men whose attainments entitle them to universal respect and admiration, and who "adorn the doctrine" they live and preach; but I do not think the majority came up to this high standard. I know that very many there are—laymen and preachers—in the church better qualified for the position of delegates to a General Conference than many of those who were members of that body. This, I believe, will be the case as long as the present method of selecting delegates obtains among us. It is unfortunately true that we have partisanship in the church, and men are elected to high positions in the same way that they reach such positions in the State. What may be termed "church politics," in a large measure, controls in all church matters. It is lamentable that this is so; but that it is so, all who are not blind can readily see. I would not bring any man under disparagement, or lessen his influence in the least; but to say that the last General Conference contained all the talent and wisdom and piety of the church is simply not true. It is time for us to quit using the superlative degree of adjectives, and to look at things and men as they are, and not as they appear. It would be well if, sometimes, we would remember that word of wisdom: "Judge not according to appearance, but judge righteous judgment."

Another matter upon which I have formed a decided opinion: A very objectionable feature of every General Conference is the preponderance of new men in its body. A man—no matter how wise and conservative and pious he may be—cannot learn to be a good law-maker in twenty days. The thing is absurd. It takes a life-time to learn anything well. I noticed in this body that the men who had been members for many successive terms were those to whom alone we could look for safe leadership. It is a matter to be lamented that at least one-half the members of every General Conference are new men.

In regard to the work done by the Conference I have not much to say, as I believe very little was done. In regard to some things proposed to be done, I have thought a good deal. I noticed this fact: the most radical changes in our polity were proposed by the older Conferences and opposed by the later Conferences. In revolving this over in my mind I have found myself asking this question repeatedly: "Has the old Methodism, handed down to us by our fathers, run its course in those older Conferences?" The changes proposed go to the very root of old Methodism, and if adopted would so transform it as to make it an entirely new system. These proposals have been coming for several successive terms, and each time they are louder and more distinct. When I listen to them I ask: "Has the system of evangelization, which the providence of God organized and put to work under the leadership of Mr. Wesley, accomplished its object?" It would seem so, if we take the changes proposed in our economy as any evidence. If it is so, then what can be done to hold the older and younger Conferences together as a connectional unity? I believe that here is the point upon which the wise men of the church should concentrate their thought, and devise some plan to meet all demands, before we have a repetition of the scenes of 1828.

I would say more did I not remember your unreasonable clamor about brevity—as if a man could speak his mind in half a column of a newspaper.

C.

A Moral Plague.

The Louisiana State Lottery Company is thus, and truthfully, characterized by the New Orleans Democrat. This is the only secular paper in the city, we believe, that declines to advertise the company, and the only one that denounces it as it deserves. We have frequently called the attention of Christians and Christian ministers to this great and baneful source of demoralization. All good people ought to unite in the endeavor to overthrow this most iniquitous institution. It is ruining individuals, producing domestic misery, and corrupting all classes. From an article in the Democrat of June 9 we copy as follows:

What would the Christian people of New Orleans think if they should learn, through our telegraphic columns this morning, that in Boston or Philadelphia or New York, or in any other city, the government had licensed a school to educate men, women and children to be gamblers, and that the amount of the license was to be applied to the support of the charitable institutions of the city? We believe they would be inexpressibly shocked; we believe they would be horrified and indignant. And yet that is precisely the sort of an institution which, under the laws and protected by the laws of the State of Louisiana, exists in this city, and is known as the Louisiana State Lottery Company.

Those who have followed up our investigation into the effects of this institution upon the public morals must concede that this is true. The scheme of the lottery is so deftly and wisely adapted to its pernicious purposes that it affords the opportunity and tempts every class of the community to play, and thus it infects the whole body of society. With a cold blooded cruelty—with a sort of fiendish heartlessness—it preys most successfully upon the poorest and most ignorant people. We have exposed the almost utter impossibility of winning a prize in this institution, yet it presents its scheme to the ignorant and credulous, promising them a chance for a little fortune for twenty-five cents. Occasionally we hear that somebody has drawn a prize, and considerable sums are spent by the company to advertise the fact. This but aggravates the swindle and the cruelty. If no prizes were ever drawn, even the most abject and infatuated victim of the lottery would grow hopeless, and cease to risk his pittance in such ventures. It is wise, therefore, on the part of the management to permit prizes to be drawn occasionally and to blazon to the world. The miserable creature who has for months been buying tickets in vain; the clerk who has been pilfering money from his employer to invest; the infatuated man or woman who has lost hundreds, nay, thousands of dollars in trying to win a prize, after a time grow sick at heart by hope deferred, and begin to despair. But when the advertisement appears, stating that somebody has won a prize and been paid in full, the fever seizes upon the miserable victims with renewed intensity; new hopes animate their breasts; they feel as if they were at last about to realize their expectations; they renew the hopeless playing with a still fiercer ardor, and risk and lose every dollar they can procure, without the shadow of a chance to win.

The passion for this sort of gambling already infects the great mass of the people, especially the poorer and more ignorant classes. The twenty-five cent tickets are within the reach of the poorest people, and thus many thousands who otherwise could not afford to gamble are offered the opportunity of indulging in that unconquerable excitement. But the lottery does not content itself with offering this class an opportunity to indulge this fierce passion. It resorts to every device to tempt them to do it, to infatuate them with the game, to fix its insidious and blasting spell upon their minds and hearts. These poor, deluded people furnish the lottery with a large portion of its wealth; they feed, nourish and fatten it, as it were, with the pittances spared from wages earned by toil and sweat, and often by sore privation. Hence the lottery is especially careful that as few of these as possible escape its spell. One of its great duties is to make these people gamblers, and it has adopted the very best means to accomplish that end. It seizes upon and tempts them by exciting their superstition. The great mass of ignorant people believe firmly in dreams. It is the duty of all Christian people—of all honest people—to repress this and all other superstitious beliefs. All honest occupations are benefited by enlightening all classes of the people. But the lottery is not an honest business, and with the zeal and skill of a fanatical missionary it encourages, excites and plays upon this superstition. It has dream-books prepared, in which every imaginable dream is recorded, and opposite each dream is set a combination of numbers. The missionaries of the lottery devote themselves to teaching the ignorant and superstitious to believe that if they buy a lottery ticket with the figures set opposite to any dream they may have had, they will draw a prize. It is startling to learn the extent to which this superstition now prevails, and the multitudes of people who gamble in the lottery on the strength of dreams. Many people have become monomaniacs on the subject; their sleep is filled with dreams, and their money vainly invested in buying lottery tickets with numbers indicated in the lottery's dream-books. Christian people of New Orleans, is not this a startling fact? Indeed it seems to us that the churches of this city should take some steps to break up an institution which is propagating a superstition in our midst as detrimental to the morality and the mental health and happiness of its wretched victims as many that prevail among the heathen, to whose aid they send out missionaries, and for whose mental and moral emancipation they spend thousands of dollars annually. From every Christian pulpit in New Orleans there should go out this morning a deep and feeling protest against the longer existence in our midst of the Louisiana State Lottery.

Is there any work more in accordance with the Christian religion, or which would be more acceptable to God, than a concerted movement on the part of the ministers of the gospel in New Orleans to break down an institution which is doing more to demoralize the poor and ignorant classes of the community than all the churches can do to enlighten and morally advance them? Let our Christian people, especially our ministers, think of the petty thieves this institution has made of the once happy and well to do workingmen it has infatuated and then ruined; of the suicides it has provoked; of the numbers it has driven to insanity; of the debasing influence it is exerting in every walk and rank of life—let our Christian people and their ministers, we say, consider these things, and then say if it be not their most solemn duty to use all their power and influence to destroy the Louisiana State Lottery.

The Story of Bida.

The following, says the New York Christian Advocate, comes to us from the India mission in illustration of the difficulties under which our converts from heathendom in that country labor:

The next morning the man referred to came early. He was one of Andrias' friends, and one of the most sincere and earnest inquirers. He told of his fears, of his mind being taken away, and of the various hinderances that would be placed in his way by all the people. On Christmas morning Andrias and Prem-das went to his house, and the man told the people of his intentions. The scene that followed cannot be described. At first all his friends tried ridicule of the sharpest kind. He was "forsaking his friends; his religion, his own mother; was drawn away by hope of money; was expecting to be some great person, but was really becoming out-caste, and would be poor and degraded and despised." They tried threats; they would not let him "draw water;" would get his "food taken away from him;" would "make the village too hot for him," etc. Then they resorted to means which try a man more than anything else. They sent the women to his house, and they cried and lamented, as only Oriental women can, over their "sister" (his wife,) who was soon to "be lost." And the poor woman and girls cried too, and made the house worse than a house of death; but Bida remained firm. Then they called the watchman of the village, who is also a policeman, that he might order the preachers out of the village. When this was not obeyed, they called the Mohammedans, and ordered them away. This being disregarded, they sent for the land-owner, who came and demanded what was due on Bida's land. At this time of the year no farmer has any money, but Andrias became security for the money, and the land-owner left.

Bida then got his large Eastern pipe, cleaned it nicely, and filled it before all the people, giving it to the preachers first, and then smoked it himself—a sign of brotherhood and of abandonment of his caste. This act, it must be remembered, broke the man's caste more than anything else could possibly have done. That afternoon Bida, with his wife and four girls, were baptized. His wife is also firm; but she wept often the day she was baptized. And who can wonder at her tears?—for she was being cut off from all her family and neighbors, and was to be the only Christian woman for miles around, except Andrias' wife, who lives three miles away.

Three days after the missionaries went to the village to preach, but they were not allowed to enter. They tried to reason with them, but they drowned their voices, saying: "We will not hear you. Go away; go to Bida's house; he is your man. You have killed us by taking one of our best men." The missionaries went on to Bida's house, and sat in the open air and sang hymns. One after another came round to see, and soon we had the best audience we ever had in the village, and then we preached to the people. But Bida's troubles have only begun. The next morning his daughters went to the well to draw water as usual, but were not allowed to obtain it. In these villages the well and many other things are held in common. Bida was refused the use of a mat which he held in common with others in the village.

Amid all such troubles the people are still seeking Christ, and, as in state elsewhere, among these very people Bro. Parker soon baptized over sixty converts.

Christian Sects in Syria.

In some respects it is the great misfortune of Syria that its inhabitants are of so many creeds, living side by side, never coalescing, always in open or concealed jealousy and enmity—Druses, Jews, Mohammedans, and all the different sects of so-called Christians. These latter may be divided as follows: Maronites, Greek Orthodox, Greek Catholics, Armenian Jacobites, etc.

The Maronites.—These, in fact, are Roman Catholics, but take their name from Maron, a hermit of the fifteenth century. They acknowledge the Pope, and keep their festivals according to the Latin calendar. They worship the Virgin Mary and images, believe in the intercession of the saints, extreme unction, purgatory and in prayers for the dead. They are a branch of the old Syrian Church. Their convents abound all over Lebanon, and they have amassed great property. They are exceedingly superstitious. They are much disliked by the other Christian sects, and are accounted also as the hereditary enemies of the Druses; the feuds between them and the Druses being, in a great measure, the cause of the massacres in 1860.

The Greek Catholics.—These consist largely of proselytes gained over by Jesuits and Romish priests in the last two hundred years. Many of the wealthier classes. They acknowledge the Pope, and are like Catholics in most of their rites. They baptize by immersion, with anointing; give the bread and wine mixed to the laity; hold their service partly in Greek and partly in Arabic and worship saints, images and pictures.

The Greek Orthodox, from which the above have split away, are called Greek from their connection with the Greek Oriental Church. They are strongly in sympathy with Russia, being one with her in creed, they agree with the Romish faith in most respects. They do not acknowledge the Pope, but consider the Patriarch the spiritual head of the church. They believe in the procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father alone. They reject purgatory, baptize only by immersion, hold the intercession of the saints, prayers for the dead, worship pictures, and observe the old style in their calendar.

All the above churches allow the marriage of the parish priests before ordination, but forbid it to monks, bishops and patriarchs.

The Armenians.—These are divided into two classes—the one approximating closely to the Romish, the other to the Greek Church. The distinguishing feature in their religious creed is that they deny the human nature of Christ. They are also worshipers of relics, and are ornate in their vestments and ritual.

Among these varied creeds and superstitions Protestant truth is manfully struggling for a footing, and begins at last to be recognized as "one of the churches." But side by side with the evangelical missionary agencies rise many a Jesuit institution, with energy and effort increasing year by year; and ever since their expulsion from Europe the Jesuits have established themselves firmly in Syria, having large funds at their control, and many adherents among the churches, in alliance with Rome. They are the great opponents of Protestant Christian missions.

British Wesleyan Missionary Anniversary.

This anniversary was held in Exeter Hall, London, April 29. William Fewlurn presided. The hall was filled with a distinguished audience. The reports showed total receipts for the year, £146,017 5s. 10d., or nearly $730,000; total expenditures, £159,079 ($795,000).

The receipts were exclusive of nearly $60,000 received at the Mission House for the Indian famine fund, and of about $15,000 to aid in rebuilding chapels burned in the great fire at St. John, N. B.

The following is a general summary of the work of the society:

Missions under the immediate direction of the Wesleyan Missionary Committee and British Conference, in Europe, India, China, South and West Africa and the West Indies:

Central or principal stations, called circuits	331
Chapels and other preaching places in connection with the above mentioned central or principal stations, as far as ascertained	2,565
Missionaries and assistant missionaries, including supernumeraries	417
Other paid agents, as catechists, interpreters, day school teachers, etc	1,669
Unpaid agents, as Sabbath school teachers	7,408
Full and accredited church members	63,718
Candidates for church membership	10,260
Local preachers, deputing for those who attend on the day and Sabbath schools	86,491
Day school students	3

Other missions of the society, having also relation to Conferences, in Ireland, France and Australasia, taken from the reports of last year:

Central or principal stations, called circuits	239
Chapels and other preaching-places	3,777
Missionaries and assistant missionaries, including supernumeraries	461
Other paid agents, as catechists, interpreters, day-school teachers, etc	4,236
Unpaid agents, as Sabbath school teachers	17,591
Full and accredited church members	29,628
Candidates for church membership	9,542
Local preachers, deputing for those who attend the day and Sabbath schools	13,272
Day scholars	3

RECAPITULATION.

Eloquent addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Punshon, Dr. Pope, Hon. and Rev. E. V. Bligh (of the Church of England), Mr. Robert Lamas, Rev. E. Topham, S. D. Waddy, Q. C., M. P., Rev. H. Hurd, of Barbadoes, and Rev. S. Whitehead, of China.

New Orleans Sunday School Association.

MR. EDITOR: The pleasant reunion of Sunday school workers at United States Barracks, on May 30th, has given occasion for many inquiries concerning the Sunday School Association, under whose auspices the entertainment was given. To answer these, and to some extent demonstrate the need for such an association is the object of this communication.

To renew the Sunday school work is receiving a larger share of consideration and attention than ever before in its history. The work of the pastor, the superintendent, the teacher and the secretary is forming upon a more advanced ideal. The pastor's work especially is centered upon the work, and teachers are resting about, for all the helps they can lay hand or mind upon; this not only in exposition, but in the matter of methods; as, for instance, the judicious use of the record system, how to secure attention, home study of the lesson, punctuality and regularity of attendance, and inflating

The greater interest now associated with the Sunday school and the practice on the part of the great body of Sunday school workers, show the value of that great stimulant and help—the interchange of ideas and sympathy.

It is the object of this association to afford opportunity for these, and for the elaboration of methods in managing the work in all its parts, by comparison of modes and exchange of ideas upon them.

The association is governed by a president and an executive committee. The latter represents all the various evangelical denominations. Sectarianism is carefully avoided. Regularly the meetings of the association are held monthly, and are not confined to a single annual session, as some have supposed. The requisites for membership are simple. Any one interested in the Sunday school work—whether parent, teacher, officer of a school, or otherwise—may become connected with the association upon the recommendation of a member, and the payment of one dollar a year as dues. It is a constitutional provision that no debt can be contracted by the association, and no assessment can be levied upon the members beyond the dues above mentioned.

Among the possibilities—if not the probabilities—of the future, in connection with the association, are the lectures of normal classes and institutes, recently recommended in the report of the Publication Committee to our General Assembly.

The association desires to embrace in its membership every worker in the cause, and cordially invites all ladies and gentlemen who are interested in Sunday school work to apply for membership. Their membership will not involve the performance of any duty not purely voluntary. Every member is duly notified of the time and place of each meeting.

Applications may be addressed, in short form or ceremony, to Mr. Louis Kells, secretary, No. 31 Camp street.

Statistics of Intemperance

The Northwestern Christian Advocate says: The following statistics have been carefully compiled from the best authorities, and are as nearly correct as they can be made:

Liquors consumed in the United States:

	Gallons annually.
Spirituous liquors	60,572,162
Beer	270,740,611
Imported wines	10,500,000

Liquors consumed in Great Britain:

	Gallons annually.
Spirituous liquors	33,000,377
Beer and ale	906,500,000
Foreign and British wines	17,142,522

Liquors consumed in Germany:

	Gallons annually.
Beer	146,000,000
Wine	120,000,000

Liquors consumed in France:

	Gallons annually.
Spirituous liquors	27,000,000
Beer	51,800,000
Wine	600,000,000

We estimate that the world consumes twice as much as these four nations:

	Gallons annually.
Spirituous liquors	344,031,382
Beer	2,797,201,832
Wine	1,181,219,914

Cost of liquors in the world in ten years, $31,405,042,234, or twice the value of the United States of America. Allowing the average value of the world, per square mile, to equal the United States, and every one hundred and twenty years the actual cash value of the world is consumed in these drinks.

The materials used in the manufacture are annually as follows:

	Bushels of grain.	Bushels of grapes.	Value.
United States	37,495,000	2,361,312	$42,895,981
Great Britain and Ireland	63,909,500	3,781,248	69,605,920
Germany	9,125,000	31,771,285	61,196,128
France	9,385,000	171,328,571	363,600,357
The world	242,975,145	472,631,261	891,932,586

The cost in France and Germany would be modified by the cost of the grapes, which are much cheaper there.

The land, buildings, machinery, labor, etc., invested in the traffic is about as follows:

	Buildings and machinery.	Labor.
United States	$3,344,041	$9,305,104
Great Britain and Ireland	4,639,773	15,271,131
Germany	517,500	6,301,892
France	1,350,000	27,919,053
The world	9,850,228	117,821,000

	Value of land.	Total investment.
United States	$45,120,505	$125,816,815
Great Britain and Ireland	81,500,000	15,876,965
Germany	25,820,000	53,817,127
France	50,000,000	205,269,053
The world	400,000,000	1,426,943,892

Cost of alcoholic drinks in the United States annually:

Direct outlay for drink	$723,300,925
Seventy per cent. on the (gross) product which the nation should possess, but has been destroyed by the traffic	7,000,000
Direct loss on wages	70,000,000
Tenfold profit, on capital employed in the manufacture	2,500,000
Ten per cent. on capital employed in saloons	30,000,000
Charity bestowed on the poor	10,000,000
Loss by fire and land	20,000,000
Court, police, hospital expenses, charity, emigration, insurance, etc	20,000,000
Total	$1,000,000,000

This nation receives in return for this traffic:

- 200 murders,
- 500 suicides,
- 100,000 criminals,
- 200,000 paupers,
- 60,000 deaths from drunkenness,
- 1,000,000 besotted drunkards,
- 300,000 moderate drinkers who will be set adrift ten years hence,
- 500,000 homes destroyed,
- 1,000,000 children made worse than orphans.

And if the country could be searched from center to circumference, it would be impossible to find any good resulting from this traffic, or a single reason why it should exist longer.

WORSHIP OF SERPENTS.—Rev. R. G. Wilder, in the Missionary Review, makes these interesting statements from his personal observations:

The Hindoos believe that the deceased relatives come back into this world not only in serpents, but also in crows and donkeys, and every variety of the animal kingdom. We have had a Hindoo servant refuse to help us kill a cobra di capello, and give, as his apology, his apprehension that it might be his own grandfather. When attempting to kill a large serpent in our pathway, amid the forests of India, our guides have seized our arms and tried forcibly to prevent the execution of our purpose, for the same reason. And yet the Hindoo idea of transmigration involves the belief that any and every animal existence is a "spirit embodiment"—the home of some deceased human being—it may be a near relative. Doubtless all animal life is worshiped, too, by many superstitious and uncultured tribes; and this, so far as true, detracts from the peculiarity of serpent-worship. And yet in India, certainly, there is a specialty in the worship of serpents. We have seen hundreds of Hindoo women going out together on Nagpunchmi—the regular day of the month for worshiping the cobra—to localities infested by scores and hundreds of that class of serpents, bearing on their heads large baskets of sweetmeats, fruits and choicest articles to deposit as offerings at the holes of these snakes.

As to the "development of the serpent cultus," may it not have depended as much on the idea of the destructive power of the serpent as on that of its being typical of the reproductive principle of life?

Periodicals.

—Eternal Punishment is the title of a pamphlet by Rev. J. M. Boland, A. M., published by the Advocate Publishing House, St. Louis, Logan D. Dameron, agent, in which the author replies to Henry Ward Beecher and Canon Farrar. It is a cogent and edifying tract, and its circulation will do good. Price, twenty cents.

THE CASTAWAY.—A pastor once related, in my hearing, how he once had under his care a church blessed with many excellent women. One of the best of these, who had overworked herself, suddenly became as she supposed, "a castaway." She sent for her pastor, and confided to him her deplorable condition. She could not pray; to read the Bible was a hated task; she must be a castaway.

The pastor considered awhile; he then said: "Have you confidence enough in me to do exactly what I tell you?"

"Certainly," she replied; she had all confidence in her pastor's judgment.

"Put your hand in mine," he said. She obeyed. "Now give me your solemn promise never to open a Bible, or to attempt to pray, until I give you leave."

After a moment's hesitation she made the required promise, and the minister took his leave.

I think it was that very day, perhaps the day after, that a message came in hot haste for the minister to hurry to the good sister's house. With a quiet smile, the pastor turned to that errand. As he showed his face at the door, the sister rushed to him, crying: "Release me! Release me quick; or I shall pray! I must pray, I will pray—you shall not hinder me!" "Do pray," said her pastor; and that was the last of her being "a castaway."—Augusta Moore.

It is related that an Indian once brought up a young lion, and, finding him weak and harmless, never attempted to control him. Every day the lion gained in strength and became more difficult to manage. At last, when excited by rage, he fell upon the Indian and tore him to pieces. It is thus with evil habits and bad passions. They are like this lion—they will cause us much vexation in after-life, and may perhaps destroy us. Youth, remember and beware.

In the old church-yard of Worth, Dorsetshire, England, is a tomb with the following inscription: "Benjamin Jesty, of Downshay, died April 16, 1816 aged seventy-nine. He was born at Yetminster, in this county, and was an upright, honest man particularly noted for having been the first person known that introduced the cow pox by inoculation, and who, for his great strength of mind, made the experiment on the cow pox in his wife and two sons in the year 1774."

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE delivers the greatest inducements to Eastern and European travelers this season. It should be known to all that this line has been immensely improved during the past year. It has, in fact, been almost entirely rebuilt. It has now a fine steel rail track, laid upon new ties, and an excellent road-bed. This enables it to make as fast time as any line to New York, with entire safety, and without the appearance of rapid running. It connections from Cincinnati and Chicago bring among the finest trains in the world. The train leaving at 8½ P. M., one hour later than any other line, makes exactly the same time to New York as its quickest rival. Leave one hour later. New York by 9 A. M. The Jackson route has been considerably shortened, what it is made in Union Depot at Cincinnati, Chicago or St. Louis.

Passengers direct to New York by the Jackson route pass through the splendid scenery and coal belt of the Alleghany Mountains. Those going by Chicago pass by daylight in full view of Niagara Falls, and also have but one change of cars from New Orleans to New York.

SINGER MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—The advertisement of the well-known Singer sewing machine is on this page. This machine has been in use for so many years, and has given such satisfaction to all who have used it, that the demand for it is greater than for any other machine in the market. Any one having a Singer can rely upon its being first class in every respect. The prices for all of the different styles have been very much reduced, so as to put them within the reach of all.

NEW YORK AND BOSTON.—Travelers should take the Providence line of steamers from New York for Boston. This is the finest line leaving the former city. The company have recently built a new steamer, the Massachusetts, the palace steamer of the world, a floating forty-two miles by rail from Providence to Boston. For further information call or write to or see A. W. Elkins, Esq., general passenger agent, or E. A. Bevan, general freight agent. See advertisement.

FOR RATS AND MICE.—Mitchell's poisoned wheat is guaranteed to drive away the above disagreeable and destructive vermin. It can be procured at Finlay & Thompson's, New Orleans, or from the manufacturers, M. T. Treamer & Co. Those who will try this remedy a trial should send for a box (which will only cost twenty-five cents. See advertisement.

DRY GOODS.—The advertisement of those reliable gentlemen, E. H. Adams & Bro., 591 Magazine street, will be seen on the fifth page. Their store is the most attractive in that portion of the city. Give them a call.

KEEP'S PATENT PARTLY-MADE Dress-Shirts.—These shirts are made from the best Wamsutta muslin and the best Irish linen, all sizes, and perfect fitting. See advertisement.

SPORTSMEN'S DEPOT.—Articles of all kinds for fishermen can be had at that reliable gentleman's, R. Thelen, 45 St. Charles street. Send in your orders.

TRAVELERS' OFFICIAL GUIDE.—Before traveling supply yourself with the above guide. Price only fifty cents.

PAN-HANDLE AND LOUISVILLE ROUTE.—Those who contemplate and desire to travel should not fail to observe that by the Louisville route Pan-Handle and Pennsylvania railroad, to New York and all other Northeastern cities, there is but one change of cars, and that change is in the Pan-Handle depot at Cincinnati, which is really no change at all, as a fresh car takes the place of the old one while the travelers are breakfasting. The scenery of this route is very much like the mountain beauties of Switzerland—mountain piled on mountain, and range after range coming into view, until nature resembles one vast panorama. The food at the way-stations on this thoroughfare is of the choicest character, especially that obtained at Columbus, Ohio, Pittsburg, Altoona, Harrisburg and Philadelphia. This grand national route is double-tracked and stone-ballasted, and free from dust. Boston passengers by this route have no street transfer at New York, as the whole train is transferred at Jersey City around New York to Harlem river, and there run on shore and on to Boston. Matt. Kennedy, Esq., general Southern agent of the Louisville line, and Col. W. M. Washington, general Southern agent of the Pan-Handle route can be found at the railroad offices, from whom passengers can obtain sleeping-car accommodations from Cincinnati to New York in advance of departure.

OUR READERS are directed to an advertisement, in another column, of Drs. Starkey & Palen of Philadelphia, who treat chronic diseases of all kinds by the inhalation of oxygen. These gentlemen will give any information required as to their mode of treatment on application.

THE air of perfection, cleanliness and home-like comfort which is so apparent at the American House, Basin, is one of the characteristic features of that well-regulated establishment. To those disposed to economize this popular hotel offers an opportunity seldom found at so thoroughly a first class house, having reduced its rates to $2 and $2.50 per day.

WE REFER parties needing steam engines, boilers, mills, gins, presses, etc., to the advertisement of H. Dudley Coleman & Bro., No. 12 Union street, New Orleans, La., they being manufacturers and dealers of well-established reputation.

EXQUISITE PLEASURE.

The most exquisite pleasure is derived from Dr. Price's Unique Perfumes. His Alsia Bouquet, Sweet Clover, Ladies' Favorite, and other hand kerchief odors, are as fragrant and natural as the flowers from which they are made. They are truly delightful.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

WILLCOFT'S TONIC!—Unfailing And Infallible—The great Chill Tonic cures Chills without the intervention of doctors and their bills. STONE IN THE BLADDER
RELIEVED BY THE
BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

AFTER THE LIFE OF THE PATIENT WAS DESPAIRED OF BY HIS MEDICAL ADVISERS, THE STONE DISSOLVED IN THREE HOURS IN A GLASS OF THE LITHIA WATER.

CASE OF MR. C. WOLFF, of Point Coupee, La.

POINT COUPEE, LA., April 4, 1878.

MR. THOMAS F. GOODE: By request I give you the following history of my case: Two years ago I began to suffer with severe pain in my kidneys, and in have periodical attacks each about two a week, which caused the most excruciating agony, from which I was hardly relieved by the discharge of a stone from one to six grains in weight. There was never entire freedom from the pain in the kidneys. In eighteen months I discharged seven large stones, besides quantities of smaller stones and sand. As the result of this protracted and great suffering my general health was poor, my condition that my physicians advised me that I had nothing to hope for from medicine, that my case was hopeless, and I took to bed for relief, only to die.

In this state of things, about six months ago I was advised by Mr. L. Lyons, a druggist of New Orleans, to try the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER Spring, No. 2. A week after I began to use it I had a slight attack, in which I passed two small stones. Pleading one of these in a glass of the Water, in three hours I found it dissolved into a thin clear, which gave me confidence, and I persevered in its use. I have had no attack since. The pain in my kidneys has entirely disappeared. I have regained my usual weight, and my general health is pretty restored. I very cheerfully acknowledge my indebtedness to my life and the comfort which I now enjoy to this great boon in giving Water. Respectfully,

C. WOLFF.

This Water, in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles, can be had at the Springs, and of A. J. LYONS, Wholesale Druggist, 42 and 44 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

SWEET POTATOES.

THE PROPER SOIL.

A gray, stiff soil, with clay subsoil, or reddish upper soil, with a subsoil of clay.

BEDDING POTATOES, ETC.

Clear off a bed four feet wide and long enough to suit your purpose. Break it deeply, and level the ground. Cover it with good-sized potatoes, nearly touching each other. Barely cover them with strong stable manure. If the latter is dry, shower on water through the bottom of a basket, and then cover with rich earth three inches deep. If grass and weeds subsequently spring up, put on another layer of earth one inch thick. Bed about the latter part of February, and set out your drawers, as soon as you well can, from eighteen to twenty-four inches apart. Do not set them out immediately after a heavy rain, as some do. The wet earth pressed around the roots will harden in the sun and wind, and imprison your drawers in a solid clod of earth. Wait until the soil is in good plowing condition. When your plants get ready do not wait for weeks until the genial showers descend; make a thick batter out of rich stable manure and water; dip the roots into it, and set them out late in the evening, leaving a small depression around each root. Into this pour a gill of water. As soon as it sinks down, draw up a little dry earth around the root of the plant. You may then smile at the greenness of your neighbors, who are still watching the West and hoping for a shower.

PREPARATION OF POTATO LAND.

Break it deep with a turn-plow in January. As soon as your drawers are ready, lay off the land three feet nine inches wide, with a long seven-inch steel shovel. Ridge and break the middles deeply with a turning-plow. Scatter a liberal supply of compost, made out of stable manure and cotton seed, along the water-furrow. Ridge upon this with a small scooter. Then open this ridge deeply with a good seven-inch steel shovel. Ridge upon this last furrow with a small scooter. Your manure is now thoroughly incorporated with the soil. Finish the middles with a turn-plow or "Farmer's Friend," and your beds are ready for the drawers; and you have plowed the land over three times. Be sure not to plow soil when it is too wet, especially if it is still and clayey.

CULTIVATION.

If the ground becomes packed by hard rains, use a large buzzard—otherwise a sweep. But little dirt should be placed around the plants, and that should be done early. Keep your beds up to the original size. Do not let the vines take root. To lay by, throw the vines into alternate middles, and let them lay there; but do not let them take root. Every other middle will be left open for the plow. Be sure not to let your potatoes suffer for work.

DIGGING.

As soon as the vines have been half killed by frost go to digging. Do not wait till the ground freezes. What you dig in the forenoon, put up in the evening. Put not more than thirty bushels in a hill. Cover them with pine straw, taking it off every day for two or three days, until they are well dried and aired.

TAKING CARE OF POTATOES.

Make a very shallow circular bed and cover it with dry pine straw. Pour down thirty bushels of potatoes. After they have been dried or aired, as previously stated, put corn-stalks around them from base to apex. Cover the stalks with pine straw, and this with earth, to the depth of three inches. Upon the summit of the hill put a handful of pine straw, and upon this earth, and then cap with a good solid piece of bark or plank.

If you prefer to shelter your potatoes, you need not put so much dirt on the outside of the hill; and you should leave a small aperture at the summit for the escape of heated air. A shelter should have no leaks. The temperature of the hill should be kept in equilibrium as much as possible. If the potatoes be kept either too hot or too cold they will rot. My article may throw a little light upon this point, but nothing short of much experience will enable a farmer to successfully cover his potatoes with stalk, straw and dirt so as to preserve the right temperature amid the ever-changing seasons.

TAKING UP POTATOES.

Exhume a whole hill at one time. Place alternate layers of dry sand and potatoes in a pine box in a well-covered house. Some prefer kiln-dried sand. A better plan than this is to put them in one and a half or two-bushel hemp sacks and then stow away in a closet. They will keep well and be very sweet. A hill taken up in May—and the sprouts rubbed off if there be any—and sunned two or three days, and then sacked and stored away in a closet, will keep until August.

MISCELLANEOUS.

He plants the yellow yam, and yellow-skin Spanish, with white meat. He has planted them for the last forty years; obtained them originally in Jefferson county, Ga. They are medium in size, of a uniform color through and through, and delicious in flavor. I often meet up with larger potatoes, and, it may be, more prolific ones; but when I break them open they are of divers colors within, red, yellow, white and mealy, with all the shades of intermediate colors between these; and often the flavor is anything but agreeable. I had almost as soon eat a black gum root boiled with lobsters. Joseph Cook, the celebrated lecturer, says: "It is very seldom that large quantity and a high order of quality are found in combination."

To preserve the original purity of his seed, he sets out vines every alternate year in an isolated patch, to make his bedding potatoes. When this is not sufficient, vine potatoes are made and bedded several years in succession, until his potatoes have been brought back to their original standard.

FOUR HUNDRED AND FIFTY BUSHELS PER ACRE.

He made the above amount on one acre, of the yellow Spanish, by the following modus operandi: Broke his land deeply, and checked it off each way three and a half feet apart with a long eight-inch shovel. Dropped into each check a half peck or more of good rotten stable manure. Upon the manure small hillocks were made with a weeding-hoe as large as the checks would admit of. When these were about one-third finished the manure and soil were thoroughly incorporated. A chop with weeding-hoe was made on the summit of each hillock six inches deep. The Spanish potatoes—which have the form of yams—were not bedded this time, but cut in pieces about two inches in length, and three of these were stuck down in the chopped summit of each hillock, and the soil nicely rounded over them with the hands.

CULTIVATION.

A buzzard furrow was run between the hills both ways. The hills were then scraped down shallow with a weeding-hoe. The earth was then lightly thrown back. This cultivation with buzzard and hoe was repeated until they were laid by.

TO MAKE IRISH POTATOES.

All potatoes seem to require the same character of soil. Break deeply and leave the land level. Lay off deeply, with a seven-inch steel shovel, three and a half feet wide. Cut the potatoes in the usual way, and drop the pieces eighteen inches apart in the bottom of this furrow. Fill it up with rotten stable manure, or hog hair, or rotten wheat straw. Ridge upon it with a five-inch scoop, and break out the middles with the same. Then mulch with wheat straw, putting on a bed thick enough to keep down grass and weeds, as well as to keep the soil moist and mellow.—James H. Oliphant, in Southern Cultivator.

ALFALFA OR LUCERNE.

This is one of the earliest plants mentioned in agricultural history, and is supposed to have been introduced into Greece five hundred years before the Christian era; thence its cultivation extended into France, where it has ever since been considered a valuable forage plant; but in Great Britain it is not esteemed very highly, perhaps because it comes in competition with many of the best and most nutritious grasses. In the south of England and on some of the Channel Islands lucerne is cultivated to a limited extent, but it is a plant better adapted to hot climates than to cool ones, and has, therefore, never become popular among the farmers of the latter.

The early Spanish settlers of South America introduced lucerne as a forage plant likely to be of great value in that country, and their expectations were fully realized, for it soon became naturalized, and its cultivation extended to all parts of the country. When the early settlers of California were in search of some better forage plant than the native grasses, they fortunately procured seed of what is called Chili clover, or alfalfa, the latter being the South American Spanish name. But it was soon discovered that the clover from Chili was nothing more than the very ancient and well-known lucerne of Europe. Lucerne, as we have said, is especially adapted to warm climates, and succeeds best on very deep, rich soil, failing alike on heavy clays, or thin, light sand. Its roots penetrate the earth deeply, and consequently it withstands long and severe droughts better than plants which do not have long roots. For the Southern States there are few perennial plants which give greater promise of value than lucerne; but considerable care should be exercised in the selection of the proper soil. The fodder is of an excellent quality, and the yield very abundant. But we have little faith in the adaptation of this plant to our Northern States, although it succeeds in very warm and deep soils in the Middle States.—New York Sun.

TRAIN THE COLTS.

The horse submits to man's authority for the reason that he is made to believe man is the stronger. He is kind and tractable from being treated kindly and handled lovingly. What a horse is once taught, no matter how young, he never forgets. When the colt is running by its mother's side it can be best taught valuable lessons. Man's strength can then easier overcome it. The more you talk to and handle a colt the more it will know and the kinder it will be. No one should ever permit a colt to have the mastery in strength; consequently small boys should not handle them until the colt is entirely subdued in this respect. Nor should a colt be ever hitched or led by a halter which he can break. If he once learns he can break his halter it will take years to break him of the fault, if it is ever cured. But by kind handling and playing with them—which any one can enjoy who has a heart within him—they will ever after be easily caught, be kind in service, and more trusting in danger or difficulty. When the colt comes about you never abuse him, but with kindness educate a familiarity with him. Thus he will be always gentle, and easily adapted to any work. There will be no trouble in breaking in such a colt. He will naturally take to it. By being treated viciously the colt can also be taught mean tricks and vicious habits.—Iowa Register.

WHAT MAKES GOOD WHEAT LAND?—When first broken up by the march of civilization the prairies of the West had been receiving for years vast deposits of ash resulting from prairie fires. Now this ash contains exactly the constituents required for the nurture of the wheat berry, and this fact will account for the luxuriant crops of early days. What is now termed "new land" in these old sections is hardly such in the sense that it was years ago; for, although it may never have been broken up by the plow, its herbage has been grazed off annually, and this exhausts the soil quite as readily as the production of cereal crops. The same holds true of other sections of the country where the yield of wheat is decreasing. Proper fertilization of the land is not resorted to in order to compensate in some measure for systematical drawing off the phosphates in successive crops. Wheat is exactly what it was thirty years ago, but the land is not.

PURIFYING CISTERN-WATER.—It is frequently the case that cistern-water becomes offensive and quite unfit for use, which in its pure state is the sweetest and wholesomest of all water. To destroy this offensiveness, lime has been recommended, a large lump or two; but this must harden the water. Charcoal is frequently used with good effect; but that which is most efficient, as a correspondent in Rhode Island assures us, is to let the supplying spout run to the bottom of the cistern. The fresh water, being heavier than the old, forces the latter to the surface, and is thus consumed before it becomes offensive, and so on at each rain.—Germantown Telegraph.

LOOK TO YOUR CELLARS.—Clear out all decaying vegetables, for the bad air will find its way into the rooms above and poison your wife and children, who may pine away and die. Do not, in such cases, lay it to some mysterious Providence. When the air is dry outside and near freezing, or a few degrees below, open the windows and cool and purify the air. Keep the windows closed on damp and warm and on very cold days. Pick up the rubbish; sweep up the litter; whitewash the wall and ceiling.

The unity of the church is certainly much insisted on, and very important. Yet we must take care not to prescribe one for another a form or a name, according to our own opinions, especially in incidentals which do not belong to the fundamentals of faith. In these respects there must be a variety of judgment. It is enough if we agree in all matters essential to salvation.—Lange.

Satan's temptations on Christ were like the motions of a serpent on a rock (Prov. xxx, 19,) which make no impression, and leave no dent or trace behind them. But on us they are as the motions of a serpent on sand or dust—they make a print, and leave a stain, on the imagination at least, if not on the heart.—Worthington.

THE TRIUMPH

Steam COTTON BAND PULLER

AND BUCKLER.

THE ATTENTION of the Compress owners in the United States is called to this

NEW AND IMPORTANT INVENTION.

This STEAM PULLER has been thoroughly tested, and has demonstrated the fact that we can apply to Cotton Bands any required tensil strain and BUCKLE THEM AT EXACTLY THE HIGHEST POINT REACHED, and no slipping of the bands through the buckle, all the bands being drawn taut and buckled at the same instant, turning out a perfect bale, and without regard to the size, weight or shape of the bale.

THE BUCKLE is simply perfect; it is cheap and strong, and can be furnished on the order of a day by the million. The old bands are used as they come off the bales, and SURPRISE is last.

THE PULLER can be attached to any size or style of press, and at an expense that is slight compared to the benefit to be derived by the Compress. It is simple, and can be operated by regular compressmen without danger of getting out of order. The speed is equal or greater than ordinary hand-tying.

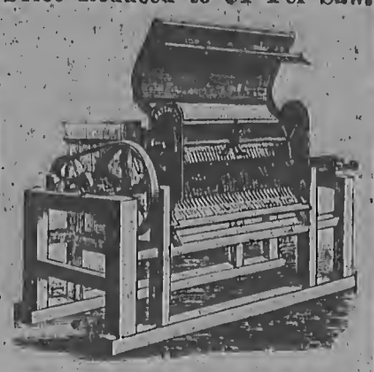
DANIEL PRATT'S IMPROVED

"Revolving Head" Cotton Gin.

PATENTED JULY 15, 1873.

Price Reduced to $4 Per Saw.



THIS GIN has been in use for the past five seasons, and several recent improvements have been added. It obviates all friction at the ends of the cotton box, prevents the roll from breaking, and gives a Larger Yield of Lint from the same Amount of Seed than any other Gin in use. The Revolving Head lightens the draft and causes the Gin to run faster with less driving power, thus doing a great deal more work within the same time, while economizing steam or animal power, than any other Gin. The seed being ginned very close, the length of the staple is increased, producing cotton on this account of a greater market value. This improved value, given by length of staple, with extra production of lint, added to increased amount of work done, more than covers the cost of the Gin in every 100 bales ginned. MEDICAL.

The German Star in Louisiana.

THE SO-CALLED WONDER DOCTOR has arrived safely in New Orleans, with his boat and family. He has made a twelve months' tour through the State of Louisiana to show to the public what he can do with his AMERICAN HERB MEDICINES for the diseased human system and organs. The Doctor is a thorough and experienced German chemist of the herb and vegetable kingdom, and has spent eighteen years in exploring America for the purpose of discovering the most valuable medical herbs growing in America. He has succeeded in discovering the secrets of all Indian tribes in connection with the vegetable kingdom, and thus is enabled, as a practical physician, to prescribe these herbs to his patients. The Doctor has been wonderfully successful in the treatment of his patients, of whom he has had in his charge 1,668 within nine months. These comprised cases of sickness of every description, and of both sexes. All these patients were completely restored to health in a very short time. Everywhere in the State the Doctor had to promise to establish himself in New Orleans, which he has resolved to do and carried out, in order to relieve, as fast as Nature will permit, the long sufferings of so many of his fellow-beings. None but American herbs will be employed by the Doctor in the preparation of his medicines, and all patients who may honor him with their confidence and client age will be treated with them.

The Doctor has established his office and a Chemical Laboratory, as well as a complete Private Hospital, at No. 105 BOURBON STREET, between Toulouse and St. Louis streets, so as to give to the afflicted from everywhere an opportunity to receive medical attention at his hands. The rooms are all well fitted up, and absolutely under his personal supervision. His terms are moderate. Letters of inquiry (with three-cent stamp inclosed) will be answered promptly. Orders for medicines will be filled upon the receipt of the money, and mailed free to any place in the United States. Address

MEDICAL.

PRAIRIE WEED.

CONQUEST, CAYUGA CO., N. Y.
DR. DONALD KENNEDY. Dear Sir:—With feelings of profound gratitude, I write to tell you the value the Prairie Weed has been to us in our affliction. Though our son has passed beyond mortal care, his life was prolonged for months by the wonderful medical virtues of your medicine. Our conviction now is, that he was beyond cure some time before we heard of the Prairie Weed. As soon as we heard of it, we obtained of our druggist a bottle, and in an incredibly short time found its beneficial effects. At that time he was taking very fast, and the amount of his suffering was exceedingly painful, not only to him, but to our whole little family circle. The continual question harassing all our thoughts was, What can we do for hope? All medical remedies and prescriptions from eminent physicians had failed; our anxiety and anguish were beyond description as we witnessed his sufferings, and could do nothing for him. But would yield any relief. But when your Prairie Weed came, it relieved him of pain and distress in the stomach, which had always occurred immediately after taking even the simplest food into his stomach, and lasting all day, and nothing has failed all the time, the whole day long. Your medicine relieved him entirely of pain, his appetite returned, and food sat easy until life ceased. His kidneys, which were almost entirely dormant, voiding not more than one-tenth the amount of what they should, and that very much thickened, were restored to their natural functions, and all are cased and regularity ensued. Chills and fever had troubled him for eight months, which we had tried to break up, but they would return in three or four days as severe as formerly. Your medicine relieved him of the chills, and he was troubled with but slight flashes of fever, of a hectic sort. His cough was far more loose after taking the Prairie Weed. He raised a large amount from the lungs, and the secretions increased, till the close of life; but he could unloose the lungs with so much ease that his sleep was but little disturbed, the days and nights passing quietly away till the last hour. Some other cures for consumption were heard of and asked for, but none worked so well as the Prairie Weed, to which he returned after three or four days, fully satisfied that it surpassed them all in adaptation and excellency. If we had heard of your medicine six or eight months earlier, I think it would have given us the life and company of our son perhaps for years. Our obligations to you are beyond our ability to express. The Prairie Weed has smoothed the pathway of life to the very last moment, released from a large amount of pain and suffering, lengthened life some months, and saved us a tolerable amount of solicitude of a very painful kind. So long as we have ability to improve the means sent for blessings in behalf of mortal man, for you we will ever plead.
Gratefully yours,
J. W. GUTHRIE.

MILK OF MAGNESIA
IS THE best preparation known for all disturbed conditions of the stomach. It immediately and certainly cures DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, HEARTBURN, SOUR STOMACH and HEADACHES caused by acidity of the stomach. The pleasant taste and milk-like smoothness of this preparation renders it very valuable for infants, requiring no persuasion to induce them to take it. It positively prevents food scorching on the stomach, and will act as a laxative when used as directed. It is also peculiarly adapted to females. The smoothness of this preparation and its perfect solubility are made fully apparent in the following illustrations. They represent a fractional part of a single drop magnified 250 diameters. The first the calcined Magnesia as taken with water. The second the Milk of Magnesia as offered. The difference between them is most striking, for whereas the undissolved precipitates and particles in the drop of calcined Magnesia are exhibited with terrible distinctness, the Milk of Magnesia has all the appearance of a cloudy vapor, entirely free from the objectionable precipitates; in fact perfectly dissolved.
Be sure to get MILK OF MAGNESIA. Ask your druggist for it, and take none other. It is entirely different from all other preparations of Magnesia. Physicians and others not already acquainted with this preparation can obtain explanatory circular by addressing

INDIAN TRADITION OF THE FALL.—A very striking tradition of the creation and fall of man is given by G. Kohl in "Kitchi Gama, or Wanderings Around Lake Superior," translated in 1860. He mentions the following singular traditions among the Red Indians: "The first man and woman were placed in a garden rich with all manner of fruit. They ate and lived there for days and years in pleasure and happiness; and the Great Spirit often came to them and conversed with them. 'One thing,' he said, 'I warn you against. Come hither. See, this tree in the middle of the garden is not good. In a short time this tree will blossom and bear fruits, which look very fine, and taste very sweet, but do not eat of them, for if you do so ye will die.' One day, however, when the woman went walking in the garden, she heard a very kindly and sweet voice say to her: 'Why dost thou not eat of this beautiful fruit? It tastes splendidly.' She resisted for some time. The voice was repeated. The fruit smelled pleasantly, and the woman liked it a little. At length she swallowed it entirely, and felt as if drunk. When her husband came to her, soon after, she persuaded him also to eat it. He did so, and also felt as if drunk. But this scarce had happened ere the silver scales, with which their bodies had been covered, fell off; only twenty of these scales remained on, but lost all their brilliancy—ten on their fingers and ten on their toes."

THIEVING RATS.—At the Old Colony Depot, Boston, the ticket agent has been in the habit of leaving from $15 to $30 in the money drawer over night. Last Wednesday morning the paper money in the drawer was missing, and the night clerk insisted that he had left some bills there on the previous evening. The officials left $37 in the drawer the next night, and found only $8 the following morning. The mice were suspected, and the agent hit upon an ingenious device for detecting their place of deposit. He procured about three hundred yards of very fine and strong black silk thread, one end of which was very neatly woven lengthwise through a $5 bill, the remainder being wound upon a spool, which played easily upon a spindle in such a manner as to unwind with the slightest touch. The bill, which was counterfeit, was placed in one of the compartments of the drawer with another equally worthless. On Saturday morning the two bills and most of the paper were gone, and about fifty feet of silk unwound. A carpenter was employed to find the other end of that thread, it being had to tear down the station to do it. After some hammering and sawing the silk was traced to a little smuggery between a couple of pieces of boarding. The nest fairly bristled with bank notes, and contained the money combed remains of many others. The fragments of mutilated currency were worth $50.

A GOOD LIFE.

BY G. BONAR.

He liveth long who liveth well;
All else is life but flung away;
He liveth longest who can tell
Of true things truly done each day.

Then fill each hour with what will last;
Buy up the moments as they go;
The life above, when this is passed,
Is the ripe fruit of life below.

Sow love, and taste its fruitage pure;
Sow peace, and reap its harvest bright;
Sow sunbeams on the rock and moor,
And find a harvest home of light.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The President has signed the army bill and the river and harbor bill; also the act authorizing the Barataria Ship Canal Company to construct and operate a ship canal from New Orleans to the Gulf of Mexico, and the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to turn over to the Governor of Alabama such tents, poles and pins as he may require for the use of the volunteers of the State at their summer encampment.

PORTLAND, OREGON, June 18.—The latest election returns undoubtedly elect Thayer for Governor. His majority will range from 40 to 70. The Legislature on joint ballot will have a Democratic majority of 12.

NEW YORK, June 19.—The Eothen sailed to-day to search for relics of Sir John Franklin. Col. Gilder, just before sailing, stated he would probably be absent two years or more. The searching party expect to make the voyage northward in about two months, reaching Repulse Bay during the latter part of August.

It is intended to stop at that place until spring, there being no snow on the ground during winter. In the early part of spring the party will cross the country on sledges to King William's Land. The journey will occupy probably four or five weeks. After landing the searching party at Repulse Bay, the Eothen will depart on a whaling voyage.

Sixty-nine colored emigrants sailed to-day for Liberia, under the auspices of the American Colonization Society, who will support the emigrants for six months after their arrival. A dozen cabin passengers are also on board. It is understood efforts will be made to go up the back country of Liberia, and, by the construction of roads, bring products to the sea-coast.

VICKSBURG, June 19.—A fire at Edwards' Depot, Miss., this morning, destroyed McCain's jewelry and McCain & Bro.'s drug stores, Brocatta's grocery and bar-room, Mrs. Butler's house and fruit stand, J. W. Waldinger's store, D. J. Donovan's agriculture store, Kelly & Maple's tenpin alley, T. D. Paddleford's, two stores, and the store of J. W. Key. Other buildings were damaged. The fire was incendiary. Estimated loss, [illegible].

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—A messenger from the vicinity of Camp Harney reports serious depredations by a party under Eagan have burned Diamond ranche, in Happy Valley, in the rear of Stein's Mountain. The Indians have captured over four hundred horses. Troops and supplies are greatly needed.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 19.—Dr. Charles Hodge, senior professor of theology at Princeton Seminary, died to-day.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Congress adjourned sine die at seven o'clock this morning.

The Senate passed the House bill to pay George H. Middlings for mail service from Santa Fe to San Antonio.

The Senate laid aside the House bill fixing the pay of letter carriers. House bill establishing post routes was called up, but objection was made to its consideration.

The Senate, after three o'clock, was several times left without a quorum. Many senators were asleep in the committee and cloak rooms. Mr. Thurman appealed to the senators not to leave the chamber, and said that, should there be a quorum wanting, the sundry civil bill might fail, and an extra session of Congress, which would cost the people $100,000 more, would be necessary.

He hoped the senators would relent, and that this session would be finished with credit to Congress.

The House was busy all night considering various resolutions and motions from members regarding public business, nearly all of which could not reach the Senate in the regular way, and of course came to naught. At seven o'clock the usual expressions from presiding officers of both houses were made in the respective chambers, and the second session of the Forty-Fifth Congress expired. The President was at his room at the capitol all night. He signed the sundry civil bill just ten minutes before adjournment.

Just before adjournment the President sent to the Senate the nominations of Rear Admiral Daniel Ammen, Col. John G. Barnard and Edward Whitney, of the District of Columbia, to be commissioners to ascertain the cost of removing the Naval Observatory in Washington.

On motion of Mr. Sargent the Senate immediately went into executive session and the nominations were confirmed without discussion.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The will of the late William Cullen Bryant is in Mr. Bryant's own handwriting, only two persons, besides his two daughters, get any part of his property. All of his real estate, books, plates, pictures, furniture, and interest in the Evening Post, is bequeathed to his two daughters, Fanny Bryant Godwin and Julia Sands Bryant, with the exception of the small legacies to the two parties before mentioned. The value of the estate is not given.

BALTIMORE, June 23.—Col George P. Kayne, mayor of this city, died this morning. For the past year he had been suffering with Bright's disease, which was the primary cause of death. He was an active and popular citizen, and had filled many important offices.

MONTGOMERY, June 24.—A fire commenced at noon to-day in the cotton compress of Hunter & O'Connell, caused by treading on a parlor match which had been dropped on the floor. A cotton sample caught fire, and the flames spread so rapidly that everything in reach was enveloped.

The fire immediately extended into the Planters' Warehouse, adjoining. The two houses had between 1,000 and 1,100 bales of cotton, nearly every one of which was insured. The compress building and the warehouse buildings were badly injured.

NEW YORK, June 21.—A special from Berlin says: "It is fully confirmed that Russia accepts the British programme regarding Bulgaria, and that there is an increased probability of Austria acquiring Bosnia and Herzegovina. The Russians are sending all military prisoners to Siberia.

A Madrid dispatch reports that the Queen of Spain is dying. She has received the last sacrament in the presence of the King and royal family and ministers.

FOREIGN

ROME, June 17.—In the city elections the Catholics elected two out of twelve municipal councillors.

LONDON, June 18.—The illusion that the Berlin Congress would finish its work in ten days gives place to the conviction that it will last many weeks. The Congress meets at two o'clock to-day. It is expected Bulgaria will be the subject for consideration, for, however pregnant the Asiatic question may be with important consequences, nothing compares in immediate importance and in the certainty of its ultimate results with the proposed reorganization of Bulgaria. The question is simply whether Europe or Russia shall exercise a preponderant influence in European Turkey. The Congress could not deal hastily or rapidly with a question so important and so complex; its delays and frequent adjournments, so far from suggesting an unfavorable issue, only show that the Congress is a real, not merely a formal, assembly, and that it will enter thoroughly into the question submitted to it. The truth is, it would be impossible to bring together a body of such powerful statesmen merely to ratify foregone conclusions.

The next sitting of the Congress will be on Wednesday.

Lord Beaconsfield, previous to quitting London, received a message letter and sent it to the Berlin police.

Detailed accounts confirm the collapse of the cotton operatives' strike, but it is evident that a strong majority of the operatives still favor resistance. The Masters' Executive Committee has resolved, as a precautionary measure to recommend a reservation of power to renew the lockout on the shortest notice.

HAVANA, June 18.—Latest San Domingo advices report that Gonzales was elected president. Peace reigns throughout and the country is flourishing.

LONDON, June 20.—The Times' correspondent at Berlin says: The compliance of Russia with the demand of England and Austria for the evacuation of Bulgaria by the Russians on or shortly after the conclusion of peace, and the garrisoning of the Balkan line by Turks, is deemed sine qua non on which the success of the Congress depends.

LONDON, June 24.—The Post, in a leading editorial, says: Russia is now authoritatively told that she is as far from Constantinople, if not indeed farther, than she was when the war began. Herein lies the bitterness of the mortification to which she must now submit.

The Times' Berlin correspondent says: Sophia will be included in Bulgaria, not in Roumelia. The powers consented to this on condition that the frontier pass so close to the south boundary of the town as not to menace Austrian interests in that quarter.

It is told of a coal agent that on a recent trip he was attacked by highway robbers; who demanded his money. As he was too prudent to carry money in the country, they failed to make a haul out of their victim. "But," said the agent, "I have some splendid maps of the country along with me, which I should like to show you." And in a twinkling he was off his horse, had a map stuck upon a pole, and explained it so effectively that he sold each of the bandits a map, pocketed the money, and resumed his journey.

Bishop McCoskrey, of Michigan, has made a full resignation of his position as Bishop, and also of Protestant Episcopal minister, on account, as he says, of his physical condition. The Michigan Diocesan Convention has voted him an annuity of $1,500.

That is true cultivation which gives us sympathy with every form of human life, and enables us to work most successfully for its advancement. Refinement that carries us away from our fellow-men is not God's refinement.

Respectable Gambling.

Gambling, in certain forms, is a recognized vice, and is an offense against the law. The houses in which it is carried on are denominated "hells," and those who conduct them, or are professionally engaged there, bear a damaged reputation, though they are not as often punished as they ought to be. But gambling is not by any means confined to the haunts of forbidden sport. It makes its appearance in connection with pursuits of unquestionable legality and respectability, and even —sanctity, we were about to add; but will say religiousness.

Take the business of stock speculation, for example. And, lest we should be thought to assume to criticise what we do not understand, we invite our readers, with ourselves, to learn of one who speaks from abundant knowledge. Experto crede, which may be rendered: Put faith in an expert. A writer in the Examiner and Chronicle says on this subject:

"The Stock Exchange, as at present managed and patronized, is a great gambling machine. It is at the mercy of professional sharpers, playing against the duped public with loaded dice, marked cards and false tables; and men venture in it that which is not their own. For several years I was an active and heavy 'operator,' and for several years since while not buying or selling a single share, I have occupied a position whose duties have compelled me to be a careful observer of things on Wall street and its vicinity. I ought not, therefore, to be necessary for me to say that I fully appreciate the uses of the Stock Exchange. It is a necessity. A market for the securities there dealt in is a permanent need. The tone of financial honor observed in much of its business leaves little to be asked for. No more trustworthy men can be found than some whose names appear on the records of the Stock Exchange. But there is no difference in morals, none in any adaptation of the laws of chance, none in the specific opportunities given for the operations of the 'blackleg,' between the accustomed 'margin' methods of Wall street and those of other gambling fraternities. Nothing here said applies to that moderate part of the business of the Stock Exchange arising from bona fide purchases for investment, or sales of investments for cash to realize. It is to the movements of the street, which have their origin in the ventures to obtain money or property without giving any real equivalent therefor. In other words, the evil complained of is the systematic effort to rob, under a cloak of sufficient width and respectability to hide the iniquity of the deed from even the robber himself, while incurring no peril from the hand of the law."

"The legitimate business of buying and selling securities would require no exchange and brokers, but not this huge concern; nor these swarms of well-dressed men, and their associates and employes. Some members do no active business, and others barely eke out an existence, but the greater number do well, or 'scale' would not be at so high a premium. It is never less than $5,000. All the cost of these numberless offices, with their rentals, clerks, and so forth, and their yearly business profits, with the power to shine and spend—where does it all come from, pray?

"Out of the pockets of those who speculate—that is, who gamble here. There is no other place for it to come from, and the colossal fortunes temporarily builded by the 'kings of the street' come from the same source. They do not necessarily go back there when they vanish, however, and that fact brings me to the common delusion that the Stock Exchange is miraculously gifted with the creative power, so that at times all Wall street is growing rich together on a grand movement of values. Nothing can be more positively settled, than that the money a man finds in his pocket as the profits of a bet on the rise or fall of stocks came out of some other man's pocket. It is plain that a nominal value may disappear by the collapse of a given stock, and all concerned discover that they are poorer than their previous estimate; but a stock may rise to any extent, and unless the increase in selling price fairly represents a genuine value not created on 'the street,' the last holder must bear the consequences. He can but divide them, at best, with other losers.

"The whole science of Wall street operations is reducible to the cunning effort not to be that bearer of the consequences. The bull is after the money of the bear, and vice versa with the broker between them to cut his slice from either side of the loaf, so to call it, as it slips from one to the other of the eager players. It is a pretty good allegory, too, as you may learn by asking a few questions of an intelligent stock certificate, say for a hundred shares of Erie, after you have bought and sold it. It might say, to you: 'Did my visit with you cost anything?' 'Ah, well, yes, I should say it did. Smith's broker charged him an eighth—that's $12 50—for selling me to you. Your broker charged you another eighth for buying me for you. Then he put on another eighth for selling me to Brown's broker, and the latter charged Brown the same. Foots up fifty dollars, and that's the only kind of a dividend I ever pay. Hope you didn't lose anything.'

"Supposing the price not to have varied meantime, the broker's fees and the interest would be the only loss to either party; but any fluctuation would have transferred more or less from one pocket to another.

"The wonder of it all is, as of any other gambling, that with these facts so plainly set forth as they are, there should be such a continual procession of fresh victims. Entluk self-conceit has a good deal to do with it. A merchant in the country who has made money, a clerk in a bank or a mercantile house who has had his salary raised, or a sharp attorney who has gained a place on a railway board of direction, seems in every case to be bitten with the notion that he can outwit or outprophesy the street. I never saw a Supreme Court judge put on half the airs of wisdom assumed by a greenhorn whose first bet on the Exchange happened to be a winning one. I never knew one of the latter with wisdom enough to put the stolen money in his pocket and go home to stay. It was always a little more of the same sort' till the luckless prophet joined the ceaseless caravan of the plucked."

Well, it may be said, it serves them right. Why should we pity them? Because, in the first place, they are enticed into and countenanced in such losing courses by the example of men who profess to be honest and honorable, and hold up their heads in "the best society." And for a more urgent reason: these hazardous ventures, and the gambling spirit they excite, are a fruitful source of the financial demoralization under which the community is suffering. In the words of the writer we have quoted: "As a nation and as individuals we are in trouble because we have been gambling, and in the long run the gambler is surely a loser. There is no economic law more fully verified than this, and the next most positive thing is that the unsuccessful gambler is in a fair way to become a thief."

Biography of Bishop Marvin.

MR. EDITOR: As disclosed in my correspondence, and in personal interviews during the late session of the General Conference, as well as in notices by the church press, I am pleased to know that throughout the connection a deep interest is felt in reference to the forthcoming biography of Bishop Marvin, which has been intrusted to me for preparation. Numerous and various inquiries concerning it have been made, and I request the use of your columns for reply and for some independent statements.

My relation to it, as biographer, though highly prized, has been strictly unsought. In the same letter I have received the first intimation both of the proposed publication and of the designation of myself by the family to prepare it. I was notified subsequently of approval of the arrangement by his episcopal colleagues, who were very properly consulted, and whose decision I awaited.

Requests have reached me not to allow myself to be unduly hurried in the preparation of the work. This concern has been expressed, indeed, in the form of admonition: that it is due to the just expectation of the church, as well as to the memory of our lamented Bishop, that his biography should not be given to the press till it has been made complete. There are good reasons, however, on the other hand, that it should appear at an early date. I have had in mind and seek to satisfy both these conditions. It shall be complete; at the same time expedition in the performance will be attained by uncommon diligence and utmost industry. By such extraordinary labor there has already been a large progress in the work. It did not come fairly into my hands till about the middle of March. Since then the entire connection has been searched for information, and prompt and full responses to my call have been obtained. This, with my personal knowledge, from intimate association with the Bishop during nearly twenty-five years, enables me to announce that ample materials are now in my possession for a full and well-authenticated biography.

As to the time of its issue from the press, it only remains that the materials shall be wrought into form. By hard work I expect to secure its completion several months sooner than competent judges have designated as a reasonable time for it, and not later than the sessions of the first Conferences to be held this year.

As to the scope of the work, on some points, information has been desired or may properly be given in the following particulars:

1. From extensive notes taken from the lips of the family, and from other original and reliable sources, a full and accurate history has been compiled respecting his parentage and remote ancestry, his early childhood and youth, and the first years of his Christian and ministerial life.

2. He was a son of Missouri Methodism. It produced him, and he enriched and honored it. He was a chief ornament of its pulpit. His pastoral fidelity has filled the churches with generous and abiding fruits. In general church enterprise he was foremost, and was a noted patron of its charitable and literary institutions. His name is connected with noble names of companions in friendship and labors, whom he has joined in the skies. Much pains has been taken to collect this history of his times, and of his life and labors in his native State.

3. Authentic accounts in great fullness, are in hand of his ministerial labors during the war, in the army and in several pastoral charges at the South, and in extensive preaching tours in the States of Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas.

4. His zeal for missions is well known, and the invaluable service he rendered was crowned by his missionary tour of the world. Rev. E. R. Hendrix, his traveling companion, will furnish a chapter on that last year of his life and crowning labor of his apostolic ministry. The officers of the Board of Missions will also furnish records of his labors, in general, in its behalf.

5. For greater satisfaction in this particular, estimates of his character and labors, besides that of the biographer, will be given by some who were nearly related to him, and by his episcopal colleagues. Bishops Paine, Pierce, Daggett, McTyeire and Keener will each contribute a monograph, and each take a separate topic. From the combined view we may expect a full portraiture of him as a man and a Christian, a Methodist preacher and a Methodist Bishop.

6. The biography would be incomplete without a review of the system of Methodism, of which he was the product, and whose doctrines and polity were exemplified in his ministry. His writings on these subjects are voluminous, and he himself will be made an expositor of the system which he embraced so unreservedly, and of which he was so distinguished an exponent.

7. Peculiar facilities exist for a full history of his episcopal labors and administration. He was accustomed to contribute freely to all the church papers. This correspondence has been collected, and covers his travels and labors widely throughout the connection, on the Pacific coast and Atlantic seaboard, in Montana and in Texas. These letters serve the uses of a diary and a journal of observation. They will be used freely and appear largely in the pages of the biography. Besides this, contributions concerning his episcopal visitations have been secured from suitable persons in nearly every Annual Conference.

I need not say that the above is only a partial table of contents. This is written to communicate desired and necessary information in the interest of the biography authorized by the family, and which, in the literary preparation, is intrusted to my care.

Why They Wanted a New Minister.

The following is from "The Tale of a Tornado," by Ellen M. Smith, in Sunday Afternoon:

"Had a hard time to-day, Jennie?" inquired Esther of her junior partner, as that young lady threw herself down and tossed off her hat, with a disturbed and sour aspect.

"No worse than usual," was the reply. "I hate children, especially in such hot weather. But, Esther, Sarah Brown walked down with me this morning, and made me so furious that I have been just boiling ever since. 'While I was musing, the fire burned,' as David says. Oh, I know he had his trials; he does speak so to the point at times. But just listen. You know that man who preached at the other church last summer. Well, they are talking of him for papa's place."

"Why, Jennie!" cried Esther. "Papa said he wasn't orthodox."

"Can't help it," replied Jennie; "probably they like him all the better; they must have novelty, you know; and may be it's a pleasant excitement to hear a minister blaspheming in the pulpit, and to try and believe what he says. They'll be tired of going to heaven some day, and will want to take the other place, by way of a change; and then set to work to develop themselves out of it."

"Oh, dear!" sighed Esther; "do you suppose it was last Sunday's sermon?"

"Oh, no; but it helped on; they say it was Calvinistic and doctrinal; but the real trouble is that they want a younger man, and a live man; that means a man who hangs to the platform by one foot, while he stamps the other and throws both arms in the air, leaning over at an angle of forty-five degrees, and shouting himself hoarse; and then rushes to the other and and suddenly becomes as meek as a lamb, and remarks: 'My friends, let us love each other and develop our humanity?'"

"Oh, Jennie!"

"It's true. Mr. Howe did all that, and they call him a live man."

"Poor papa!" sighed Esther again; "it is hard on him."

"Yes," said Jennie, with a slight sideways nod of her head, "but it will be harder for them some day; you mark my words. If he doesn't look at them from his throne of glory across a great gulf, I'm mistaken. He is just as good as an angel. He has baptized them and married them and buried them, and brought them into the church, and shown them how to serve the Lord all these years. Why, good gracious!" cried the young lady, "even if he were stupid, what words could make a sermon equal to that preached by such a holy life? And now because he quotes the Bible in his sermons oftener than Shakespeare or Emerson they desert him in his old age. They are tired of the straight gate and the narrow way. They want to be saved by anecdotes and a resume of the daily papers, with bits from the classics thrown in, so that they may feel themselves familiar with Homer and Plato. They want 'freedom of thought,' and, above all, 'to be developed.'"

"It is well papa doesn't hear you," said Esther, while the twins laughed.

"Mr. Howe doesn't believe in miracles," continued Jennie; "and he said in the Bible class that there never was any such man as Solomon; he was a myth, and meant the sun, and his palace was the sky; and the Queen of Sheba represented the dawn coming up to the sky. Sarah Brown told me so; she thought it was beautiful. Also he taught them that David's fight with Goliath was allegorical, and represented the victory of mind over matter; and he said that explained some of the psalms; the enemies David cursed were only material forces that he was bound to get the better of. I told Sarah Brown that if I had been there I would have thrown my hymn-book at his head. 'Songs of the Sanctuary' would be a good stout missile."

"What did she say?" asked the twins.

"She said I was very narrow, but it wasn't surprising. After all, why should I trouble myself about these people? They will only illustrate their own principle of 'the survival of the fittest;' and we never could get along with such fools in heaven. My temper wouldn't stand it—not if I had twenty pairs of wings."

Jesus as a Poet.

We observe that the history of Christianity has been but a strife between men of power, eager to vie with each other by the gorgeousness of conception, by the dreams of imagination, by the life of reality, by the adjuncts of beauty, and by all the vibrations of harp and lute, in the most forceful expression of that true poesy which has crept over their souls under the spell of Jesus and his charmed name. A sublime and distinct inspiration has seized them and uttered itself through an intense eloquence, such as Homer and Virgil never commanded, because their very soul has melted in gratitude, as no soul can melt but that of a sinner saved by grace. Through hall and basilica, palace and cot, cathedral and mountain wild, cave and prison, Te Deum has never ceased to swell from softened hearts. The child of persecution and the conquering hero, bishop and king, queen and shepherdess, have sent forth strains of praise to Christ in every form of melody. In the East there is scarcely a rivulet which ripples in its lucid course through alpine gorges, hardly a leaf which flutters by the willow courses, or a beam which flies from the opening day, but has listened to the music of this voice. Children have danced to its flow in the streets of blood-stained Jerusalem; its measures have swept in triumph over Egypt's dark sea; by the rivers of Babylon its notes have quivered with delight; its cadences of love have sighed through the cedars of Lebanon, and round the hoary head of Sinai its chorus has gathered victorious over thunders and lightnings, the sound of a trumpet and the muttering voice of cursing words. When David's fingers touched his harp, music flew from its strings as if the angels of God spoke words concerning his coming Son; and since that great Son went back to the bosom of his Father and our Father, the freshness of everlasting love has embalmed his name in perpetual song. Pliny tells us that the primitive Christians met before dawn to sing praise to Christ, as God. Then came the confessors and martyrs who kindled the ardor of their religion by the poetry of his doctrine. And since those days the catacombs of the Eternal City, the fastnesses of Switzerland, and the glens and mounts of old Scotia have been witnesses how the truth could give constitutional vigor and verse to the holy joys of man. A cloud of sweet singers in Israel skirts the historic sky of Christianity, embracing Clement and Ambrose, Bernard and Gregory, Hilary and Bede among the venerable saints. Then follow, in this line, Robert of France, Maria of Hungary, Henrietta of Brandenburg, and Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, who made the battle-field, the castle and the royal home alive with poetic tributes to Christ, while modern familiarity readily suggests to us English-speaking Christians, Kerr and Keble, Byron and Bryant, Scott and Southey, Kirke White and Wordsworth, Milton and Heber, Cowper and Coleridge, Watts and Wesley, whose genius has sung his name. And if all these, with multitudes of others in the Old World and the New, have offered their poetic contributions to Christ, would it not be passing strange if, after all, it should turn out that there is no poetry in Jesus Christ himself? Surely the seed-poetry which has yielded such a golden harvest must be in him.—From a Sermon by Dr. Armitage, in the Complete Preacher.

I know somebody who always appears to be miserable; and this is the way she contrives to be so—thinking always about herself; constantly wishing for that she has not got; idling her time, fretting and grumbling. I know somebody who is much happier; and this is the way she contrives to be so—thinking of others; satisfied with what her heavenly Father has judged best for her; working for somebody else besides herself, and thinking how she can make others happy. My little "somebody," which kind of a "somebody" are you?

THE TWO ALABASTER BOXES.

When Faith, in patient agonistry
In fast pass a stranger through thy land
Two costly gifts were offered thee,
And both were from a woman's hand.

To those who marked all things fair,
Those fair and precious things they bring:
Pure sculptured alabaster clear,
Perfumes for earth's anointed King.

Man's hasty lips would both reprove
One for the stain of foul with sin,
One for the waste of too much love:
Yet both availed thy smile to win.

The saint who lingered at thy feet,
The sinner, sinners scorned to touch,
Adoring in thy presence meet,
Both pardoned, and both living much.

Thus evermore to all they teach,
Man's highest style is "much forgiven,"
And that earth's lowest yet may reach
The highest ministries of heaven.

They teach that gifts of costliest price
From hearts she beggared yet may pour,
And that love's costliest sacrifice
Is worth the love and nothing more.

The Three Widows.

Persecution for the Sake of Christ.

"Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you; and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake." Thus spoke our Savior to his disciples not long previous to his crucifixion and ultimate bodily departure from them; and while addressing them he is endeavoring to implant into their minds a truth which is as lasting as the word of God itself, namely: that those who would be Christians must necessarily suffer persecution for the sake of Christ; for as surely as where the gospel of Christ is preached there also is the Spirit of God manifested in power, so surely wherever it is preached, believed in, or adhered to, there are those who are the agents of satan, ever busily engaged in persecuting believers, and striving, though we rejoice to say generally in the actual to hinder the progress of the gospel of the Son of God.

During the first ages and centuries of Christianity the followers of Christ were subjected to the severest and most malignant persecutions. They were hanged, burned at the stake, and otherwise deprived of life and liberty, and that with the approbation and enforcement of law, and in many instances with that of professed Christians, for satan often comes "in the form of an angel of light," even into Christ's fold, and there so completely blinds the eyes of would-be Christians as to induce them to be used as instruments for the working out of his vile schemes of persecution, for "the time cometh that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service."

True at this time, in our own country at least, Christians are protected by law from open and violent persecution; but this does not disprove the Savior's words, "Men shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake;" or save Christians from persecution. Observe with what strict attention the person who is an open professor of God's word scrutinizes a professor of religion! How he watches for some opportunity to bring a charge against the moral character of some follower of Christ! With what eagerness he grasps, as a drowning man at a straw, every report of idle rumor that would bring disgrace upon some professor of religion, and reproach upon the cause of Christ! The world almost always says of the Christian's labors, no matter how full of love or how devoted, that he is actuated by some selfish motive, and is religious because it pays best; that his religion is merely a secondary matter; that the gratification of some selfish desire is the primary object of his life and labors, and that religion is merely made subsidiary to the accomplishment of this end.

For instance, let a minister of the gospel do or say something that is not exactly right and becoming in the eyes of the world, though God may not disapprove, and observe with what eager haste the report of it is circulated, and for what a period of time it will furnish a theme of gossip for a whole community; and it is doubtless intimated that it comes of his being a preacher, and that other professors of religion are no better; while, if one of the world had done the thing under the same circumstances, it would have been only a commonplace matter at worst, and it might have been even commendable. But Christians should not be discouraged because of the persecutions of the world and the devil. "It is enough that the disciple be as his Lord, and the servant as his Master." Our Savior suffered all the bodily pain which it was possible for him to suffer, and he did it for us. We then, who profess to be his followers, should be content to bear the trials of life for his sake when we are promised, as a reward, eternal life.

My Consistent Brother.

Bro. Mason is in charge of a large circuit. He has been traveling all day in order to reach one of his extreme appointments. He has had nothing to eat since breakfast, and is quite hungry. Night overtakes him near the residence of Bro. Davidson. Bro. Davidson is a man who is highly respected. He is a man who will pay his debts. Supper is over, and now for a talk before Bro. Mason greets his friend Simmons. The conversation commences:

Bro. Davidson to Bro. Mason—What do you think of a church member who will not pay his debts?

Bro. M. to Bro. D.—I think, my brother, if a member has contracted a debt, and is able to liquidate it, and does not, he needs more religion.

Bro. D. to Bro. M.—I am of your opinion. I am glad the Bishop has sent us a man who will speak thus.

Bro. M. to Bro. D.—It may be that the man of whom you speak is not able to pay his debts.

Bro. D. to Bro. M.—O yes! It is true he is not flush with money, but he could pay me in molasses or rice, or put a few hogs, all of which I could turn into money.

Bro. M. to Bro. D.—I think he should have a talk. Shall I preach a sermon on Sunday that will make him feel? What text shall I select?

Bro. D. to Bro. M.—That is the very idea; and allow me, my dear brother, to suggest a text: "Owe no man anything."

Bro. M. to Bro. D.—Thank you; I shall preach from that text.

Bro. D. to Bro. M.—Do you read the New Orleans Democrat? I think it is a superior paper. I have been taking it for several years, and I am so delighted with it that I always pay for it in advance.

Bro. M. to Bro. D.—You turned my mind, when you said paper, to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. Do you take it?

Bro. D. to Bro. M.—Yes, and like it very much. My wife is charmed with it; and if you want to know how we appreciate the paper, ask my daughter. Excuse me; I want to see about your horse. I am afraid he will get out of the stable.

Bro. Mason is a young man, and is somewhat bashful in the company of young ladies; yet he is always free to talk on two subjects—the missionary cause and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Bro. M. to Miss D.—What do you think of the ADVOCATE?

Miss D. to Bro. M.—Indeed, sir, I am unable to express my opinion of the ADVOCATE. I often imagine I can see the smiling editor. I would be happy to see him. He understands the doctrines of our church. His editorials are racy, his selections made with wisdom, and the children's corner—O! how very charming! Should I go to New Orleans I shall certainly pay the editor a visit.

Bro. D. soon returns.

Bro. M. to Bro. D.—Who is Bro. John Davidson? Is he related to you?

Bro. D. to Bro. M.—I am Bro. John Davidson.

Bro. M. to Bro. D.—I have just received from Bro. Harp (by Mr. Adams, his polite and kind secretary) your account.

Bro. D. to Bro. M.—How much is it? Just like Mr. Harp—he is always sending me letters. I suppose he has sent me a dozen letters. Sometimes I think I will never have anything to do with him.

Bro. M. to Bro. D.—It seems as if you have been taking this paper eight years without paying a cent. How is that? You always pay for your secular paper in advance. Bro. Harp has lost forty cents' worth of postage; and, besides, you owe him $16. You get it very cheap. You, your wife, your daughter Sallie and your mother ought to appreciate the dear ADVOCATE!

Bro. Mason hopes Bro. Davidson and daughter Sallie will be at church when he preaches from the text: "Owe no man anything"!—but love the ADVOCATE. IOTA.

A Visit to Meridian.

MR. EDITOR: I take pleasure in informing the western members of the Mississippi Conference, who have not had a late opportunity of visiting Meridian, that we have a valuable educational prize in our East Mississippi Female College; we are also fortunate in the selection of its president, Rev. James W. Adkisson.

I am here as a "looker-on," taking notes for personal gratification. Hitherto Whitworth College, under the successful management of Rev. H. F. Johnson, has absorbed my attention. I have thought it almost impossible to establish within our Conference boundaries another similar institution of high grade. With real pleasure I confess my error. The East Mississippi Female College, though quite youthful, and yet advancing under many disadvantages, is already the alma mater of a numerous alumni, that would reflect credit upon the best institution of learning in our land. The present management is thorough. No scholar can receive a diploma that has not been fairly earned.

There has been a steady increase of patronage from session to session, while in the immediate presence of an older, similar institution belonging to the Baptist Church. I was pleased to hear President Adkisson publicly remark that "the boarding pupils for next session were all engaged." I trust more commodious buildings will be added, giving ample room to invite a larger number of pupils. I was glad to learn that, until this is done, pleasant and agreeable homes adjacent to the college buildings can be secured if engaged in time.

I admired the exhibition in calisthenics. The public were greeted with a grand review. Every motion of the body and of the whole school was in exact time with the musical instrument. This exercise is a part of the curriculum, teaching gracefulness and developing the physical constitution. All the public exhibitions were models of instructive and pleasurable enjoyment. The music department evinced correct training and skilled practice.

I do not hesitate to advise parents having daughters to educate to send them to our college at Meridian; this, of course, without injury to others.

I communicate these notes as but a just tribute of praise; and to obtain a good conscience, as hitherto, I had ignorantly under-estimated this institution. ROBT. B. DOWNER.

From the Work.

LOGANSPORT MISSION.—Mr. Editor: This mission, under its present title, is in the first year of its existence; but the people by no means are heathen. It lies on the Sabine river, and includes a part of DeSoto and Sabine parishes, comprising an area of country some 15 miles in width and 30 miles in length, and contains 288,000 acres of land. It is a good upland country, and decidedly above an average in point of production. There are six creeks or bayous running through it, on which there is a goodly portion of bottom land, and which renders it a well-watered district. It abounds with the finest timber, and almost of every imaginable sort. To occupy this whole district of desirable country there are only about 3,000 inhabitants. These are nearly all white. In order to have good society and to develop the resources of the country there ought to be ten times that number. Land here may be had on reasonable terms, from the government, private claimants, or much of it may be had by pre-emption. Now that the railroad to Mansfield is a fixture, and will bring a market near enough to this district of country for all practical convenience, we do not hesitate to invite immigration. If any have to move—and we advise none to move unless it be a necessity—let them look here. We need an industrious, enterprising class of people, who will develop the resources of the county and advance the interests of the church. When we came to this work last January, in all this region there was not a single organized Methodist society, a postoffice, nor a copy of the ADVOCATE taken. We have established four monthly appointments, all of which are at school-houses save one. On each round we preach to 275 or 300 persons. We have organized one society of 11 members, and baptized 6 persons—4 children and 2 adults.

The outlook for good is encouraging; it means the conversion of sinners and the establishing a self-supporting work. Many of the present population are old settlers, enterprising and well-to-do in the world. We are arranging for protracted meetings, and praying for a revival.

JOHN PIBES.

MANSFIELD, La., June 7, 1878.

POLLARD CIRCUIT, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: The blessings of God came, in answer to our united prayers, upon a meeting commenced at this place (Pollard) May 29. We continued two weeks. The first and second of June was the time of our second Quarterly Conference; and on Friday evening, the thirty-first of May, our much-beloved presiding elder, Rev. S. H. Cox, joined us. Young men and young ladies were happily converted. We had about 20 conversions, 16 accessions, and the church was greatly revived.

JOS. C. JOHNSON, P. C.

JUNE 17, 1878.

PEARLINGTON, MISS.—Mr. Editor: Our people in this charge have built an excellent parsonage, and furnished it well with good and new furniture—mostly the work of the ladies. The support of the ministry is good. Our stewards are men of business and Christian integrity. They do their work in the church, as they do in other business matters, successfully. Our circuit is composed of three churches, located in three beautiful little towns on the banks of Pearl river, near its mouth. Each is a shipping point of considerable business. Around the entire population belongs to the Methodist Church. There are no other churches here.

I have not been very far into the country. I think, however, there is no better country in the South for stock and fruit-raising. The population is thrifty, socially good, and everybody employed and making a living. We have here the advantage of the New Orleans market, the country and the sea, and have plenty of fish, oysters, crabs, alligators and musquitoes.

A. B NICHOLSON.

OBITUARIES.

Correspondents, please write names and dates very distinctly. We follow copy on proper names.

Obituary notices should be forwarded promptly and immediately. Give only points of general interest, such as will help the living. Details of funeral services, and such phrases as "mourn their loss," etc., are not edifying. Verses, either original or select, not admissible in this department. Give the locality distinctly and in full. In the case of infants only a simple announcement of the death, with names and dates, will be published.

☞ All obituaries received are published as soon as convenient. If, after a reasonable time, any such communication fail to appear, let a duplicate be sent instead of a complaint.

MRS. NANCY E. CROSBY was born in Conecuh county, Ala., August 27, 1823, and died in Wilcox county, Ala., May 24, 1878. She was thrice married. After her first marriage she moved with her husband (Mr. Tomlinson) to Louisiana. After his death she returned to Alabama, where she died. In early life she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, but from indifference renounced the profession's faith and returned to the world. Her convictions were opposed to such a course, and under the influence of a religious husband (John P. Davis, known to many itinerant preachers in Alabama), and a nature of religious breadth, she again joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, under the ministry of Rev. Anson West, and thenceforward sought to honor such a step as a Christian. She enjoyed the comforts of religion, and demonstrated its verity and life in her heart by a faithful report. Her head ever turned to the poor and helpless, and many received blessings at her hands. She had but one motive in life—i. e. simple "goodness of soul." She faithfully filled all the stations of life, and in blessing she was blessed. She was a devoted wife, and the fondest of mothers. This was her forte—she idolized her children; and they, with her stepchildren, "arise up and call her blessed." After an intimate acquaintance with her for eleven years, I can say, without hesitation that she was the best of neighbors. No one brings a single complaint against her. She was truly blameless in this respect, and her chief joy was the church. She was ever ready to do "what she could" for the Redeemer's kingdom. Her religion was not of the professional type—it was experimental and practical. She behaved with modesty in such matters; but she always felt—she always acted. She could place a blush upon the face of many who demonstrated more in a professional way. Not only is the church injured by such a loss, but the world also. She suffered long and a great deal with consumption, but this prepared her for final triumph; and, being filled with faith and the Holy Ghost, she ascended, as for a translation. The physician who ministered by her bed informs me that hers was the most triumphant death he ever witnessed. She died preaching the everlasting gospel, warning her friends to flee to Jesus for refuge. She made all her funeral arrangements, distributed her keepsakes among her friends, bid them the dying farewell, and with the signs of the glorified upon her lips she was no more, for God took her.

T. Y. ARRINGTON.

LAYI B GODWILD until his death March 4, for many years a member of the Scotland circuit Quarterly Conference, had long enjoyed the reputation among his neighbors and church acquaintances as true-hearted, amiable, deeply pious and benevolent. He ceased to labor and entered into rest.

He was born in Franklin county near the Homochitto river, November 1, 1826, and spent his entire life in farming near the place of his birth. He was converted in his eighteenth year, after fully devoting each by his father—a type of conversion of which Methodists predicate large and satisfactory results. The scene, as reported by partial ones, ranks with those illustrious instances which at our experience meetings command the hearty approval of our people, and display that continuous power of testimony which abides with the church.

He was reared, after an interval of wandering, in his twenty-third year, at Adams' camp ground, and until his death, in his fifty-second year, illustrated, in a consistent course of life, of uniform activity and piety, a clear outlook of hope in experience, and the testimony of constant consciousness acceptance, the power of grace to save, and the inestimable benefits of the methods and discipline of the church, of which he spoke in warm praise to the last.

He was married, in his nineteenth year, to Miss S. J. Rawls, who, with two sons and two daughters, survive to console the sorrows of their bereavement with the rich legacy he has left of an unblemished reputation, a character universally approved, and minded for uprightness and obligingness. A noble man, unaided by any of the advantages of school culture, shining upon his things and society with supernatural light a good name he prized and bore; a good name he has left to his family, his Conference and his church; and the fruits of a good name he now enjoys on the word of him who said that it is rather to be chosen than great riches.

W. E. M. LINFIELD,
In behalf of Committee.

MRS. DELIA BINKLEY was born in the city of Mobile, February 2d, 1832, and died at Eufaula, Barbour county, Ala., April 13, 1878. She was the eldest daughter of Maj. George C. and Mrs. Eliza P. Henry, and married William D. Binkley October 30, 1877. Under the ministry of the Rev. S. P. Richardson, presiding elder of the Union Springs district of the Alabama Conference, she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1846. These few lines contain a brief summary of the life of a most charming and estimable Christian woman.

Endowed with a brilliant intellect, blessed with religious parents, and home surroundings calculated to foster the best sentiments of the heart, and encourage the practice of the gentlest virtues, she was the bright sunbeam of a happy home, and a chosen favorite in the social circle in which she moved. Ever cheerful, always sparkling and buoyant with life, she smoothed the brow ruffled with care, and dispensed sunshine and joy wherever she went. For a few brief months she was permitted to throw the radiance of her own happy disposition over the home of her young husband, when the hand of the fell destroyer was laid upon her, and she was prostrated by typhoid fever. For fifty-three days she lingered, and for several weeks of alternate hope and anxiety hovered between life and death. With patient resignation, with no fear of death, but cheered with the hope of a life unending and blissful beyond the grave, which disease and suffering could not dim, she calmly awaited the summons that called her home, and sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, without a struggle or a sigh:

"As the morning star,
Which goes not down behind the darkened west,
Nor hides obscured among the tempests of the skies,
But melts away into the light of heaven."

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

The committee to whom was referred the sad duty of preparing resolutions concerning the death of our friend and classmate, Miss LIZZY D. PARKER, who departed this life at her father's residence, Coosada, Ala., April 21, 1878, beg leave to present the following:

Whereas, It hath pleased almighty God in his inscrutable but wise providence, to remove from our midst the soul of our deceased friend and classmate; And whereas, The deceased was a faithful and much-loved member of the Sunday school of the Methodist Episcopal Church South at Brewersville, Ala.; therefore,

Resolved, That while our hearts are made sad by this dispensation, and while we grieve to think that one so young and lovely will meet with us no more on earth, we bow in meek submission to the will of God, who is too wise to err and too good to inflict need lessly.

Resolved, That our Sunday school has lost one of its most faithful members, whose punctuality and devotion to duty were worthy of all commendation.

Resolved, That we will ever cherish her memory with feelings of profoundest regard for her amiable character and rare virtues.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved parents and family our most sincere sympathy and condolence, and mingle with theirs our feelings of deepest sorrow.

Resolved, That a copy of these preambles and resolutions be furnished the bereaved parents, and also forwarded to the Livingston Journal and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

Signed by the committee,

MOLLIE BOZEMAN and others.

DIED, at her residence near Shipcutt, Clark county, Miss., May 23, 1878, of malarial fever, Sister MINNIE JEFFRIES PATTON, consort of T. L. Patton, and daughter of J. L. and C. C. J. Sister PATTON was born in Clark county, Ala., September 30, 1850. From thence she moved, with her parents, to this county (Clark, Miss.) a few years since, and on the twenty-fourth of October, 1876, entered into the marriage relation.

No one who knew her will well doubt that death introduced her into the home of her Savior, high in salvation's glories. When she left the embraces of her sorrowing dear ones to be with Jesus, she left with each dying request to meet them in heaven. In a few hours she had gone to Jesus.

She is now beyond the reach of sorrow, safe from the evil of the world and rest in the unfading beauties of eternal life. The curtain of tears will be opened when we remember that her eyes no longer beam with their wonted luster, that the cheeks no longer glow with the freshness of youth, and that the tongue lies palsied in death; but—happy thought!—her spirit is clothed in light. She is beholding the King in his beauty. She is crowned with the Lord's approval by the smiles of the Redeemer, and awaits to welcome her loved ones on that undefiled shore. Her funeral sermon was preached by the writer from Matthew xxiv, 44: "Be ye also ready."

D. PRICE-NORRIS.

HAMLIN TATTUM was born in Putnam county, Ga., September 7, 1816. He was reared in Muscogee county, Ga.; moved to Macon county, Ala., in 1839; was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1863; died in Troy, Ala., April 9, 1878. What lesson shall we learn from the life and death of this calm man of God? One thing which we should learn: to act upon the decisions of our enlightened judgment, without waiting for the suffrages of the multitude. Deliberately, alone when there was no excitement in the church, no general revival of religion, he gave himself to God and to his church, and to the day of his death improved the talent he had made. Five years ago he was disabled by a stroke of paralysis, which affected his right arm and side, and caused him to falter in speech so much that strangers found it difficult to understand him. His life spoke the lesson of submission with a wonderful emphasis. During the five years in which he may be said to have been slowly dying, no complaint ever escaped his lips. Waiting upon his call, he frequently found his way to the house of God, was ever ain to be there at our monthly sacramental meetings, and in his seat (for he could not kneel) tenderly accepted the tokens of a Savior's love. He has found the place "where the weary be at rest."

J. B. GEER.

MISS LORENA KATIE GIBSON, daughter of Thomas H. and Emily A. Gibson, was born on the eighteenth of September, 1861, in Russell county, Ala., and died March 3, 1878.

Katie was a good, amiable girl, and all who knew her could but love her for her kind, gentle and friendly manners. She loved and obeyed her parents, and was affectionate toward her brothers and sister. In 1874 she joined the church, in the ministry of Rev. W. W. Graham. Her parents being religious, and having had the advantages of one of the best of Sunday schools, she gave the church no trouble. She was obedient to its requirements, and loved it dearly. It was my privilege to become acquainted with her a little more than two years before her death, and I never knew one thing wrong in her life. I visited her during her last illness, and found her patient and hopeful. To her relatives she was anxious to talk about death and heaven.

C. S. H.

BRO. G. W. SCOTT was born in Mississippi, May 9, 1812, and died, at his residence near Montgomery, Grant parish, April 8, 1878. He had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South for thirty years, and professed faith in Christ two years after. For some time before death he led his family to God in prayer. Not only one night was missed before his decease. I visited him several times during his illness, and we held sweet communion as we talked with God in prayer. He seemed much interested in the welfare of the church. About two weeks before he died he prayed very earnestly for his children. Just a few days during his last illness he expressed himself as ready to meet the Master when he should be called; and the evening before he died one of his sons and gave him a father's last message. [illegible]

MARY E. ANDREWS, the subject of this notice, was born March 2, 1853, married to James Collins June 1, 1875, and died April 28, 1878.

Sister Collins had been a faithful member of the church for six years prior to her death, and when the summons came to depart she was ready for the change with great tranquillity of mind. She died in the society of loved ones on earth, and home in heaven. She left behind her a savor of a good name. She was aware of her approaching dissolution, talked calmly of death, and gave directions about her dying infant, left without a mother, her sorrowing companion and friends with the consolations and comforts of religion.

A. P. C.

BEATINA MARY, little daughter of J. E. and Henrietta McGuire, departed this life in Columbia, La., May 1, 1878, in her two years, seven months and four days. Since the death of her mother, which occurred in October last, "Tina" had lived with her uncle and aunt, J. B. and Mary Lind, and no parent could have been more devoted to a child of their own. A few days before her death she sang sweetly: "I want to be an angel." Her pastor.

DIED, in Orrville, Ala., April 9, 1878, MINNIE MAY, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Layet, and grandchild of J. W. Shores.

Had she lived to the first instant she would have been one year old. She was a child of promise, a flower of rarest sweetness and beauty, whose stay on earth was short, but with much suffering; but she has been transplanted to the celestial clime, where her fragrance will be perennial and her existence celestial.

SARAH CAGLE left the world [illegible], 1878, relinquishing, ever dear to her, precious friends on earth, Jephtha, her husband, preceded her and [illegible] to the heavenly world. They prayed together on earth. They now praise God together in glory. Thank God for a [illegible] saved. Yes, what joy to see [illegible] in heaven in glory.

J. F. W.

POWER OF SIGHT IN BIRDS.—It is known to the sight of the common Andes that if a carcass be [illegible] where the naked eye can detect no sign of these creatures in the [illegible] yet in a few minutes they are seen streaming from all directions [illegible] toward their hoped-for meal. Though birds be long-sighted, it is also highly necessary that they should see minute objects at a distance. No entomologist will deny that an insectivorous bird must have keen eyes for short distances in order to get its living with ease. And the scopic sight is scarcely less important for a grain-feeding bird. The sparrow, which plunges with such reckless impulse through the air, nevertheless, seizes a small insect as it dashes along, with almost unerring certainty. Usually the prey is so small that the wonderful precision of the bird displayed in the chase cannot be observed; but sometimes, when the insect has large wings, the dexterity may be seen. Thus, I have seen a swallow seize, while in headlong flight, the beautiful, large, swallow-tailed butterfly, and bear off its stupid body from between the wings, and let them float softly down; and then, not satisfied with a feast so little proportioned to the splendor in which it was dished, glance round and seize the wings before they reach the ground. How, then, is a long sight and a short sight to be obtained from the same eye? This is done mainly by the aid of bony plates so disposed that the edge of one is capable of sliding over the edge of its neighbor, so that when the fibers of the muscle which unites them contract, they compress the eye all around, and make it more tubular, while the humors of the eye, thus subject to pressure, cause the cornea to project more, also the retina to be removed further from the lens.—Cassell's Popular Educator.

A gentleman called upon a wealthy friend for a contribution. "You must give you my mite," said the rich man. "You mean the widow's mite, I suppose?" replied the other. "To be sure I do." The gentleman continued: "I will be satisfied with half as much as she gave. Now how much are you worth?" "Seventy thousand dollars," he answered. "Give me, then, a check for the sum of five thousand; that will be just half as much as the widow gave, for she gave all she had." That was a new idea to the wealthy merchant, but he contributed liberally.

The Stolen Analyses.

...so much is being said and written ...this day about how much or little ...is wise or honest to employ the ...oughts of others, that we will give ...account of our one crusade in that ...ection. We had been in the min...try about six weeks, and the Tues...evening lecture was approaching. ...r country parsonage was full of ...itors, whom we were anxious to ...ertain. They did not leave the ...e until seven o'clock in the ...ning. At half-past seven we were ...lecture. With only fifteen min...s for preparation for what then...med a mighty undertaking—the ...ressing of a hundred and fifty peo...on a religious theme—we seized ...a book of helps in sermonizing, ...d for the first and last time in our ...s appropriated three analyses of our ...e consecutive sermons on the ...ne text. We were apprehensive ...t one of the analyses might not ...ough to last us for half an hour; ...with full confidence that three ...them would certainly be enough, ...put our brief in our pocket, our ...on our head, and started to ...slaughter. As we entered the ...pit our courage began to weaken, ...gh backed up by such a power...brief, which we felt after several ...s after we got into the pulpit ...soring ourselves that it was there ...gave out the longest hymns that ...could find, so that, in case the ...e analyses should not be long ...gh, the services would not be ...ridiculously brief.

...he preliminary exercises having ...ded, we put the brief on the Bi...and began. Although it was a ...y cool night, with the very be...ning of our lecture we began pro...perspiration. We got through ...introduction in two sentences—...two sentences we had transcribed. ...announced our first head, and as ...re was nothing written under ...t head we were not able to think ...anything to say by way of amplifi...tion or illustration, and we passed ...gracefully as we could to the sec...d remarking to the congregation ...the first proposition was so evi...that it was not necessary for us ...dwell on it. It is unsafe to try to get ...ough a deep place by climbing on ...e back even of such pulpit giants as ...ghton, Beveridge and Dr. Ward ...w. There is, no doubt, a lawful ...d helpful use of such books; but ...er since our catastrophe on that ...sad Tuesday evening in the Belle...ille lecture-room we have had a ...at the extreme pitch of their voices ...shivering dread of all "Pulpit Cyclopedias" and "Pulpit Assistants," and Claude's, "Sermonizing." In such matters every man for himself, and God for all.—Christian at Work.

I Don't Make Any Profession!

"That's always the way with them folks that pretend to be religious. I never saw any good come of them. I am just as good as they are, and I don't make any profession." And, so saying, the shoemaker pulled his thread through the leather with a force which seemed to say: "There's a pill for you to swallow!"

"Don't you?" said I.

"No, I don't."

"Excuse me, my friend, but I scarcely credit you. I always thought you believed there was a God."

"Oh, of course—I am not a heathen."

"Ah that's a little bit of profession, then! But I suppose you don't believe that the Bible is God's word?"

"I tell you," said he, "I'm not a heathen. You know well enough that I believe the Bible, and I attend the church and give them money. I am never absent from sacrament; my children are baptized, and they learn their Bible, and we say our prayers, and—"

"Stop, stop! my friend; you're going too fast for me. I thought you said you made no profession?"

"No more I do."

"What! you believe in a God—that's a little profession; you believe the Bible to be his word—that's still more; you say you are never absent from sacrament—that is to say, you sit down at the table spread for those who claim to be his, having had their sins pardoned—thus you profess yourself a sinner, and publicly sit among God's people, professing to be on his side. My dear friend, what greater profession would you make than to sit down with him and remember his death, and then teach your children to pray? No profession! Why it's a great profession! Surely you can't mean that you now wish to deny that loving Savior, do you?"

"I never thought of it that way," said he, laying down his hammer and resting his head on his hand.

"Many people never think of it," I said; "and they tell me just what you did, or they say: 'I live up to my profession.' Oh my brother! I wish I could live up to my profession; for it is a dreadful thing to play friendship with that loving, pleading Savior, and then deny him and become ashamed of him."

"I see it," said he, "I see it now, and never thought of it. I just sat down at the table because others did, and because I had got to that time of life; but it never struck me, till just now, that this meant professing Christ. Oh, will he ever forgive me my sin?"

"That's what he came to do," I said. "He came to save sinners, and it isn't by making profession of good works, but by believing in his finished work, that we are saved; and if we believe his work to be true, then 'we are all dead to trespasses and sins'—dead, and therefore cannot work—for a dead man can do nothing. He only can give us life, and he gave his life that we might have saving life, and he gives it freely. My profession is this, and only this: 'I am a guilty sinner, but Jesus died for me;' and because he died for me, I bow try to please him, not in order to be saved, but because he has saved me; and the life I now live in the flesh, I humbly try by his grace to live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me."

"And that I'll also do," said the shoemaker, pressing my hand, "if he'll forgive me for making such a false profession. Pray for me."

We knelt and prayed; and by and by, by the shoemaker became a Christian worker, and, instead of "making no profession," he seeks to "glory in the cross of Christ."

Reader, have you been making the same mistake? Have you been boasting that "you make no profession"? If so, are you, then, an atheist? Poor friend! if that is the case, my present dealing is not with you. God help you! But if not an atheist, then you have been making a profession; and, oh! if it hasn't been an honest one, and if you are not really Christ's, do seek his pardon now, lest in a little while his wrath be kindled.—Mitchell in the Christian.

Combativeness of Birds.

By a fiction of the poets birds all sing praise if they sing at all, to the great Creator. Of course this sounds well, and may have some initial foundation; but I can come as near proving that a cat bird curses and swears, and flings out all sorts of abusive epithets at its enemies when angry, as any one can come to establishing the song-praise theory. How these little fellows can fret and scold and hiss and incre ate—yes, incre ate! Let a sparrow hawk or screech-owl or butcher bird get near one's nest, and, if you observe closely, your imagination must be very torpid indeed, if you cannot hear "Sacre-bleu!" and all that, scattered around pretty freely. I have seen one forty dance in ecstasy of anger when nothing but a poor, little brown lizard came near it. A pair of cat birds had their nest and young in a bird's head of the garden belonging to a farm-house where I was lodging one spring and I used to amuse myself by exciting the anger of the mother-bird. To do this I had only to hang a bit of red cloth near the nest in her absence, and await the result. No sooner would she return than such a twitching and squeaking and scolding would begin as only a cat-bird could generate, and when she found out that there was "no fight" in the rag, she would eye me sitting at my window, and mew triumphantly, as if she well knew who it was had thus troubled her equanimity. A war of words—her equanimity. A war of notes—is a thing of frequent occurrence between cat-bird and the common brown thrush. Early in the morning through the month of May they may be heard screaming their respective madrigals at the extreme pitch of their voices from neighboring trees, each songster maliciously bent on drowning each others' voice. The common barn-yard cock is given to a like ambition in the matter of "crowing down" all competitors.

Speaking of the brown thrush reminds me that I ought to record right here a very singular combat, witnessed by myself and brother, between one of these gay singers and a blue jay (what bird is not compelled to fight the latter?) and in which the jay was finally discomfited and beaten. We were lying in the shade of a wide-spreading wild plum-tree on the edge of a little glade. Near us was a clump of sugar haw bushes, in one of which we had discovered a brown thrush's nest. The bird was incubating. A blue jay, flitting about on mischief intent, as in fact, a blue jay always is, happened to spy her, and immediately attacked her, driving her for refuge into the thick, thorny foliage above the nest. This seemed an easy turn for the jay, which at once prepared to have a feast of the eggs. But no sooner had it perched on the rim of the nest than the thrush, with a savage squall, plunged down from its hiding place, and struck it a heavy blow in the back. The jay retreated in disorder, but warily returned when all seemed still. With infinite caution in every movement, it hopped from twig to twig, turning its crested head this way and that till it reached the nest. Again, with a shrill scream, the thrush pounced from its hiding place, using its long, sharp beak for a sword to stab the jay's exposed and defenceless back. Again and again the would-be robber fled and returned, each time to get rougher usage; and finally, as if utterly put done with rapidly repeated cries of "De jay! de jay! de jay!" it flitted away into the depths of the woods, to come no more.—Appleton's Journal.

Christ Revealing God.

There is something vague and difficult to grasp in the name and thought of God Almighty; but the Lord Jesus, God in our own nature, one like ourselves—the wonderful history of whose three-and-thirty earthly years brings him near to us in childhood boyhood, manhood, in joy and sorrow—at our feasts and funerals—in our early days of training under a parent's eye—in the busy pursuits of mature age, and in that awful crisis of God's summons to death which intercepts all business; the Lord Jesus, moving in the gospel history, through all these stages in which we ourselves move; Jesus, our Lord God manifested as the Man of business, who from the pressing cares around him had not time so much as to eat; the Man of prayer, who in the midst of business withdrew to solitary places at early hours, that he might refresh himself for public intercourse with the world, by secret intercourse with the Father of spirits; Jesus, this venerated name!—Jesus, whose form, either as he moved in kindly intercourse on earth, or as he afterward returned in vision, clothed with august majesty to cheer the heart of the faithful John in the Apocalypse, is so familiar to us from the earliest of our childhood that we all believe we shall recognize the loved features when we see him face to face at that happy day, when, all earth's trials over, we are admitted with the blessed dead into his immediate presence. Jesus, the Lover of ourselves! What a force of reality is given to our conceptions of God's love when we understand that all our blessings come through and from this kind and tender Friend! It will be well for us all through life, in cordially, quiet joys and in our sorrows when they come to us, as sooner or later they certainly must come, to think of this heavenly Friend as standing very near to us, allotting us each day our portion, and all in the Spirit of his never failing love. This, then, is our help—to seek reality for our thoughts of the Father's goodness to us, by looking upon it all as given through the Lord Jesus Christ.—The Churchman.

"What makes that noise?" asked a little boy on the train, the other day. "The cars," answered his mother. "What for?" "Because they are moving." "What are they moving for?" "The engine makes them." "What engine?" "The engine in front." "What's it in front for?" "To pull the train." "What train?" "This one." "This car?" repeated the youngster, pointing to the one in which they sat. "Yes." "What does it pull it for?" "The engineer makes it." "What engineer?" "The man on the engine." "What engine?" "The one in front." "What is that in front for?" "I told you that before." "Told who when?" "Told you." "What for?" "Oh! be still. You are a nuisance." "What's a nuisance?" "A boy who asks too many questions." "Whose boy?" "My boy." "What questions?" The conductor came through just then and took up the tickets, and the train pulled up to the station before we could get all of the conversation. The last we heard as the lady jerked the youngster off the platform, was: "What conductor?"

STAND FOR HIM.—Have the courage to stand for God, even if you have to stand alone. Have the courage to say nothing when you have nothing to say. Have the courage to remain "on the fence" as long as the mud is knee deep on both sides. Have the courage of two evils to choose the least, but of two wrongs to choose neither. Have the courage to believe in God with all your heart, and to own his name everywhere.—The Christian.

A man who uses his tongue too much is apt to use his hands too little. Great professors are not often great doers. Life is not long enough to permit us to become proficient in two directions. "My business is to talk," said one of those self elected saints who touch others the way, but go not therein themselves. "Yes," was the sharp reply, "and I have never known your place of business to be closed."

Religious Intelligence.

—The Cherokee Indian Baptist Association has 1,100 members, against 703 last year.

—There are 137 Lutheran churches, 90 ministers and 12,000 members in the State of Virginia.

—In France the Protestant Central Society has opened several new churches recently. Pastor Bost, of Laforce, and Pastor Ernest Monod have returned to the National Reformed Church.

—The Cologne Gazette has a letter from an Amsterdam correspondent, stating that "a dissension has occurred in the Dutch Reformed Church, which threatens to bring about a separation between the Liberal and Orthodox elements. Last year the synod had, at the request of about four hundred pastors, who deemed the form of the confirmation creed to be against their own and their pupils' conscience, changed it in a Liberal sense. This year's synod has annulled this resolution, and made again the old stricter form obligatory, so that many pastors find it impossible to proceed to confirmations. These pastors have met at Amsterdam, and resolved to request the synod to return to last year's resolution. The success of this step is doubtful, as the Orthodox Protestants have long labored to obtain the majority in the synod, for the sole purpose of compelling the Liberals to secede."

—It is announced that the United Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions has completed negotiations with the Irish Presbyterian Committee of Missions for the transfer of the mission in Syria. The committee has already paid the amount agreed upon for the Bludan property—the only property owned exclusively by our United Presbyterian Board; All the rest, being the joint property of the mission, will remain in the hands of the Irish Board; but, according to the terms of agreement, the United Presbyterian Board may return, and reoccupy it with its missionaries, if at any time it desires to do so. Mr. Crawford, of the United Presbyterian Church, remains with the mission and in the service of the Irish Board. These changes have been made partly with a view to a larger outlay upon the missions in Egypt and India, which have been very successful, and both of which offer good opportunities and encouragement for extension.

—In the Chronicle of the London Society we find an interesting article on the "South African Races," taken from the Cape Monthly Magazine. The writer, having for years been brought into close contact with the South African tribes, gives a very clear statement of their present relations toward civilization and Christianity. The races referred to are four in number—the Hottentots, Kaffirs, Zulus and Bechuanas. Each of them is broken up into a great number of tribes, yet presents certain common features which distinguish it from the others as a separate race. The Hottentots have been longest under Christian influence, but have drawn the least benefit from it. Converts are won with difficulty, and when they have been won do not display much steadfastness. The Kaffirs are an immensely superior race, both physically and intellectually. They are tall and powerful in frame, graceful in limb, intelligent in appearance, and proud in manner. Their tribal arrangements are superior to those of the Hottentots, and they seldom sink so deep in the moral scale as do their neighbors. The effect of Christianity upon them cannot, however, be said to be adequate to the labors which have been put forth in their behalf for the last fifty years. As a nation they have not received the gospel. Their pride, aversion to change, and warlike spirit have prevented them from regarding the Christian religion with any widespread sympathy. As yet they have been content to take up the vices of European civilization, rather than its virtues. At the present time renewed efforts are being made among them by such men as Dr. Stewart, of Lovedale, and Maj. Malau. They seem to have reached a crisis in their history, and upon the results of the Christian labors now being expended on their will depend their future of national life or death. The Zulus, who are very numerous, stretching from the southern boundary of Natal to the Zambesi, are very similar to the Kaffirs. They are not so powerful in frame, but are active, lithe and enduring. In pride they equal their southern neighbors, and in quickness of intellect exceed them. They have not come into so close contact, as yet, with Europeans as have the Kaffirs, and their reception of the gospel presents about the same lack of encouragement. The Bechuanas far outnumber the three races already referred to. They occupy the interior of South Africa from the Orange river all the way up to the Zambesi. They are remarkably distinct from the other races. Their manners are mild and tractable. They prefer to cultivate the soil rather than rove about as nomads, and have strong religious tendencies. The Christian religion has produced better fruit among them than among their neighbors. This has been especially the case with the Basutos, who stand at the head of their race. Their government is better organized and freer than that of other tribes. The poor man of the tribe may contradict the wealthiest chief to his face in the general assembly of the people. Recently they have applied to the Cape Colony government for representation in the legislature. As a nation they may be said to have received the gospel. Not that the vast majority are yet Christians, but the influence of the Parisian missionaries extends throughout the whole tribe. This may be seen in the remarkable fact that throughout their country, among both heathens and Christians, no work is done on the Sabbath day. Nowhere else in South Africa will this be found to be the case. The writer looks forward to the time when the Bechuana race will represent what is brightest and best in the prospects of the South African native population.—Independent.

WISHES.

BY MARY N. PRESCOTT.

I wish that the grasses would learn to sprout,
That the lilac and rose-bush would both leaf out;
That the crocus would put on her gay green frill,
And robins begin to whistle and trill:

I wish that the wind-flower would grope its way
Out of the darkness into the day;
That the rain would fall and the sun would shine,
And the rainbow hang in the sky for a sign.

I wish that the silent brooks would shout,
And the apple-blossoms begin to pout;
And if I wish long enough, no doubt
The fairy spring will bring it about!

From Our Little Friends.

DOUGLAS, LA., March 12, 1878.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: We thought, as so many of the little boys and girls were writing to you, that we would write you a few lines, as we have never seen any from this place. We are going to school and learning very fast. We like our teacher very much; he is so good and kind to us. We are very sorry to say that we have not a Sabbath school. We have Methodist preaching at Downsville once a month. Mr. Patterson is our preacher. We like him very much. The word "son" is mentioned fifty-six times in Luke 11. Who wrote the Acts of the Apostles?

Your little friends,

The King in His Beauty.

However beautiful the place may be which is to be our heaven, we never could be satisfied with that alone. Jeweled walls and pearly gates and golden streets are all very well. They must be wonderfully beautiful. But these, of themselves, could never make us happy. When we go to the house we live in, and which we call home, what is it that makes it feel so sweet and pleasant to us? It is not the walls of the building, but it is the presence there of a dear father or mother, of brothers and sisters, of those whom we love and who we know do love us. And so it will be with heaven.

And now let us talk a little about the company we shall meet in heaven. Who will make up this company? Well, to begin with, the angels will form a part of this company. We are told in the Bible that there will be in heaven "an innumerable company of angels"—Hebrews xii, 22. I never saw an angel. You never saw an angel. No doubt that any of us would feel frightened if we should see an angel come into the room where we were. For we know from what the Bible tells us that the angels are very beautiful. They are always spoken of as clothed in white. They are sometimes spoken of as having wings, but not always. And to see such a beautiful place as heaven is, filled with such beautiful beings as angels are, must help to make it very beautiful.

But now I think I hear one of you say: "Ah! yes; the angels, I dare say, are very beautiful; but then I don't know them, and they don't know me. I should be afraid of them. I don't think I could feel at home or happy with them."

This is very natural. And if there were to be none but angels in the company of heaven, it would not feel very much like home to us. But there will be others in heaven besides the angels. Abraham will be there, and so will Joseph, and David, and Daniel, and Peter, and John, and Paul, and all the good people who have died since will be there, too.

But then the company of heaven comes nearer to us even than this. I suppose there is not one person who may read this article but who has some friend or relative in heaven. Have you lost a beloved father or mother, or uncle or aunt, who loved Jesus? You will find them in heaven. Have you lost a dear mother or sister old enough to love and serve Jesus? You will find them in heaven. Hear what an aged minister once said on this very point:

HEAVEN.

"When I was a boy I used to think of heaven as a glorious golden city, with nobody in it but the angels, and they were all strangers to me. But after awhile my little brother died; then I thought of heaven as that great city full of angels, with just one little fellow in it that I was acquainted with. He was the only one I knew there at the time. Then another brother died, and there were two in heaven that I knew. Then my acquaintances began to die, and the number of my friends in heaven grew larger all the time. But it was not till one of my own little ones was taken that I began to feel that I had a personal interest in heaven. Then a second went, and a third, and a fourth; and so many of my friends and loved ones have gone there that it seems as if I know more of heaven than I do of earth. And now, when my thoughts turn to heaven, it is not the gold and the jewels and the pearls that I think of, but the loved ones there. It is not the place so much as the company that makes heaven seem beautiful."

Have any of us lost dear little baby-brothers and sisters, too young to learn about Jesus here? We shall find them in heaven. Did you ever think of this: that there are more children in heaven than there are grown people? It is so. Do you ask me how I know it? I will tell you.

It is very well known that more than half of all the people taken from this world die when they are children. But Jesus takes all the little ones to heaven. He taught us this himself when he took them in his arms, put his hands on them and blessed them, saying: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." We have thus seen that at least one-half of those born into the world go to heaven, because they die as children. But what becomes of the other half? Do they all go to heaven? Alas! No. A good many of them never love or serve or trust in Jesus. It is a sad thing to say it, but it is true; they cannot go to heaven. And if the whole of one-half of those born into this world die as children and thus go to heaven, and only part of the other half who grow up to be men and women go to heaven, then it is plain that as the whole of one half is greater than a part of the other half, there must be more children in heaven than there are grown people.

And some people think that when children die and go to heaven they do not grow up to be men and women, but that they always remain children. I am not able to say for certain that this is so, because God has not told us about it, and no one can tell us for him. But I hope it may be so. For I do love children so much, that I should like to think that there will always be children in heaven. But if they all grew up to be men and women, by and by there will be no children there and this, it seems to me, would not be so pleasant.

If you go into a garden you never find all the flowers in full bloom at the same time. Instead of this, you will find mingled with the full blown flowers some buds half opened, and others just beginning to open. And this variety adds much to the beauty of the garden. Heaven is God's garden. Christian men and women will be the full-blown flowers in that garden, and children will be the buds.

But this company in heaven will be all good and kind and holy. They will be all "made perfect." Here in this world we have no perfect children, and no perfect men and women. But we shall all be perfect there. There will be none blind, or deaf, or lame, or sick in heaven. There will be none cross, or proud, or stupid in heaven. There will be no quarrels of any kind in heaven. There will be perfect beauty in the place and perfect beauty in the company there. And they will all know and love one another there. No one will feel a stranger or afraid in heaven. It is a very painful feeling we have when we feel ourselves alone and unknown among strangers.

THE STRANGER NOT A STRANGER.

In the early settlement of the city of Cincinnati there was only one way for persons to get there; and that was by means of the flat boats that passed up and down the river.

On one occasion a boat landed there. It had come down the river from Pittsburg. There was a company of people on board that boat who were going to Cincinnati to live there. Their friends were expecting their arrival, and had met down by the side of the river to welcome them. As they left the boat their friends gathered round them to shake hands with them, and give them the warmest kind of a greeting.

But in that company who had just arrived there was one who was a stranger. He had no friends or any one that knew him in Cincinnati. There was no one there to shake hands with him or bid him welcome to the place. He had been feeling lonely before; he felt ten times more so now.

The crowd was beginning to scatter, leaving that stranger alone on the boat. Leaping over the railing of the boat, he called after them, saying:

"Friends, if there are any of you who love the Lord Jesus Christ, I am your brother."

In a moment half a dozen of them were at his side. They shook him warmly by the hand, and bade him welcome to their homes.

How different Cincinnati seemed to that stranger now from what it did a moment before! The place indeed, was the same, but oh! how different the company seemed! He was among friends now, and that made him feel at home.

And so it will be with us when we get to heaven. Jesus will know and love every one who enters there. He will introduce us to those who are there before, and they will all love us because we love Jesus. Angels and Christians, old men and young men, women and children, will all make one happy family.

"Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty." There will be beauty in the place and beauty in the company.—Sunday-School World.

A priest was hearing confession, and a boy came to this and said he had a bad sin on his mind. "Well, me good boy, come to me wid it," said his reverence. "Augh, den, your riverence, I do be always cavin'." "Be the Holy Father!" "You do? That's very bad, me boy. Now how often do you be sayin' that?" "Begor, once than forty times a day your riverence." "Tin home, now," said the priest, "and get your sister to make you a bag and hang it round your neck and every time you say, 'Be the Holy Father,' drop a little stone in it, and come to me this day week." That day week his reverence was, as usual, in his box and he heard an awful noise in the church, so he looked out and saw his penitent dragging a sack. "Tady Molloy," says he, "what do you mane by such conduct as that in the church?" "Shure, yer riverence," says the fellow, "dose is all 'Be the Holy Father,' and the rest of me's outside on the stray."

Dr. Tyng, Jr., tells a story on himself which has some point in it to those who are engaged in preaching before they are ready. While studying in Virginia he was in the habit of holding service at a neighboring chapel. A friendly old darkey used to pass his church and trudge a mile beyond to a Methodist meeting house. When asked why he did not go to hear Massa Tyng, he made this shrewd reply: "Ah, no; don't cat boils nigger 'letting' de students practice on him."

Too Intensely Respectable.

Years ago a distinguished Presbyterian preacher of New York declared that the churches in the great metropolis were "dying of respectability." There are some churches that particularly affect respectability based upon the wealth, fashion and intelligence of their membership. They cannot boast of superior numbers, but the quality of what they have more than compensates. The service is beautiful; the music exquisite and worthy of being advertised and the preaching very short and proper. A certain success attends them, but the grosser elements of society are neither attracted nor saved. When Methodism aims at this kind of respectability it falls flat, and the salt has lost its savor.

Our esteemed friend who writes of his church: "We are too intensely respectable, cold and indifferent," describes a condition of things which has obtained in several localities, and there is found serious loss. A respectability that is designed to meet the tastes of fashionable sinners, that discourages the attendance of the poor, and that ignores the old-time drill of altar exercises and class meetings is the path to death. There are enough churches in the world that are conducted on the line of mere respectability. The mission and uses of Methodism are different, and her work is to awaken souls and bring them to Christ. We cannot compete with the churches that maintain an elaborate ritual, and that depend upon their forms and social conditions for influence and strength. If Methodism be not a living, spiritual organism, she is nothing. Her origin was a protest against that dead respectability that lulled rich and fashionable sinners into carnal security, and left the multitudes of the poor and ignorant to perish in their degradation. Her continuance in the world is to the end that the power of the gospel may be felt to be a reality, and that the demonstration of this power may be an ever present one in a station.

That respectability which kills a church is, of course, a false respectability. It is the blending of worldliness and formality, the union of "the pride of life" with the spirit of Pharisaism. That respectability which consists in real spirituality, intelligence and genuine refinement will never be ranged in opposition to the most effective methods for the conversion of souls. An experienced and leading Methodist pastor recently remarked to us that he found himself embarrassed and obstructed in his work by the number of unconverted members in his charge. It is not difficult to understand how this is a serious hinderance. These unconverted members have the respectable type of religion. They do not care to hear close, searching preaching; they cannot see the harm there is in certain popular recreations; and a revival, with its lively exercises and disturbing emotions, is not at all to their liking. These respectable people are rarely at prayer meeting; with them the class meeting is an obsolete institution, and a rule of the rougher and less cultivated days of the church. There may be a thin veneering of skepticism, such as overspreads the world at the present time. Sin is not the dreadful thing it was thought to be, hell may be a mere figure representing an evanescent shadow on the soul's after being, and the new birth is little more than a moral impression. To them religion is merely civilization and good morals and social relations, endorsed in the form of a church organization.

This is, perhaps, an extreme statement, which applies only to individuals here and there; but there is something of this leaven in the churches. The tendency to this impotent and Christless degeneracy obtains. "Too intensely respectable." We should hardly have chosen this topic if it had not in various ways been forced upon our attention. In the sense in which the writer uses the expression there is meaning fraught with interest to those who watch the signs of the times. In many things there is room for improvement. We are in sympathy with those who desire better church architecture, and a more becoming and effective service of song. We would do everything possible for the enlightenment and education of our people, and for their wider cultivation in letters and art. But from this respectable type of religion—this pseudo respectability in the churches, made up of ignorance, conceit, worldliness and carnality—may the Lord in his mercy deliver us. When conviction of sin, repentance, and conversion as an outright experience and confession are no longer proper, and when the altar is no more a place for seekers, with their praying friends, to come, then have we become too intensely respectable for Methodism to live and flourish.

No form of Christianity is more comprehensive than Methodism. Certainly our General Rules and articles of religion are broad enough for all true believers to stand on. But sin and worldliness cannot be comprehended in this system. It ought to be understood and taught that while our doors are open to penitent sinners, and to the true followers of Christ, there is no place for those who are more intent on respectability than on the attainment of holy hearts and godly lives.

How does it happen that this dry rot, this evil of intense respectability, gets into churches so as to mar the work of God, and to injure the general prosperity? If a faithful pastor finds it so, does he leave it so? We sometimes hear Methodist preachers speak doubtingly of the old and tried ways. Generally they are young men, but not always. Here is a family that would come into the church, but they cannot abide noisy revivals, and do not like class meetings. The class meeting is smoothed over by calling it a Bible-reading or something else, and the meetings are pitched on a lower key. Here are young people who would join the church, but they are fond of the theater, and dance occasionally. They will get over these things after awhile, and let them come in with no particular understanding on these points. Thus there is a dying to get respectable people into the church, and the church is dying in some places because they are in. With us the remedy is mainly with the pastor. Spiritual and faithful preaching and devotion to the old landmarks will break the shell after awhile. The gospel glass will show the respectable Christians what they are in the sight of God, and that death and the judgment will strip them of all their fancied comeliness, and expose the frightful deformities of a religion that does not change the heart. Against this morbid cry for respectability must be exhibited the thunders of the divine law, the soul-searching requirements of the gospel, and the necessity of deep repentance. And revivals and revival methods must be insisted on. The conversion of souls is the most respectable work that a Christian church can do, and that is the most respectable church that has most of the Holy Ghost in it.

Bryant.

The death of William Cullen Bryant removes from the active stage one of the best-known and one of the most admired literary men of the present century. He had reached the unusual age of more than fourscore, and for seventy years he was busy with his pen. He was a journalist as well as an author, and his prose writings and public addresses, including letters of travel, are voluminous. It is, however, as a poet that he is best known, and as a poet he will be longest and most affectionately remembered.

His genius was of the serene and healthful order. The gift of genius, especially of the imaginative and poetic kind, is often a consuming disease, existing in connection with great eccentricities and striking infirmities. Mr. Bryant had a well balanced mind, a temperament that harmonized with practical affairs, and a physical constitution that could endure steady and plodding labor. He attributed his good health and long life to his moderation. He was a moderate eater, moderate in his pleasures, and moderate in work. There was no excess in his physical or mental habits, and yet up to the last he was busy. He lived nearly as long as John Wesley, and his longevity was largely due to the same causes—moderation, strict temperance and persistent work.

We know little of his inner spiritual life, but we infer from the moral and religious tone of his most exquisite verses that he was a man of devout spirit, whose communings were not alone with nature, but with nature's God. "Thanatopsis," written at the age of nineteen, is evidently the production of a mind alive to the supports and revelations of divine truth. In "The Flood of Years" and in "The Death of the Flowers" there is a beauty akin to the spiritual. We desire to believe that there was in his gifted soul a higher and better inspiration than the merely sensuous and sentimental.

He was by eminence the poet of nature, in sympathy especially with her more somber moods, and a skillful interpreter of her voices as they proclaimed lessons of serious thought and moral purity. His poetry has not passages of great sublimity, but it has pathos, tenderness, beauty, and a pensive and tranquil flow that reminds us of murmuring brooks, and the subdued music of a summer night.

He loved civil liberty, and admired and honored patriotism. His last public act was to deliver an address at the unveiling of the statue of Mazzini. Although a journalist and a political writer, he was above the tricks of partisanship, and was ever intent on what he regarded the best interests of his country. After so long a career his character stands without a stain.

He was to the last a lover of little children, and the last poem that he ever wrote was contributed to the Washington's birthday number of the Sunday School Times. We know not how such a long and illustrious authorship could have been closed in a manner more fitting or sublime. Washington, the Sunday school and Bryant! The patriot was never more worthily sung, and never were the last words of a poet addressed to a grander audience. The poem is as follows:

THE TWENTY-SECOND OF FEBRUARY.

Pale is the February sky;
And brief the holiday's sunny hours,
The wind-swept forest seems to sigh
For the sweet time of leaves and flowers

Yet like an hour lit a promise day,
Not even when the summer broods
O'er meadows in their fresh array;
Or autumn dons the glowing woods.

For this chill season now again
Brings in its annual round the morn
When, first of the sons of men,
Our glorious Washington was born.

Lo, where he breasts an icy shield,
Calmly the mighty Hudson flows
Up snow clad hill and frozen field,
Broadening the lordly river's glass.

The wildest storm that sweeps through space,
And rends the oak with sudden force,
Can raise no ripple on his face,
Or slacken his majestic course.

Thus, 'mid the wreck of thrones, shall live
Unmarred, undimmed, our hero's fame,
And years succeeding years shall give
Increase of honors to his name.

The Faith Commended.

In only two instances, we believe, did the Master commend faith. He frequently sought to develop it—frequently charged a want of it. But in only two instances was it so great, unexpected or peculiar as to call forth special commendation. He never failed to recognize it by granting the blessings sought, no matter by whom exercised or in whom found. In the cases referred to, wherein there was even apparent surprise in the Savior himself, and in which he specially commended faith, it is significant that it was found in strangers. Neither one (the centurion) nor the other (the Syrophenician woman) was of Israel, in whom alone faith in the Messias was expected. To the one he said: "O woman! great is thy faith." Of the other he said: "I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel."

The centurion's faith, in itself, was worthy of the divine commendation. The moral conditions were perfect. We take it that the commendation was rather in the way of recommendation and rebuke to others, more favored, than in the sense of personal merit in the man. The centurion, having done all commanded, evidently counted himself "an unprofitable servant." The truth is that herein lay the beauty and moral grandeur of his faith.

And then it was not only worthy, in itself, of the divine commendation, but specially so as a faith found outside of Israel. It seems to us that special stress is given to the divine praise for this reason. It may be taken as an evidence that the mission of Jesus was not to the Jews only, but also to the Gentile world. His love reached to all men, and his grace touched the hearts of foreign shores. He did not come a priest after the order of Aaron, but of another, in order to become the priest of God to the uttermost parts of the earth.

The centurion seems to have been a good man. He had evidently been largely won from paganism. His disinterested love and unselfish tenderness toward his servant were some of the fruits, perhaps, of his knowledge of the Mosaic law. His interest in the Jews—building them a synagogue—was not from a spirit of policy, but from good religious principle. Their commendation, "He is worthy," was a sincere tribute to his moral character. In reference to his servant, it might be thought that self interest prompted him in his application for help. The spirit of the lesson is against this. This servant "was dear unto him." It was not because of faithful service in the past, nor was it from a like faithful service anticipated. Such sordid motives, prompting prayer, would never meet with a favorable answer, much less divine praise. Faith can never spring from such gross thoughts and feelings. So his love to his servant, and his interest in the Jewish nation, then in subjugation and service to his own master, was the fruit of a good heart. These prepared him to hear of Jesus, and to enter into the hopes of the Jews concerning the Messias; and also prepared him, in his extremity—in his eager casting about for help—to have faith in Jesus and call upon him as his only hope for relief. His humility is an important factor also in the make up of his character. His faith was marvelous in the eyes of Jesus. His humility is marvelous in ours. Humility is always attractive—is always beautiful. It draws all hearts to it. It wins its way to the divine recognition. Humility always precedes faith. Great faith is always gauged by great humility. He came to Jesus "beseeching him." He did not ask anything directly for himself. He did not ask directly anything for his servant. He only told Jesus the fact: "My servant lieth at home sick," etc. He left his pleading eyes and hungering heart to finish the prayer. And then, having gained his point, his humility deepened and broadened: "I am not worthy," etc. Faith brings faith. Humility begets humility. "I am not worthy. Say in a word," etc. Jesus marveled: "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." Let ours be the deep humility and the great faith of the centurion.

Our Invalides.

Almost every civilized nation provides for the support of its worn-out soldiers. There is no greater liberality and a higher obligation that the churches should provide for the worn-out soldiers of the cross. The worn-out itinerant has peculiar claims. The Methodist system makes it impossible for the most of our preachers to make any provision for sickness and old age. In other callings men have at least the hope of laying by something, but the itinerant minister, through all his effective years, must regard it as certain that if he lives to be old he will be without all quick support, and that if he dies in middle age his family will be left in a dependent condition. Our system for the relief of Conference claimants may not be the best; but if the regular collection for this object be used as it should be much will be realized. Under the above caption, "Our Invalides," the National Repository has an editorial article which we commend to our readers. The article is moderate in its tone, calm in its statements, and calculated, we think, to awaken increased interest and effort in providing for our widows, orphans and worn-out preachers. Dr. Curry says:

The weakest and the worst point of the Methodist itinerancy, as that system is administered in this country, is the want of any adequate provision for the support of its disabled or worn-out ministers and the families of deceased ministers. The theory of that system is that during the time of his effective service a minister shall receive, year by year, "the amount necessary to furnish a comfortable support" for himself and family, of which necessary amount the church he serves, and from whose voluntary contributions his support is derived, is constituted the arbiter; and even that estimate, when duly made out, does not amount to a legal claim. As a rule, however, the churches, it is believed, deal fairly with their ministers, though from a variety of causes the amounts estimated are often painfully small, and of these a large proportion remains forever unpaid. Still, we are not disposed to complain very loudly against the rate of support which the churches, as a whole, extend to their pastors; though there are no doubt, in all the Conferences cases of individual hardship, and in some of them the average rate of allowances is painfully insufficient. But since the Conferences provide a field of labor for each of their effective members, with a more or less nearly adequate support, the effective Methodist traveling preacher may be accounted as tolerably well provided for, at least in the older Conferences.

But for the non-effective ministers, who constitute nearly one-fifth of the whole, most of whom may be presumed to be poor (since they have spent the whole term of their active lives laboring for only a bare living,) and they are also presumably no longer able to gain a livelihood for themselves (because they are "worn out")—for these indigent and helpless veterans the church makes only the most insufficient provision. No law or provision of the Discipline indicates any definite amounts to which such persons may be entitled, but the whole matter of determining that question, and from what sources anything may be derived, is left to each of the Annual Conferences to determine finally for its own members. And since there are more than ninety Annual Conferences, many of which are made up almost entirely of very poor churches, and whose effective ministers receive very inadequate support, it may be presumed that the provision for the non-effective members of all such Conferences must be painfully inadequate. In some of the older and more wealthy Conferences a worn-out preacher, if he is known to be without any other means of support, may receive a stipend of from one to two hundred dollars a year (and once and a half or twice that amount if he has a wife) made up chiefly from collections taken up in the churches; but in most Conferences, and especially those on the frontiers of the work, much less than this is done, verging down to very little or absolutely nothing.

The effect of this state of things cannot fail to be sadly damaging to the morale of the ministry as a working force designed to be exclusively devoted to their "one work." The minister in active life cannot fail to anticipate the surely approaching event of his ceasing to be effective, and therefore he is warned by the facts of the case to lay by something out of his not over-abundant income against the demands of that coming "rainy day." Out of this grow several much to be deprecated results. His mind must be more or less clouded by the shadow of the certainly coming days of want, and to guard against this he must deny himself and family some of even the simple necessaries of life, which are recognized as such by those whom he serves. He is also continually tempted, if possible, to engage in some outside work, in order to increase his income; and so he becomes a lecturer, or he writes for the press, or still worse, he engages in some speculation, or accepts some secular agency that he may in some way make provision against the dreaded poverty that comes with superannuation. The bad effects of all this are but very inadequately appreciated by those who are interested in the effectiveness and the good name of the Methodist ministry while to those engaged in these things they not infrequently prove little better than a disappointment and a snare.

Another result, scarcely less deplorable in its effects, is the uncertain tenure by which membership in the traveling connection has been and still is held. Statistics show a tendency to drain upon the working forces of the traveling ministry into the ranks of the local ministry, where in very many cases brightest lights are effectually hid under a bushel. Men of independent spirits and constitutionally self reliant—especially when they find the claims of their natural dependents pressing upon them—become restive under the restrictions of a position that, while it fails to make any provision in itself forbids them to adequately care for their own interests, and therefore they seek a location to better their estate. That this is in most cases a virtual casting off of the vows of the ministry and that it is often only an escape from a sad to a worse estate reasonably may indeed be urged as dissuasives against taking such a course; but the loss annually sustained by the denomination is none the less real. Its surest remedy would be a sure and moderately sufficient provision for the comfortable maintenance of the worn-out veterans of the traveling ministry.

The man who has reached middle life in the ministry is usually disqualified for successfully prosecuting almost any secular calling. When, therefore, the Conference has received a man into its membership, and has had his services until he has become, by age and habits, disqualified for any other profession or calling in life, there rests upon that body a most sacred obligation to keep him and find a place for him; and when for any cause he ceases to be available, then to retire him with a moderate competency. The entrance into the Conferences cannot readily be too carefully guarded against the admission of the wrong persons; but the most sacred demands of right and of honor, and, as well, the highest claims of a wise expediency, all concur in asking a just and proper provision for the no longer effective traveling ministers. The lack of such a provision is a painful defect in our system, as practically administered.

THAT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.—Seashore camp meeting begins on the same day—July 10. With quarterly meeting nearly every week, we find it almost impossible to attend District Conferences. When we might arrange for some the money question comes in to hinder. If our friends will stir up the ADVOCATE subscriptions, and put the publisher in a condition to meet the expense, the editor will arrange for a few District Conferences. We like to go, and nothing but necessity prevents. We hope the brethren will earnestly urge the claims of the ADVOCATE at the District Conferences.

We call attention to the announcement of the commencement exercises of the Southern University. We regret our inability to attend.

Rev. Barnabas Pipkin.

The following note from Bro. Godfrey was mislaid during our absence in May. We trust that an obituary sketch of Bro. Pipkin will be furnished. He was one of the worthy pioneer preachers, and was widely known and greatly beloved.

GREENSBURG, LA., May 13, 1878.

MR. EDITOR: Rev. Barnabas Pipkin, of the Mississippi Conference, died last Saturday, the eleventh instant, at eleven o'clock P. M., at his dear old home in St. Helena parish, La., where, with his young wife (Eliza Hanna,) of blessed memory, he settled fifty-one years ago.

Surrounded by his sons and daughter, and other loved ones, in profound peace, and in wondrous faith and brightness of Christian hope, with sweet farewell words of exhortation to all—rational to the last moment—this man of God, this ever-trusted and revered minister of Christ, has passed "over the river." We buried him, with our solemn and beautiful church service, at two o'clock this day, near his homestead, in the Clinton and Pipkin cemetery, where sleeps the dust of Rev. Thomas Clinton, and many dear to them in life.

Bro. Pipkin had been a member of the church he so much loved and so faithfully served about seventy years, and a minister of the gospel fifty-nine years. A memorial of his life and labors will be written and published in due time.

Yours truly,

JAMES A. GODFREY.

BIOGRAPHY OF BISHOP MARVIN. Rev. T. M. Finney, D. D., is at work on this biography. He has undertaken it at the special request of the family of the deceased Bishop, and with the approval of the Bishop's colleagues. Dr. Finney has peculiar qualifications for the work. He knew Bishop Marvin well, was in complete sympathy and accord with him in church affairs, and is the trusted friend and counselor of the bereaved family. To him it will be a labor of love, and we have no doubt it will be most worthily performed. We call attention to the communication of Dr. Finney, which will be found on our first page. In it the doctor gives a full statement of his plan, the scope of the book, and the materials at his disposal. Bishops Paine, Pierce, Doggett, McTyeire and Keener are to contribute each a monograph. We suppose the biography will be issued early in the fall. Thousands will wait for it with eager expectation.

Touching the Publishing House and the recent meeting of the Book Committee the Nashville Christian Advocate of June 23 says:

The General Conference elected a very able Book Committee, which were in session for nearly a week. We were present by invitation a part of the time, and we know that they did all in their power to comprehend and master the situation; and they adopted prudent measures for the present management of the house, and have under consideration important measures affecting its future fortunes. We can say with assurance that the new book agent has taken hold of the business with his characteristic energy and devotion to the interests of the church. He feels deeply the responsibility of his situation, and is entitled to the most cordial and earnest support of the entire connection. He has as yet no business agent to assist him in the management of the house; this is a matter for future consideration. Meanwhile we earnestly exhort all our friends to rally to the house, make a vigorous effort to extend the circulation of the Christian Advocate and Sunday school periodicals, to sell the books of the house, and settle their accounts as speedily as possible. With a new committee, agent, and editor of the Advocate—a new departure—with a helping Providence, we look for brighter skies and better times.

We regret to learn that Dr. F. M. Kennedy, editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, has been seriously ill for several weeks. The Wesleyan Christian Advocate of June 18 brings the good tidings that he is rapidly recovering. The following dispatch appears in the Christian Neighbor, from which we infer that the Southern will be issued soon:

SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE,
CHARLESTON, S. C., June 12, 1878.

The Southern Christian Advocate is to be published in Charleston by Messrs. Walker, Evans & Cogswell. Rev. S. A. Weaver is appointed associate editor with Dr. Kennedy, who, all are rejoiced to learn, is recovering from recent partial paralysis.

S. H. H.

A full notice of the trustees of Seashore camp ground will be found on the eighth page of this number of the ADVOCATE. The meeting begins on Wednesday, July 10. Arrangements are in a good state of forwardness on the ground, and we hope all the tenters will be on hand and settled in their temporary homes by the evening of the ninth.

We regret to learn that Rev. R. H. Downer and his wife have been bereaved by the death of their infant son, Frank Arthur, who died at Newton, Miss., June 12, aged seven weeks.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the shortest, quickest and best Northern line to New York and the Eastern cities. During the heat of summer the greatest comfort in traveling is found on the route by Chicago or Louisville and along the shore of the great lakes, or through the grand scenery of the Alleghany mountains. To pass through these regions there is no route so direct, so quick, or so good as the Jackson, with its through cars to Detroit and solid vestibuled trains to leave New Orleans one hour later than any other, and make the same time.

Excursion tickets are now on sale by this route, good till October 31, to all the attractive and famous summer resorts of the Northwest, best known among which are Waukesha, with its celebrated springs; Minnewoc, the center of the delightful lake district of Wisconsin; Green Lake, Grand Haven, St. Paul, Niagara Falls, Montreal, Quebec, etc. The rates are as low or lower than to watering-places in other parts of the country, and living, both at hotels and boarding-houses, cheap and of the best. The country through which this highly cultivated and furnishing every drink desirable for the palate.

All are invited to call at the ticket office 22 Camp street under the City Hotel where guide books, descriptions, routes rates etc. will be furnished and the fullest information given.

VANDALIA LINE.—For the information of our readers and the traveling public we call to the merits of the above line. For ladies riding Fast Express St. Louis to Effingham is delightful. Entire train consists of elegant parlor cars, riding luxuriously, well and all sleeping cars in front of the rear coach, and all meals served in Harvey Restaurant Dining Rooms. Before reaching Effingham, Vandalia line crosses the Ohio river at Mt. Carmel, a distance of only 100 miles from Evansville, Ind., and 150 miles from Louisville, Ky. Through tickets via Vandalia line to all points East, North and Northeast, can be had of all agents.

ASTHMA.—Dr. O. Phelps Brown, 120 Carondelet street, New Orleans, has made the above disease a specialty for the past 20 years. The most obstinate cases yield to his skill. Dr. Brown is the only physician in the city who has proved by analysis and experiment the nature of Asthma, and will guarantee a cure in every case. Consultation free. Office hours 9 to 11 A. M. and 2 to 4 P. M.

IMPORTANT TO CANE GROWERS.—The Planters' Chemical Attractor and flavor of sorghum, is said to have no special drawback. It is highly recommended. It is claimed by the Clough Refining Process that it does away with the nauseous taste and smell entirely and gives a superior article for the best sugar house syrup. For particulars and descriptive pamphlet address the Clough Refining Company, Box Cincinnati, Ohio.

BARNES' HOTEL, MISSISSIPPI CITY.—In choosing a watering place for the summer we would suggest to our readers that they can find no better place than Mississippi City, in the best interests to be gained. The grounds are delightful, for its healthfulness, beautiful scenery and the surf bathing. Hon. Charles E. Sutcliffe and J. E. Rowland are the proprietors. These gentlemen are highly respected and will do everything in their power to render their guests comfortable.

ON THE fourth of July there will be an excursion from this city to Mississippi City, by the members of the Association of the Army of Tennessee for the purpose of presenting to Hon. Jefferson Davis a badge of membership, that organization. Full particulars hereafter. Those wishing to go can procure tickets for the round trip for $5.

MRS. HOVEY, 133 EAST SIXTEENTH STREET, New York.—Parties of limited means, who cannot afford to stop at fashionable hotels, should call on the above place. The accommodations are first class in every respect and Mrs. Hovey leaves nothing undone to make her guests comfortable.

ATTORNEY AT LAW.—Judge R. K. Howell has a card on this page. He is a lawyer of much experience and ability, having been practicing here for some fifteen or twenty years. Those who need the professional services will find him at 28 Carondelet street.

WE REFER parties needing steam engines, boilers, mills, guns, pistols, etc., to the advertisement of R. Dietz & Co., Nos 12 Union street, New Orleans, La.; they, being manufacturers and dealers of well-established reputation.

HIWASSEE COLLEGE, located in East Tennessee is under the management of Rev. J. H. Bonner, who has had much experience in the education of the young. See advertisement.

DRY GOODS.—Call at P. H. Adams & Bro's, 39 Magazine street, for everything in the dry goods line. They are particularly refining. Read the advertisement.

COMMISSION MERCHANT.—J. A. Ingerick, 147 Decatur street, dealer in cotton, sugar, rice, moss, hides, etc. Send him your orders.

PAN HANDLE AND LOUISVILLE ROUTE.—Those who contemplate and desire to travel should not fail to observe that by the Louisville route Pan Handle and Pennsylvania railroad, to New York and all other Northeastern cities, there is but one change of cars, and that change is in the Pan Handle depot at Cincinnati, which is really no change at all, as a fresh car takes the place of the old one while the travelers are breakfasting. The scenery of this route is very much like the mountain beauties of Switzerland—mountain piled on mountain, and range after range coming into view until nature resembles one vast panorama. The food at the way-stations on this thoroughfare is of the choicest character, superior to that obtained at Columbus, Ohio, Pittsburg, Altoona, Harrisburg and Philadelphia. This grand national route is double-tracked and stone-ballasted, and free from dust. Boston passengers by this route have no street transfer at New York, as the whole train is transferred at Jersey City around New York to Harlem river, and there run on shore and on to Boston. Matt. Kennedy, Esq., general Southern agent of the Louisville line, and Col. W. M. Wallington, general Southern agent of the Pan Handle route can be found at the railroad offices, from whom passengers can obtain sleeping-car accommodations from Cincinnati to New York in advance of departure.

NEW YORK AND BOSTON.—Travelers should take the Providence line of steamers from New York for Boston. This is the finest line leaving the former city. The company have recently built a new steamer, the Massachusetts, the palace steamer of the world. It is only forty-two miles by rail from Providence to Boston. For further information write to or see L. W. Filkins, Esq., general passenger agent, or E. A. Deveau, general freight agent. See advertisement.

STONE IN THE BLADDER

RELIEVED BY THE

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

AFTER THE LIFE OF THE PATIENT WAS DESPAIRED OF, BY HIS MEDICAL ADVISERS. THE STONE DISSOLVED IN THREE HOURS IN A GLASS OF THE LITHIA WATER.

CASE OF MR. C. WOLFE, of Point Coupée, La.

POINT COUPEE, LA., April 3d 18 8.

MR. THOMAS F. GOODE: By request I give you the following history of my case. Two years ago I began to suffer with severe pain in my kidneys, and at leave perceptual at a ss about two a week which caused the most excruciating agony, from which I was habitually relieved by the discharge of a stone from four to six grains in weight. There was never entire freedom from the pain in the kidneys. In eighteen months I discharged seven large stones, besides quantities of smaller stones and sand. As the result of this gro [illegible] and great suffering my general health was reduced to such a condition that my physicians advised me that I had nothing to hope for from medicine that my case was hopeless one, and I [illegible] for relief only in death. In this state of things, about six months ago I was advised by Mr. I. L. Lyons, a druggist of New Orleans to try the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, Spring No. 2. A week after I began to use it I had a slight attack, in which I passed two small stones. Placing one of these in a glass of the Water, in three hours I found to my great relief that it was perceptibly dissolved. I persevered in its use, and in a few days passed another stone, which gave me confidence, and I persevered in its use. I have had no attack since, the pain in my kidneys has entirely disappeared, I have regained my usual weight, and my general health is perfectly restored. I very cheerfully acknowledge my indebtedness for my life and the comfort which I now enjoy to this great health-giving Water. Respectfully,

C. WOLFE.

This Water, in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles, can be had at the Springs, and of I. L. LYONS, Wholesale Druggist, 42 and 44 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

WILLOW CULTURE.

The osier or basket willow (Salix viminalis) is quite extensively used by basket factories in several sections of the country, but, strange to say, it is very little cultivated. The material worked up is brought from Europe; why, one can hardly tell, when he reflects that the willow succeeds as well in America as in any other part of the world, and that, all things considered, it would undoubtedly be one of our most profitable crops. In England and Scotland, where it is quite extensively grown, it yields an annual crop worth from $100 to $150 to the acre, and calls for but a very small outlay for labor. In this country it would do much better, owing to the fact that it would command better prices—the producer would get the price paid in England, with a large portion of the transportation cost added on. Under favorable circumstances the crop will yield nearly two tons to the acre, and it is now worth in New York, about $150 per ton.

The osier willow now used in this country, most of which is imported from France and Germany, costs us nearly $6,000 000 annually. The demand seems to be constantly on the increase, and if the willow could be obtained conveniently there would, no doubt, be double the quantity worked up that is now worked. Under all these circumstances, who can explain why we do not cultivate willows? Instead of sending $6,000,000 abroad for the rough material, we ought to-day to be supplying the whole world with baskets and basket stuffs. The crop is among the easiest grown, and the most profitable, as well as the most certain. We have thousands upon thousands of acres of land exactly suited to the growth of willows (and suited to nothing else) that is now not worth a single cent to us. Like most other members of the willow family, the osier delights in a low, wet soil, and hence is the very thing for our swamp lands, and lands subject to overflow. There is scarcely a river in our country along which may not be found immense quantities of good lands that are not cultivated on account of the fact that the water rises over them two or three times in the course of a year. These overflows would not injure the willow, for, on the other hand, would do it good by keeping the lands up to a high state of fertility. And yet we ship from across the ocean $6 000 000 worth every year! No wonder that Charles Dickens should give it as his opinion that we were "indeed an eccentric people."

The osier willow grows as readily from cuttings as do any of our common wild willows. The plants are usually set in drill "rows" about four feet apart, and about two feet asunder in the rows. Once fairly started, there is nothing more to do than to harvest the crop, the willows keeping all other growths choked out. In the course of the season the young sprouts run up to the height of from four to six feet. These are the crop. They must be cut off smooth to the ground. A plantation is said never to wear out—the older it gets the better the yield.

There is no question as to the advantages presented by this country for willow culture. The crop is grown to some extent in the New England States. We might to supply the world with willows at $50 a ton, and make more money by the operation than we make on either wheat, corn or cotton.

AGE IN FOWLS.

There is science in the keeping of poultry successfully, especially with sizable flocks and a limited area of yard. A hen is a contradictory bird, unless studied and understood, and those most familiar with her tell us that a close knowledge of her habits and methods is essential to the best success. Some men know their fowls, and always have eggs and chickens; others, not so well acquainted with their habits, have the birds, but not the eggs nor the chickens which they expect.

There are one or two facts in a hen's life which it is well to remember. She lays not all the time, but in successive litters of eggs, followed by a period of rest. This rest is a physiological necessity, and in the natural state is the provision for the hatching of the eggs previously laid, and to give opportunity for the moult. Consequently after the setting and the moult, we expect a recommencement of the laying period. How unwise, then, to "break up" the setting hen and feed her with stimulating food! Then again, the young hen lays a larger litter than the aged fowl. It is probable that the first and second years of the hen's life are the most productive of eggs. How unprofitable, then, to kill off the young fowls, and to leave the aged fowls.

The hen keeper who succeeds the best is he who exercises the most judicious supervision over his flock, who allows the natural proclivities to take their course, and who checks the sitting proclivities of aged fowls by death. The young fowl sits and rests, and then lays; the aged fowl, to whom the egg producing organs are weakened, often takes in sitting and unprofitable (to the owner) rest. Let the hen keeper remember that to produce the largest number of eggs for a flock he must keep young fowls; these he must study in order to rationally treat, and must vary his food and his methods as experience, carefully consulted, will always indicate.—Scientific Farmer.

WALKING HORSES

The best gait a horse ever had for every-day use is a good walk. It is a gait that not one in ten possesses. Colts are not trained to walk in all the Eastern States. Young America wants mine speed. Kentucky has made good, walking horses than any other State, for there horseback traveling has long been the fashion for men and women, over a country where muddy roads at times render any other gait impossible; and so horses have been bred for the saddle and trained to a walking gait. This is also the case in all the Western States, and perhaps might have been so in New England when our grandmothers rode to meeting on a pillion behind our grandfathers. But one-horse wagons have put horseback riding out of the fashion, and now a good walking horse is more rare than one that can trot a mile in 2.40.

At the Springfield, Mass., show of 1850 the writer was one of a committee to award prizes to the two best walking horses. Out of seventeen entered, the committee found but one which was considered a first-rate walker. This was a Morrill mare, which walked five miles in an hour with ease. Two others were fair walkers, and the others knew no gait that would be called walking. At the New York State Fair the same state of facts was again developed.

A letter from Wisconsin says: "I think horses trained to walk fast would be a greater benefit to farmers in general than fast trotters, as almost all of their work has to be done with a walk." I once knew a man of Massachusetts who, before the railroads were built, kept from two to four teams on the road, and never allowed them to trot at all, and made the distance in quicker time than his neighbors, who made their horses trot at every convenient place. He said that when a horse commenced to walk after a trot he walked much slower than his common gait.—Factory and Farm.

A CHEAP HANGING BASKET.—Crochet a little saucer-shaped mat in red wool, loose open-work, and place inside a saucer, soup-plate, or the cover of an old butter-dish. Place in it a large sponge with bird-seed and a few hemp seeds sprinkled through it. Cut a slit in the top of the sponge, and insert a hyacinth bulb. Now suspend the hanging basket by four red cords of twisted worsted, finished by tassels at the top. Then fill your saucer with water, and wait patiently a few days, and you will have a thing of beauty. It will make you happy just to remember it years after the sponge has gone the way of all sponges. There is a still less expensive hanging basket. Take a turnip or carrot, cut off a slice from the top, and hollow out a dish about an inch in thickness. Fill this hollow with water, and hang up the turnip-shell by three cords. Very soon the green sprouts will appear, and will grow almost like Jonah's gourd, curving upward in long, beautiful wreaths. When one gets too old it may be replaced by another, you had started a few weeks later in the kitchen. It shows us how much beauty and real poetry there is in very commonplace things and lives; we need not go far away for something lovely to delight both eye and heart.—Country Gentleman.

FANCY POULTRY.—I have often heard farmers say that the improved breeds of poultry were good for nothing for the farmers—that they were only for the fanciers and breeders of the poultry. As a young farmer, I came to the conclusion to try a fancy breed, and I do not feel sorry for the $12 I paid two years ago for a trio of white-crested black Polands. Within the two years I sold fowls to the amount of $75, and eggs to the amount of $125, and I have forty hens and four cocks left, for which I refused an offer of $100 lately.

There are but few persons, whether farmers or others, who do not delight to have pretty fowls. I think the white-crested black Polish fowls cannot be exceeded by any other breed. They have black, shiny bodies, and large, white crests, which give them a very curious and attractive appearance. I get as many eggs from my forty hens as some of my neighbors get from one hundred hens of the dunghill fowls. My opinion is that if farmers would get a poultry journal, or an agricultural paper, and read it, and get improved breeds of poultry, we would hear less complaints about their poultry.—D. N. Kern, Shimmersville, Lehigh County, Penn.

BOILED TONGUE.—In choosing a tongue, ascertain how long it has been dried or pickled, and select one with a smooth skin, which denotes its being young and tender. If a dried one, and rather hard, soak it for at least twelve hours previous to cooking; if, however, it is fresh from the pickle, two or three hours will be sufficient for it to remain in soak. Put the tongue into a stew-pan with plenty of cold water and a bunch of savory herbs; let it gradually come to a boil, skim well and simmer very gently until tender. Peel off the skin, garnish with tufts of cauliflowers or Brussel sprouts, and serve. Boiled tongue is frequently sent to the table with boiled poultry, instead of ham, and is preferred by many persons. If to serve cold, peel it, fasten it down in a piece of board by sticking a fork through the root, and another through the top to straighten it. When cold, glaze it, and put a paper frill round the root, and garnish with tufts of parsley. Cook a large smoked tongue four to four and a half hours; a small one two and a half to three hours. A large unsoaked tongue three to three and a half hours; a small one two to two and a half hours. Seasonable at any time.—Western Rural.

BALKY HORSES.—The brain of a horse seems to entertain but one thought at a time. For this reason quirting or whipping is out of the question, and only confirms his stubborn resolve. But if you can by any means change the direction of his mind, give him a new subject to think of, nine times out of ten you will have no further trouble in starting him. A simple trick as a little pepper, aloes, or the like, thrown back on his tongue, will often succeed, by turning his attention to the taste in his mouth. A simple remedy is to take a couple of turns of common wrapping-twine, such as grocers use, around the fore-leg just below the knee, tight enough for the horse to feel, and tie in a bow-knot. At the first check he will generally go dancing off, and after going a short distance you can get out, remove the string to prevent injury to the tendon in your further drive; or tie a string tightly around his ear, which will serve to divert his mind to forget his stubbornness.—London Garden.

CLAM CHOWDER.—Cut into thin slices about one-half pound of fat, salt pork; place in the bottom of a kettle and fry out until the pork begins to brown; then add four good-sized onions chopped fine or sliced thin, as best liked, and partially cook them in the fat; slice eight raw potatoes, and about six good-sized tomatoes (if canned, allow one pint); break into small bits one-half pound of crackers, and chop up forty clams; pour the onions and pork from the kettle and make layers of ingredients—the bits of pork can be taken out or left in, according to taste—seasoning each layer with pepper, salt, ground cloves, a little chopped parsley, and a small quantity of powdered thyme and summer savory; over the top place a few slices of lemon; cover with water, and cook from one to one and a half hours.—Rural New Yorker.

VARIOUS COLORS FOR GRASSES.—To whiten grasses, place them in a cone over burning sulphur. To color red, take carmine, one-quarter ounce; liquor ammonia, one-half ounce; water, one-quarter pint. To color blue—Indigo dissolved in sulphuric acid neutralized with whiting. To color yellow—solution of turmeric in spirits of wine. To color violet—archil and a little lime. To color lilac—add to boiling water. To color green—dye first light blue, by diluting the blue with one-half water, and then use the yellow. Dye the grasses by dipping them into these solutions. Colors may be brightened by first dipping them into water containing cream of tartar, and drying.

At Grayville, Ill., a few days since, a five-year-old child, left alone by a fire, got too near the flames and its clothing became ignited. The house dog, a common cur, sprang on the child, threw her down and actually stripped off the burning clothing, burning his jaws severely. By the time the parents had arrived the noble dog had saved the child's life, the dog being the worst burned of the two.

Heart-work must be God's work. Only the great Heart-Maker can be the great Heart Breaker. If I love him my heart will be filled with his Spirit and obedient to his commands.—Baxter.

IS IT ANY WONDER?

In view of the immense amount of adulterated baking powders used by the masses of people to food, is it any wonder that there are diseased gums, decayed teeth and disordered digestion? To escape these evils use Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder—the only kind made by a physician, with great care.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE TRIUMPH
Steam COTTON BAND PULLER
AND BUCKLER.

THE ATTENTION of the Compress owners in the United States is called to this

NEW AND IMPORTANT INVENTION.

This STEAM PULLER has been thoroughly tested, and has demonstrated the fact that we can apply the Cotton Bands any required tensil strain and BUCKLE THEM AT EXACTLY THE HIGHEST POINT REACHED, and no slipping of the bands through the buckle, all the bands being drawn taut and buckled at the same instant, giving out a perfect bale, and without regard to the size, weight or shape of the bale.

THE BUCKLE is simply perfect; it is cheap and strong, and can be furnished to the order of a day by the million. The old bands are used as they come off the bales, and NOTHING IS LOST.

THE PULLER can be attached to any size or style of press, and at an expense that is slight compared to the benefit to be derived by the Compress. It is simple, and can be operated by regular Compress men without danger of getting out of order. The speed is equal or greater than ordinary hand-tying.

DANIEL PRATT'S IMPROVED
"Revolving Head" Cotton Gin.
PATENTED JULY 15, 1873.
Price Reduced to $4 Per Saw.

THIS GIN has been in use for the past five seasons, and several recent improvements have been added. It obviates all friction at the ends of the cotton box, prevents the roll from breaking, and gives a Larger Yield of Lint from the same Amount of Seed than any other Gin in use. The Revolving Head lightens the draft and causes the Gin to run faster with less driving power, thus doing a great deal more work with the same time, while economizing steam or animal power than any other Gin. The seed being ginned very close, the length of the staple is increased producing cotton of this account of a greater market value. This improved value, given by length of staple, with extra production of lint, added to increased amount of work done more than covers the cost of the Gin in every bale ginned. Testimonials sent by mail on application.

MEDICAL.

The German Star in Louisiana.

THE SO-CALLED WONDER DOCTOR has arrived safely in New Orleans, with his boat and family. He has made a twelve months' tour through the State of Louisiana to show to the public what he can do with his AMERICAN HERB MEDICINES for the diseased human system and organs. The Doctor is a thorough and experienced German chemist of the herb and vegetable kingdom, and has spent eighteen years in exploring America for the purpose of discovering the most valuable medical herbs growing in America. He has succeeded in discovering the secrets of all Indian tribes in connection with the vegetable kingdom, and thus is enabled as a practical physician, to prescribe these herbs to his patients. The Doctor has been wonderfully successful in the treatment of his patients, of whom he has had in his charge 1,665 within nine months. These comprised cases of sickness of every description, and of both sexes. All these patients were completely restored to health in a very short time. Everywhere in the State the Doctor had to promise to establish himself in New Orleans, which he has resolved to do and carried out, in order to relieve, as fast as Nature will permit, the long sufferings of so many of his fellow-beings. None but American herbs will be employed by the Doctor in the preparation of his medicines, and all part ns who may honor him with their confidence and cl nage will be treated with them.

The Doctor has established his office and a Chemical Laboratory, as well as a complete Private Hospital, at No. 103, BOURBON STREET, between Toulouse and St. Louis streets, so as to give to the afflicted from everywhere an opportunity to receive medical attention at his hands. The rooms are all well fitted up, and absolutely under his personal supervision. His terms are moderate. Letters of inquiry (with three-cent stamp inclosed) will be answered promptly. Orders for medicines will be filled upon the receipt of the money, and mailed free to any place in the United States. Address,

By A. C. Gutterson.
DEDICATION.
"To the Temperance Organizations who have striven by Legislation and Prayer for the Downfall of the Liquor Traffic."
In two acts and not beyond the reach of amateur talent. The scene is laid in Jerusalem. The incidents are derived from the Bible, and present the most powerful and striking argument in favor of total abstinence. The music is replete with sprightly duets and humming choruses.

SCIENTIFIC.

—Fragments of ancient pottery found in Natal bear a very close resemblance to the pottery made by the ancient British.

—Tauret and Villiers think that muscular inosite and the vegetable sugars of the same composition are identical. They found a similar sugar in peas, lentils, acacia, cabbage, diglis, potatoes, asparagus, etc.

—The Council of the Statistical Society will give their Howard medal of the present year and twenty pounds to the author of the best essay on "The Effects of Health and Disease on Military and Naval Operations."

—From the annual reports of the lunatic asylums of Bengal it appears that not less than 30 66 per cent. of the total number of cases of lunacy can be traced to the excessive use of gunga, one of the most deleterious preparations made from Indian hemp.

—Lord Rayleigh, in a paper on "Progressive Waves," says it has often been remarked that when a group of waves advances into still water the velocity of the group is less than that of the individual waves of which it is composed. The waves appear to advance through the group, dying away as they approach its anterior limit. Prof. Stokes regards the group as formed by the superposition of two infinite trains of waves, of equal amplitudes and of nearly equal wave-lengths, advancing in the same direction, and this explanation occurred independently to Lord Rayleigh himself.

—Some interesting observations on the influence of forests upon climate have been made by M. Fautral. In the months of June, July and August, when the activity of vegetation is great, trees, in drawing nourishment from the air, produce a movement which is shown in the atmosphere by a slight depression of temperature. Above coniferous trees, however, an elevation of temperature is constantly indicated during the day, and this is due to the retention of solar heat by the vapors found enveloping the tops of these trees. He ascribes the growth of conifers in poor soil mainly to the presence of this warm, moist medium. In the midst of a wood there is always an ascending current of air, and on the borders there is a lateral current from the wood toward the open country. The ascending current the above, comparatively speaking, of still ones in forests is due.

—It is probable that the entrance of water into the lungs has a great deal to do with the painlessness of drowning. It is certain that unconsciousness comes on more quickly when the person is deprived of air, because the lungs are filled with water, than when the air-passages are closed, while the lungs remain intact. Most persons can hold their breath for a minute, very many for a minute and a half, some for two minutes. In one of the variety theatres of New York appeared recently the Brilliant Pearl of the Enchanted Grotto, christened Undine, who performs, while under water, dressed in a mammoth crystal illuminated glass tank, feats of astonishing suppleness and almost unbelievable endurance. This performer will probably remain under water, holding her breath voluntarily, two minutes and perhaps more. I have myself, watch in hand, seen Johnson, the celebrated ocean swimmer, remain under water, in a tank before audience, for the astonishing space of three minutes and twenty seconds, before he saw the involuntary motions of his respiratory muscles were uncomfortable to witness. Such gasps, although extreme discomfort may be felt, there is no approach to unconsciousness. But if a person is placed under water, and he does not draw his breath, unconsciousness will usually come on in one or two minutes at the farthest.—Boynton Science Monthly.

DAVY'S SAFETY LAMP.—The valuable contrivance, and equally a splendid improvement upon it, which aims to assure safety to the workmen who are exposed to the fire-damp in the chambers of coal mines, is not always, however, an absolute protection from the perils of an explosion. Frequent accidents have occurred in the English mines from the carelessness of the miners, who sometimes screw out the lamp from the protecting chamber of gauze, to get the flame for lighting their pipes! But apart from the danger arising from such recklessness—averted in coal mines by a patent lock on the lamp—there is still a possibility of explosion which care cannot obviate. This is the danger from blasts of the explosive atmosphere, which, passing through the gauze with velocity, may fire it at once through, and ignite with the dangerous air without. A recent writer in Nature has called attention to this fact, and suggests that more vigorous methods of ventilation are the only available means of averting this peril. While we agree with him that these methods are desirable and might prove generally effectual, there is yet one more method of lighting mines, which has been overlooked. It is the use of the Geissler vacuum tubes, by means of which, with no very cumbrous apparatus, a constant stream of electrical light may be maintained through a glass cylinder, and the light being absolutely inaccessible to the flame and without heat, cannot be a source of danger. The tube alone may be carried by wires into the mine, and the battery and coil be placed at the surface. The degree of light will be in proportion to the extent of vacuum space lighted by the current, and to the intensity of the current itself. This same lamp is available for light under water at any depth, when the water is tolerably clear, and it may be used by the chemist, who would not dare to expose his buoyant gas to the peril of a flame, or heat-giving light. In modifications of the existing Davy lamp of Dumas and Benoit, we look for its general use in mines where the fire-damp is prevalent.

Give me an honest laugher.—Walter Scott.

MEDICAL.

PRAIRIE WEED.
CONQUEST, CAYUGA Co., N. Y.
DR. DONALD KENNEDY. Dear Sir.—With feelings of profound gratitude I write to tell you the value the Prairie Weed has been to us in our affliction. Thanks to our God, we have passed over the trial, and are now happy. We were longer for months to tell you the wonderful virtues of your medicine. Our conscientiousness is, that by so doing we could be the means of saving the life of some poor sufferer. We obtained your remedy, the Prairie Weed, of Mr. [illegible] of this place, and it was especially recommended for female weakness. At first the bowels became very much deranged, but continuing its use, it soon regulated them, and the amount of the discharges was wonderful, not only to him, but to our whole little family circle. The confinement from harassing fits, through which we were to be for him. All medical remedies and prescriptions from eminent physicians we had failed to give our sick friend relief, and we were just waiting for him their wood and last days of life. But when your Prairie Weed came, it relieved him of pain and distress in the stomach, which had always occurred immediately after taking even the simplest food into the stomach, and fasting all day and nothing but to his relief all the time, the whole day long. Your medicine relieved him of pain, his appetite returned, and food sat easy and life ceased. His kidneys, which were almost entirely dormant, voiding not more than one tenth the amount of what they should, and that very much darkened, were restored to their natural functions, and entire ease and regularity ensued. Chills and fever had troubled him for eight months, which we had tried to break, but the world return in three or four days as severe as formerly. Your medicine relieved him of the chills, and he was troubled with but slight attacks of fever of a light form. His cough was far more loose after taking the Prairie Weed. He cased a large amount from the lungs, and the secretions ceased. In the case of the child he could not inhale the lungs so much ease, that his sleep was not disturbed, the days and nights passing quietly away till the last hour. Some other cures for consumption were heard of and tried for, but none worked so well as the Prairie Weed, to which he returns thanks before an hour days, for satisfied that it surpassed them all in adaptation and speedy cure. If we had heard of your medicine six months earlier, I think it would have saved the life and comfort of many precious ones before ours. Our obligations to you are sacred and endless to express. The Prairie Weed has smoothed the pathway of life to the poor, dying moment, released from a large amount of pain and suffering, has closed his eyes in death, and saved us an expense almost as great as the value of your medicine. Gratefully yours,
J. W. CHAMBERLAIN.

MILK OF MAGNESIA
IS THE best preparation known for all disturbed conditions of the stomach. It immediately and certainly cures DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, HEARTBURN, SOUR STOMACH and HEADACHES caused by acidity of the stomach. The pleasant taste and milk like smoothness of this preparation renders it very valuable for infants, requiring no persuasion to induce them to take it. It positively prevents food souring on the stomach, and will act as a laxative when used as directed. It is also peculiarly adapted to females. The smoothness of this preparation and its perfect solubility are made fully apparent in the following illustrations. They represent a fractional part of a single drop magnified 250 diameters. The first the calcined Magnesia as taken with water. The second the Milk of Magnesia now offered. The difference between them is most striking, for whereas the undissolved precipitates and particles in the drop of calcined Magnesia are exhibited with terrible distinctness, the Milk of Magnesia has all the appearance of a cloudy vapor, entirely free from the objectionable precipitates; in fact a clear fluid.

Be sure to get MILK OF MAGNESIA. Ask your druggist for it, and take none other. It is entirely different from all other preparations of Magnesia. Physicians and others not already acquainted with this preparation can obtain explanatory circular by addressing

WE take this opportunity of informing sportsmen and dealers that the first delivery of our fall stock of these goods (the finest ever received here by steamer) has arrived, and is ready for inspection. In Breech-Loading Shot Guns this our assortment is more complete upward of 50 different styles and patterns, ranging through every desirable grade. These fresh importations can be profitably afforded lower than ever before, owing to present low cost of gold and sterling exchange, while all our old stock has been marked down to meet the shrinkage in value from decline in gold. Don't take our word for it, but call and see for yourselves, whether you wish to buy now or not.

COMMERCIAL.

ADVOCATE OFFICE,
NEW ORLEANS, Tuesday, June 25, 1878.

The only change worthy of note in this market is the rise in State consols which has taken place in the past two weeks. About two weeks ago consols sold as low as 70 cents, and on Saturday last 85 cents was obtained for them. It is hard to say what caused this violent fluctuation, though the general impression is that it was done by brokers, here and in New York, for the purpose of speculation. To day bonds are quoted at 82@82½.

COTTON.

Under the influence of unfavorable advices from New York and Liverpool the market ruled dull throughout the day, the sales at the close being confined to 100 bales.

The following is the official closing of the Cotton Exchange.:

	To-Day.	Yesterday

ALMOST BIT LOST!—"Many years ago," says Dr. William M. Taylor, "while we were ministering to a church in Liverpool, it was our melancholy duty to go to the widow of the first officer of the Royal Charter, and tell her that her husband was drowned. The vessel had gone round the world in safety. Her arrival at Queenstown had been telegraphed, and the sailor's wife was sitting in the parlor, with the table spread, in eager expectation of her husband when we entered to say that he had been drowned, with more than four hundred others in Moelra Bay, only two or three hours from the harbor. We never saw such agony as that face depicted when, grasping our hand in hers, she cried with a grief too deep for tears: 'So near home, and yet lost!'"

But what eternal horror shall hang about the doom of those who are "not far from the kingdom of God," but whose good desires and resolutions and determinations shall only end in disappointment of perdition at last! Woe to the man who puts off the day of salvation! The time will come when perdition cannot be put off. Now is the accepted time.

"Almost cannot avail;
Almost is but to fail;
Sad, sad, that bitter wail;
Almost but lost!"

Common People.

What greater thing is there for two human souls than to feel that they are joined for life—to strengthen each other in all labor, to rest on each other in all sorrow, to minister to each other in all pain, to be one with each other in silent, unspeakable memories at the moment of the last partings?—Adam Bede.

In preaching the word, Christ Jesus himself is the object of faith. The truth or gospel of Christ is the matter of faith; the divine evidence of the truth is the ground of faith; the declaration and bearing the truth is the medium of faith; and the spirit of truth is the author of faith.—Samuel Pike.

"Now, my boy," said the examiner, "if I had a mince pie and should give two-twelfths of it to John, two-twelfths to Issac, and two-twelfths to Harry, and should take half the pie myself, what would there be left?" Speak out loud, so that all can hear." "The plate!" shouted the boy.

WELL KNOWN.

As it is known that Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts are not made up from chemical poisons, but natural flavors, delicate and grateful to the most cultivated palate, they are growing rapidly in popular favor. It is only necessary to try these flavors to be convinced that they are fine and pure.

Religious Notices.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.—The camp meeting on Seashore Camp Ground for 1878 will commence on Wednesday, the tenth day of July, and continue from eight to ten days.

To strangers who have never visited the encampment, we may say that it is situated and fronting directly upon the Gulf of Mexico, midway between the cities of New Orleans, La., and Mobile, Ala., and is readily reached by the New Orleans and Mobile railroad, on which two trains run daily from and to either city, stopping at the Camp Ground station, only a few hundred feet from the encampment. Trains leave New Orleans, at the depot, head of Canal street, at 7.30 A. M., 3.30 and 5 P. M.; and Mobile, at foot of Government street, at 2.20 A. M. and 3.45 P. M.

The fare on the above road, from New Orleans to camp ground, the round trip, is $3.20; and from Mobile, the round trip, $2.65. Freight at one-half the usual prices.

Tickets will be on sale at the offices and depots, in both cities, on and after Monday, the eighth of July, and continue good to return up to the twentieth of July.

On the Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans railroad, at all important points from Canton southward, tickets for the round trip to the camp ground and back, via New Orleans, can be had during the above dates for one and one-fifth the usual fare.

On Morgan's Louisiana and Texas railroad, from Morgan City to New Orleans, one fare for the round trip, going and returning.

On the Mobile and Monigomery railroad round-trip tickets will be put on sale at Monigomery and local stations, to Mobile, Ala., for visitors to the Seashore Camp Ground, at the rate of six cents per mile, on and from July 7up to July 15. Tickets good to return on not later than July 22, 1878.

On the Mobile and Ohio railroad tickets will be sold for visitors to the Seashore Camp Ground, at Corinth and stations south, to Mobile and return, at three cents per mile. Tickets on sale on and from the fifth up to the fifteenth of July, and return coupons good to July 25, 1878.

Tickets of all the above railroads must be stamped on the camp ground to be good to return on.

The restaurant will be under the management of a committee of the trustees, with the assistance of an experienced caterer, where visitors can be furnished with good and satisfactory board at the reasonable price of fifty cents for breakfast, seventy-five cents for dinner and fifty cents for supper, or $1.50 per day.

Comfortable lodging accommodations are provided at fifty cents per night.

A limited number of wooden tents are prepared for renting to individuals or families, at prices from $10 to $30, according to size and position.

Cots, with pillow and sheet, will also be rented at $1.50 for the term of the meeting.

Persons desiring to attend the camp meeting are recommended to make their own arrangements for their comfort, before the date of the camp meeting, by application to any member of the board of trustees, to wit: William Otis, H. L. Hopper, Price Williams, William March and Edward H. Gould, of Mobile; E. F. Griffin and John Poltevent, of Mississippi; W. H. Foster, George W. W. Goodwyn, Philip Hallaran, John H. Keller, R. O. L. Rayne, W. B. Thomson, Charles M. Fush and W. G. Toonier, of New Orleans; or to James Tharp, the keeper of the grounds.

W. H. FOSTER, President.
PHILIP HALLARAN, Secretary. 27

MAMRE CAMP GROUND is located on the Selma, Rome and Dalton railroad, three miles south of Randolph, in Prairville district Alabama Conference. The time for holding the Mamre camp meeting will embrace the third Sunday in September, commencing on Friday night before. (27) J. B. ANDERSON, P. C.

THE Eufaula District Conference of the Alabama Conference will convene in Clayton, Barbour county, Ala., July 10, 1878. Upon arrival the delegates will report at the courthouse to be assigned to their homes.

SUNSET.

Melody to ancient air
Has touched my soul. O hand so fair
That hymned it forth,
In the golden sunset there,
Of noble worth!

Feeble, poor and old am I.
What is this life? Alas, how nigh
Seemed it to fate;
When the song I used to try
Came whispering late.

Tears are rain of thirst mind;
Drop even a few the maimed and blind:
I loved that song;
Mother sang it and the wind
Swept soft along.

As I think of saintly face,
The touch of tender, loving grace,
I all on turn
Where the sunbeams leaped—no trace—
To find, no bourne.

So I leave the angel song,
And hie to the home where I long
To bow my head;
Blessed be the hand that struck among
Chords long since dead.

Pinctur back the golden time
Of love and hope to its familiar rhyme;
The corn is ear—
Breath of the bee-swarmed, murmuring lime,
To cottage dear.

DOMESTIC.

BOSTON, June 27.—In the United States Circuit Court the case of E. [illegible] Haywood, for circulating obscene literature through the mails, was sentenced to two years' hard labor in Dedham jail, and to pay a fine of $[illegible].

GALVESTON, June 27.—A News special from San Antonio says: The stage was attacked by five Indians yesterday, about five miles east of Uvalde station. There were five persons on board, among them Schetzkey, Chihuahua, Max Schutz, A. S[illegible] ers, of Galveston, and Lieut. [illegible] ers.

The Indians were dying alongside the road, within a few feet of the stage. Ten or fifteen shots were fired, and Max Schutz was wounded in the [illegible]. A party of Indians visited Fort Clark, on the Pecos, and shot a man named Jose Garsea in the leg. [illegible] was out in search of horses and encountered the Indians in a corn[illegible].

A special to the News from Mason, Texas, says: The Indians referred to in a telegram of yesterday as having on last Sunday night, raided [illegible] and captured over one hundred head of horses in the vicinity of [illegible] Fork, were pursued and [illegible] overtaken midway between Helmet [illegible] creek and Nueces. A lively [illegible] ensued, which resulted in the death of three Indians and the [illegible] of all the horses. The whites suffered no loss as yet heard from, unless it be the killing of a few [illegible].

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—A Silver City dispatch says: Bernard's attack on the Indians at Curry Creek was a success. They surprised the Indians and killed forty.

The Indians returned to their stronghold in Stein's Mountains. Howard is pushing forward with reinforcements. The Indians will be defeated. There are prospects of a protracted campaign.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Felix Dupuy, of Louisiana, has been appointed one of the vice presidents of the national delegation of the Franco-American treaty of commerce.

The President this afternoon signed the commission of Michael Hahn as superintendent of the mint at New Orleans.

NEW YORK, June 28.—A letter from Havana says: The campaign of Spaniards against the Cubans, in all any battles, cost the former 1,000 men, and the island is a vast [illegible] tery.

Two steamers are reported on the way from Spain to carry home the [illegible].

Martinez Campos has begun the reduction of government expenses on the island by giving up one-half of his own salary as captain general.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 29.—The governor and treasurer have been ordered to New York and Mobile to pay the interest due July 1st on Alabama bonds and obligations.

WILMINGTON, DEL., June 30.—The accident which occurred to the South-express last night was caused by [illegible] had placed across the track [illegible] one-rail and over the other. The engine, baggage, mail and two [illegible] cars were wrecked, the three [illegible] ger cars remaining on the track. George Babe, engineer, and [illegible] son, N. G. Babe, fireman, were both horribly mangled. Christian [illegible], a boy from Baltimore and a man thought to be William Haogh, of Chicago, who were stealing a ride, were also killed.

Henry Brewer, of Maine, formerly in the employ of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore road at this place, was arrested last night, charged with placing the tie on the track. He declares he saw it on the track as the train approached, and tried to signal them to stop and remove the tie, but failed.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 30.—The subject of Mexican incursions into American territory is being thoroughly discussed here. The government will again emphatically insist upon Mexico preventing them from the order formerly issued authorizing military pursuit into Mexican territory of cattle thieves will be more vigorously enforced, despite [illegible] protests.

LITTLE ROCK, June 30.—The Supreme Court has decided that the [illegible] bonds, issued in 1869 and 1870, are unconstitutional and invalid; and $3,000,000 of bonds are affected by this decision. The court declares them worthless.

PROVIDENCE, June 30.—The assignee of Green & Cranston, bankers and brokers, who failed a year or two ago, announces his readiness to pay all claims in full, principal and interest.

LOUISVILLE, June 30.—Rev. Daniel P. Young, a prominent Presbyterian minister, is dead.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—A Baker City, Oregon, dispatch says: A courier arrived here to-day from Canyon City to ask Gov. Chadwick for armed men to protect the citizens of John Day valley. He states that fifteen citizen scouts from Canyon City, under Col. Burnham, discovered Indians near the south fork of John Day river on the twenty-eighth instant.

Contrary to Col. Burnham's orders, one of the scouts fired upon the Indians; the fire was returned. Two of the scouts, who escaped shortly after the fight began, came to Canyon City for reinforcements, stating that their companions were surrounded by at least one hundred Indians, and would probably be butchered.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Phebe Jane Cross, wife of James Cross and eldest daughter of Commodore Vanderbilt, died on Saturday. Mrs. Cross declined to take any part in contesting her father's will.

There were five hundred and fourteen failures during the six months ending June 30. Aggregate liabilities, $39,051,795; assets, $11,612,662.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, June 25.—The Standard's correspondent at Berlin hears on good authority that the Russians have, within the last few days, bought at Hamburg three steamers belonging to the Hamburg American line.

LONDON, June 27.—The announcement of the death of the Queen of Spain was received with profound sorrow and sympathy throughout Europe. The feeling in Spain almost approaches consternation. For several days the palace in which the Queen lay dying was the center of incessant and vigilant inquiries.

Hopes were raised at the crisis of the Queen's disease that her vigorous constitution might triumph over the complication of maladies, but her condition was doubly perilous by the fact that she was expected to become a mother before the end of the year, and finally became hopeless. She died in the arms of the King, and was surrounded by the royal family. Her remains lie in state to-day, and will be conveyed to the royal mansoleum at the Escurial on Friday.

LONDON, June 28.—A Reuter's Berlin dispatch states that the sitting of the Congress to-day lasted three hours. Gortschakoff was present. It was decided, in accordance with the request of the British plenipotentiaries, to intrust to Austria the task of occupying Bosnia and Herzegovina in the interests of the peace of Europe.

The duration of the occupation was not fixed, and full liberty was left to Austria in regard to the organization of the provinces. It is believed, however, she will follow the plans drawn up at the Constantinople Congress. The Congress unanimously adopted a proposal of the French plenipotentiaries that Europe should refuse to recognize the independence of Servia unless the Servian Jews were relieved from their present disabilities.

The Congress decided to appoint a commission to examine into the question of the aggrandizement of Servia. The aggrandizement of Montenegro will probably also be referred to a commission. On Saturday the Congress will hear M. Villos, of the Greek plenipotentiaries, who yesterday received the necessary credentials. The general impression in high Russian circles is that the Congress will result in temporary relief, but not in a real settlement.

A letter from Portsmouth states that orders have been issued to stop the entry of fresh hands for employment in the ship-yards, and measures will be at once taken to reduce the expenditures of the yard.

PARIS, June 28.—A gold medal, by the French Geographical Society, was presented to Henry M. Stanley, explorer, to-day, in presence of a brilliant assembly, which received Stanley with great enthusiasm.

BARMEN, PRUSSIA, June 29.—A portion of the tunnel near Schwelm fell last night, burying twenty-seven. Seven bodies have been taken out, and search for the others continues.

BERLIN, June 30. Satisfactory progress is reported in the Emperor's condition. The bandage has been removed from his head.

LONDON, July 1.—Reuter's Telegram Company has received the following dispatch from Berlin: The Congress has decided to cede to Russia that portion of Bessarabia which she lost in 1856 extending from the Pruth to Kilia Valiye. The Congress also decided to transfer Dobrudscha to Roumania.

The frontier of the new territory is to be advanced so as to run from the neighborhood of Silistria, without including that town, to Mangolia, on the Black Sea. Roumania will thus acquire a fertile tract of country, and be established on both banks of the Danube.

The Congress has recognized the independence of Roumania and Montenegro.

A Berlin dispatch to the Times says the Congress seems to have admitted on principle that every portion of territory detached from Turkey shall bear a proportional part of the charges of the Porte. The Congress will certainly deal with the interests of holders of Turkish bonds.

From the Hartford Courant.

Remarkable Treatment of a Snake Bite.

Dr. Ashbel Smith, of Galveston, Texas (formerly of Hartford,) while on a visit to the country a few days ago, was bitten by a snake, and this is the account he gives of it in a letter to a friend:

My Dear Sir: I can't walk, but, with help, have hobbled to the table. If I improve reasonably in hobbling by Friday night, I shall be at my post, in your city, on Saturday. My lameness would deserve but the shortest mention but for some facts connected with its cause which may perhaps be of interest to others in similar circumstances. About dark on Saturday last, as I was walking up the hill from the bay-shore, I felt a heavy scuffling about one of my legs, and at the same instant the bites of sharp teeth. Reaching the house, I saw by the light three several little wounds, with blood exuding from them, on my leg, three inches above the ankle. There were two punctures to each wound, made by the two fangs of the snake that had bitten me. Swelling had already commenced in less than five minutes from the biting. Still I determined to do nothing—for awhile, at least—in order to observe the effects of the poison unmodified by treatment. The swelling increased rapidly, and in fifteen minutes more the pain had become excruciating, and I could not bear my weight on the leg. I was now obliged to lie down. I now took, in a wine-glass of water, a half teaspoonful of saturated tincture of iodine. About fifteen minutes afterward I repeated the iodine—about twenty drops. A short time after, perhaps fifteen or twenty minutes, a third dose of iodine—fifteen drops in twenty-five or thirty minutes after, the fourth. The length of these several intervals is conjectural. I had the orifices of the wounds several times touched with the tincture of iodine, and the leg, which was now swollen from the ankle to the knee, was painted with iodine.

The pain was excruciating; but by 10:30 or 11 o'clock, two and a half or three hours after the bite, had abated sensibly. About 1:30 in the morning I fell asleep, and awoke at sunrise with complete stiffness, and superficial soreness of the limb on touch, now swollen to double its former size, but with no pain worth mentioning. Nor have I since had any suffering, further than complete disuse of the leg till this morning, and being obliged to have it at all times elevated. The foot participated in the swelling; and if the leg hang down it became and indeed still does, in a few minutes perfectly livid.

The interest of the matter in question lies in the use, the efficacy of iodine as a remedy for venomous bites. Nothing else than iodine was used—no spirits, no hartshorn, not the least possible thing in the world, internally or externally, except iodine, and one small drink of water. Former experience had given me confidence in iodine, by its use with others. I was determined to give it a fair showing in my own case, unaided and unobstructed by any other medication. I have attached the greater interest to this case because, although one is seldom a safe judge in his own case, the present bite has been by long odds the severest snake-bite I ever knew. If left to itself, it would, in my opinion, have been fatal in a very few hours. That the snake was a large one I know from his heavy scuffling about my legs, and, I may add, from the depth to which I felt his fangs enter. My instantaneous suspicion, from the weight and severity of the biting, was that my assailant was a wildcat or some such animal. The excruciating pain felt subsequently, as before mentioned, seemed to me like the ferocious cramps of the muscles in malignant cholera, except that they were not in any degree spasmodic.

There were other circumstances, symptoms, which I should detail were I writing to a physician; but they would only still further bore you. To set forth truly the efficacy of iodine must excuse my length. I do not know what kind of snake it was, but suspect it to have been a rattlesnake.

Habits and Tastes of Mr. Bryant.

The strongest point in Mr. Bryant's character was its simplicity. This is no more true of his poems than of his prose writings; no more true of either than of his daily pursuits and habits. Traveling, as he did, through many lands and among the proudest monuments of civilization; having, as he always did in his character and position, a perpetual passport to all society and every public place, his heart remained fixed in its first love of nature. Mr. Bryant has told the story of his daily habits himself. Nothing could be simpler. The Athenian, born on the poorest soil in Greece, contented himself at dinner with the head of a fish, an onion and a few olives. Even the rich were quite satisfied with a dish of vegetables; while people at large were accustomed to eat meat on a feast day for the whole year. Mr. Bryant, in diet and in all the pursuits of the day, was quite as simple. In winter he rose always at half past five; in summer from half an hour to an hour earlier. With little clothing on his body, he immediately began an hour's exercise with dumb-bells, a horizontal bar, and a light chair swung round the head. Sometimes he gave more than an hour to this exercise, but never less. When it was over he bathed from head to foot. In the summer, if living at Roslyn, he usually shortened the exercise in the chamber and went out of doors to engage at some work requiring brisk exercise, such as pruning trees or cutting wood. After the bath, if breakfast were not ready, he sat in his library. No breakfast could be plainer than his—hominy and milk, or brown bread, oatmeal or wheaten grits, and, in the season, baked sweet apples. Buckwheat cakes he did not refuse, but coffee or animal food he never took. Occasionally he drank chocolate, as it has no narcotic effect. After the meal was over he engaged for awhile at his studies, and, if in the city, walked down to the Evening Post office a distance of three miles. After three hours passed thus he returned, always walking, whatever the condition of the streets or weather might be. If living in the country, he studied or read until weary, and then went into his garden to prune pear-trees, or walked through the woods; he seldom drove. He dined early on vegetables, with a little meat or fish. At supper he never drank tea, but was satisfied with bread and butter and fruit. Fruit formed a large part of his diet, and he ate it at almost any time without inconvenience. In the city, where people dine later, he only ate two meals a day. Water was his almost exclusive drink, though he occasionally took wine. He once said he was a natural temperance man, his mind being rather confused than exhilarated by alcohol. Milton once said, however, that the lyric poet may drink wine and live generously; but the epic poet—he who shall sing of the gods, and their descent unto men—must drink water out of a wooden bowl. According to Milton, then, Mr. Bryant was more of an epic than a lyric poet, and though his verses are not of the epic order, no one lacking the epic spirit could have translated Homer as he did. Mr. Bryant retired early—in town at ten, in the country somewhat earlier. For several years he avoided, in the evening, every kind of literary occupation which tasked the faculties, such as composition, even to the writing of letters, because it excited his nervous system and prevented sound sleep. He never used tobacco. "I never meddle with it," he said, "except to quarrel with its use. I abominate all drugs and narcotics, and have always carefully avoided everything which spurs nature to exertions which she would not otherwise make. Even with my food I do not take the usual condiments, such as pepper and salt." When practicing law in Massachusetts he was elected a justice of the peace and at one time held the office of village clerk. He was often asked, later in life, to accept office, but he steadily refused. His name was once mentioned for the Italian mission, and he immediately responded, saying: "What would I do in the foul atmosphere of a court society which derives its tone from the sanction of royalty? Give me the pure air, the bright skies and the green fields." In religion he was a deep, though unpretentious, believer. At Roslyn he regularly attended the little Presbyterian church, and partook of the sacrament.—New York Tribune.

French Proverbial Sayings.

Il n'en moque comme de l'an quarante is a saying which dates from the beginning of the eleventh century. There was at that period an extensive belief that the end of the world was at hand, and that the thousand years and more supposed to have been assigned by our Lord as the duration of his church on earth, and of society in general, were to expire in the year 10 of that century. Sinners were converted in crowds; many talked of turning hermit; but, once this redoubtable epoch was over, men changed their tone, and from that time to this the expression used, in speaking of a thing which need inspire no alarm is: "I care no more for it than for the year 10!"

Le beau comme le Diable we should naturally suppose meant an appalling ugliness. It means nothing of the kind, but, on the contrary that exceeding prettiness frequently noticeable in young girls between the ages of fourteen and nineteen, or there abouts, which then passes away. This, the freshness of youthful beauty, seems to derive its name from the old proverb: The devil was handsome when he was young—namely, while he was yet an unfallen angel.

Faire donner l'ame au panier is said of a cook who fraudulently obtains from her mistress more money for her purchases at market than they have really cost. The idea is that of shaking the basket so as to make its contents take up as much room as possible, and thus look worth their alleged price.

Ladies somewhat advanced in the delectable ground of life's pilgrimage, when youth has made way for the nameless years of "a certain age," are said to coiffer Sainte Catherine.

It was formerly the custom in France, as it still is in Spain and some parts of Italy, on particular festivals, to array in festal garments and henigear the statues of the saints. St. Catherine being the patroness of virgins, the care of her adornment was always intrusted to young girls. This charge, however agreeable and honorable at sixteen, might, nevertheless, not be desirable in perpetuity, and thus it came to be said, of any middle-aged maiden: "She stays to coiffer St. Catherine."

To speak French very badly, or with a bad accent, is called parler Francais comme une vache Espagnole. The people inhabiting the Basque provinces obtain their name from the indigenous word vasco—mountain—which, when taken adjectively, is augmented by the final co, and thus becomes vasco; and by contraction, vasco—mountaineer. The French, knowing little enough of Spanish, said at first vacco, and then vache. Thus, parler comme un vache Espagnol meant at first to allude to the inhabitants of the Basque provinces of Spain, whose language still bears all the characteristics of a primitive tongue, and who have great difficulty in expressing themselves in French; but vache, at a time when the Latin had left its traces everywhere, was said for vache; the peasants in many of the French provinces retaining it still. Thence arose the confusion which produced the senseless comparison: "To speak French like a Spanish cow."

To make unlawful profits by deceiving as to the price of any articles a person has been charged to buy is called "shoeing the mule" (Ferrer la mule). The expression dates from the time when the counselors of the Parliament repaired to the Palais de Justice mounted on mules, and the lackeys who remained outside during the sittings of the Assembly spent their time in gambling, extorting from their masters the money they wanted for their amusement by pretending that they had had to pay for shoeing the mules. Others carry the origin of the saying back to the time of Vespasian; the muleteer of that Emperor, when on a journey, having been bribed to do so, suddenly stopped the mules, under pretext of having them shod, so as to give time to a person whom they had met on the way to speak to the Emperor of his affairs.—Catholic World.

The Sky.

It is a strange thing how little in general people know about the sky. It is the part of creation in which nature has done more for the sake of pleasing man; more for the sole and evident purpose of talking to him and touching him, than in any other of her works, and it is just the part in which we least attend to her. There are not many of her other works in which some more material or essential purpose of the sky might, so far as we know, be answered, if once in three days, or thereabouts, a grotesquely black rain-cloud was brought up over the blue, and everything well watered, and so all left blue again till next time, with perhaps a film of morning and evening mist for dew. And, instead of this, there is not a moment of any day of our lives when nature is not producing scene after scene, picture after picture, glory after glory, and working still upon such exquisite and constant principles of the most perfect beauty that it is quite certain it is all done for us, and intended for our perpetual pleasure. And every man, wherever placed, however far from other sources of interest or of beauty, has this doing for him constantly. The noblest scenes of the earth can be seen and known but by few. It is not intended that man should live always in the midst of them; he injures them by his presence, he ceases to feel them if he be always with them. But the sky is for all. Bright as it is, it is not "too bright nor good for human nature's daily food." It is fitted in all its functions for the perpetual comfort and exalting of the heart; for the soothing it and purifying it from its dross and dust. Sometimes gentle, sometimes capricious, sometimes awful, never the same for two moments together; almost human in its passions, almost spiritual in its tenderness, almost divine in its infinity, its appeal to what is immortal in us is as distinct, in its ministry of chastisement, or of blessing to what is mortal is essential. * * * * * *

Who, among the whole chattering crowd, can tell me of the form and the precipices of the chain of hill white mountains that girded the horizon at noon yesterday? Who saw the narrow sunbeam that came out of the south, and smote upon their summits until they melted and moldered away in a dust of blue rain? Who saw the dance of the dead clouds when the sunlight left them last night, and the west wind blew them before it like withered leaves? All has passed, unregretted as unseen; or if the sympathy be ever shaken off, even for an instant, it is only by what is gross, or what is extraordinary; and it is not in the grand and fierce manifestations of the elemental energies, not in the clash of the hail, nor the drift of the whirlwind, that the highest characters of the sublime are developed. God is not in the earthquake, nor in the fire, but in the still small voice. It is in quiet and subdued passages of unobtrusive majesty, the deep, and the calm, and the perpetual, that which must be sought ere it is seen, and loved ere it is understood—things which the angels work out for us daily, and yet very eternally; which are never wanting and never repented, which are to be found always, yet each found but once—it is through these that the lesson of devotion is chiefly taught, and the blessing of beauty given. These are what the artist of highest aim must study; it is these by the combination of which his ideal is to be created; these, of which so little notice is ordinarily taken by common observers, that I fully believe, little as people in general are concerned with art, more of their ideas of sky are derived from pictures than from reality, and that if we could examine the conception formed in the minds of most educated persons when we talk of clouds, it would frequently be found composed of fragments of blue and white reminiscences of the old masters.—John Ruskin.

Annual Conference Journals.

The following, from Report No. 11 of the Committee on Itinerancy, will be of interest to secretaries:

In order that we secure exactness and agreement in our Annual Conference journals, and recognizing the importance of this to the faithful record of the history of the church, her protection against wrong-doing as well as security to individual rights, we recommend that this General Conference hereby direct the attention of the secretaries of the several Annual Conferences, and of the Annual Conferences themselves, under the supervision of the Bishops, to the strict observance of the rules heretofore enacted by the General Conference, and which we hereby adopt as a part of this report, as follows:

Resolved, 1. That the secretaries of the several Annual Conferences be and they are hereby instructed to record in their Conference journals respectively all the acts of the Conference of every kind whatever, in the consecutive order of their occurrence, or in an appendix; especially of all complaints, charges and specifications, with the decisions in all such cases; and also of all resolutions, reports of committees, statistics, memoirs of deceased ministers, and the appointments of preachers, and whatever else enters into and constitutes a complete historical record of each annual session.

2. That the several Annual Conferences be and they hereby are instructed to require their secretaries to conform their journals to the plan indicated in the preceding resolution.

3. That the Bishops be and they hereby are instructed to supervise the Conference journals, to direct the secretaries to the requirements of the General Conference as to the manner of keeping their journals, to supply the secretaries with copies of their decisions on all questions of law submitted to them in an Annual Conference; and to affix their signatures, in all cases, to the minutes of the Conferences over which they preside.

4. That the secretaries be requested to keep up a running head from page to page of the journals, stating the date of the Conference session.

5. That it is necessary and proper, for the completeness of the Conference record, that the secretary, in all cases where an approved examination is required by the law of the Discipline on the course of study prescribed by the Bishops as a condition precedent to reception on trial, continuance on trial, election to deacon's and elder's orders, etc., that a statement of the fact of such examination, as also of the recommendations of a Quarterly Conference, where required by law, should form a part of the record.

6. That in the event of the failure of a Bishop of an Annual Conference, in reporting his ordinations to the Conference, to mention who are traveling and who are local preachers, it is the duty of the secretary to make such a discrimination in his record.

7. That it is the duty of the secretary to record all the disciplinary questions (stating their numerical notation) under which the business of the Conference is to be transacted, and to record the business under the appropriate questions, and not at random, and without the question duly recorded.

8. That the fact that the application of a local deacon for elder's orders is duly accompanied by a note certifying his belief in the doctrine and discipline of our church, should be recorded by the secretary.

9. That in all future elections of General Conference delegates there be a full statement of the aggregate number of clerical and lay votes, as well as the number of delegates to which the Conference is entitled; the number of ballots cast; the number requisite for election; the number of votes given for each respectively; the declaration of election before the Conference, by the president of the Conference, with any other fact accompanying; whether the election in accordance with the discipline, was by the same body, "in Conference assembled," under the president of the Conference, or in rooms apart of clerical and lay votes respectively, in violation of the Discipline.

10. That the Bishops be and they are hereby earnestly requested to call attention of the secretaries, when reading the minutes of daily sessions for approval of the Conference, to any omission of names, questions or facts, or to the insertion of anything upon the record in violation of the requirements of the Discipline, or in conflict with any resolutions adopted by the General Conference respecting the duties of secretaries in keeping the journal of an Annual Conference.

11. That the general book agent at Nashville, with the assistance of the secretary of the General Conference, be instructed to print, on a convenient slip of paper, all of the foregoing resolutions, to be furnished to the secretaries of Annual Conferences, to be pasted in their journals for constant reference.

SONNETS ON PRAYER.

[illegible]
What a refuge will prayer prove
Spent in the rest[illegible] can avail to make While heavy burdens from our bosom take [illegible]
To know we've carried our sorrows to
We [illegible] and [illegible] start and then we are
Stabbed with anxiety over the bright gold hair
We know "the weak" We rise how [illegible] power
With [illegible] we [illegible] this wrong.
Troubles that we are not always strong—
That we are ever, ever borne with care—
That we shun never weak or harmless thing
Assailing or troubled—whisp with us is prayer
And joy, and strength, and courage are with three.

What hearts are full of earthly tenderness
For the loved absent whom we cannot reach
By deed or token, gesture or kind speech
The spirit struggles in vain to express
When hearts are full of uttermost distress,
And we are dumbed inactively
Watching the soul's or body's agony,
Which human efforts fail[illegible] to make less
When like a cup capacious to contain
The sweet[illegible] wings of the heart is prayer.
The longing of the soul is satisfied—
The keenest darts of anguish blunted are
And though we cannot repose in years and [illegible]
Yet here we learn to patience to abide.

Brandon District Conference.

The Brandon District Conference was held at Morton on the eighteenth and nineteenth days of June, A. D. 1878, Bishop H. N. McTyeire presiding.

MISSIONS WITHIN THE DISTRICT.

Homewood mission reported favorably on the state of the church; three churches belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church South—one built this year.

Prairie Mission.—Three churches reported. Amount allowed for support of mission, $150.

STATIONS AND CIRCUITS.

Brandon Station.—Rev. B. Carradine, pastor. Members now on roll, 120. Baptisms: Children, 15; adults, 1. Sunday school scholars, teachers and officers, 83. Prayer meeting—perhaps the largest in the Conference.

A mission school has been recently organized for the benefit of the colored people, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association, with a regular corps of officers and teachers, (white,) and sufficient literature, obtained by donations from benevolent associations, to meet the present wants of the school, which now numbers over 200 scholars, with 17 or 18 teachers.

Morton Circuit.—Bro. Smylie, P. C., reported the church prosperous. No parsonage; three Sunday schools, all using our literature. Parsonage in a hopeful state of being secured.

Lake Circuit.—The presiding elder reported Bro. P. H. Napier, who was appointed to the circuit, as being stricken with paralysis, and near his end. The circuit is supplied by the elder and other preachers. Three Sunday schools reported, all in good condition. State of the church generally good. The following resolution in relation to Bro. Napier was adopted:

Whereas, The Rev. P. H. Napier, preacher in charge of Lake circuit, Brandon district, Mississippi Conference, has been prevented from serving his work by the afflicting hand of Providence; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the Brandon District Conference, sympathize with our brother in his severe bodily affliction, and pray that the great Head of the church may yet spare his life for many years, that we and the church may have the benefit of his labors and godly counsel.

Newton Circuit.—Bro. B. B. Downer, P. C., reported six appointments; six church buildings, all in good repair; sacrament regularly administered; infant baptism attended to; one parsonage in good order; one Methodist Sunday school; spiritual condition of the church moderately good; one prayer meeting regularly kept up; class meetings not regular.

Dalton Circuit.—Bro. J. H. Holland, P. C., reported nine appointments; no church-houses—some in prospect; one camp ground; one parsonage, not fully completed; two Sunday schools; spiritual condition of the church moderately good.

Walnut Grove Circuit.—Bros. N. B. Young, P. C., reported eight appointments; five church-houses; one parsonage; baptism of children attended to, but somewhat neglected by church members; one regular prayer meeting, well attended; one class meeting, which promises well; six Sabbath schools, in good condition; our Sunday school literature used in one school; twelve day schools are on the circuit, three of which are high schools.

Carthage Circuit.—Bro. J. W. Ellison, P. C., reported the spiritual condition of the church improving; eight appointments; three church-houses; the use of union churches embarrassed the preacher in charge; one prayer meeting; sacrament only administered at quarterly meeting as yet; pastoral visiting attended to; twenty-five or thirty copies of NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE taken on the work.

Trenton Circuit.—Bro. R. A. Sibley, P. C., reported nine appointments; six church buildings; one camp ground; one parsonage; spiritual condition of church not as good as desired, but looking up; four Sabbath schools that use our literature, and are in good condition—interest increasing; fifteen children baptized; three expelled from church; two withdrawn; seven dismissed by letter; Church Conferences held.

Raleigh Circuit.—Bro. C. McDonald, P. C., reported the spiritual condition of the church good; seven appointments; three church-houses; no parsonage—one, however, in prospect; five Sunday schools, generally in good condition; two regular prayer meetings; class meetings not fully attended to.

Rankin Circuit.—Bro. J. H. Evans, P. C., reported eight appointments; five church buildings; spiritual condition of the church improving; two prayer meetings well attended; sacrament not regularly administered, but intend to observe this duty more fully during the remainder of the year; six children baptized; three Sunday schools; no parsonage.

The Committee on Parsonages and Church Houses made their report, which was adopted, as follows:

The special committee appointed at this session upon church property within the bounds of Brandon district, Mississippi Conference, submit the following report:

There are a number of church buildings, erected largely by Methodists, in use upon the several charges, not now to be considered. Of buildings duly deeded to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and in average good condition, we find on Homewood mission, 3; Prairie mission, 2; Morton and Forest, 5; Lake, 1; Union circuit, —; Walnut Grove, 5; Carthage, 3; Trenton, 6; Newton, 6; Raleigh, 3; Rankin, 5; making a total of 42.

We find established camp meeting grounds on Newton, Lake, Trenton and Union circuits. These are all in working order, and well secured. We rejoice at the proposed establishment of a camp meeting ground near Brandon.

We regret that we can only report the following circuits as having homes for the pastor (parsonages:) Union, Newton, Walnut Grove and Trenton circuits. As far as learned, repairs are needed to make them all in full-class condition.

There is a district parsonage for the benefit of the presiding elder located at Forest. There is a clear title given to the church, but a debt of $236 10 remains to be lifted.

This amount has been generously advanced by Bro. J. S. Halbert, who by this act saved the first payments made, and thus secured the property. This $236 10 is now due Bro. Halbert. The Committee on the District Parsonage, appointed at the Newton District Conference, assessed the various appointments, and these assessments were indorsed by said charges. The presiding elder has kept the subject prominently before the Quarterly Conferences, and we are sorry to report that only two charges have paid up in full the amounts assessed, viz: Morton and Forest and Pelahatchie. We therefore suggest that this District Conference commission the presiding elder to continue his efforts, and that each pastor be appointed as an assistant collector to those already appointed in each charge, and that a hearty, earnest effort be made at once to raise the money, pay Bro. Halbert and get a good conscience.

We submit the report on the district parsonage:

Amount due January 1, 1878	$236 25
Credit, 97 cent (25c) less repairs (10c)	40 00
	$276 25
By amount paid by presiding elder	9 50
Due Bro. Halbert	$236 10
Paid by Bro. Moore, $3.

The following amendment to the above report was adopted, and accepted by the committee as part of their report:

That the amount yet due on the district parsonage be divided among the circuits and stations that have not yet paid their assessment, assessing to each the following amounts: Forest church, $10; Walnut Grove, $12; Rankin, $17; Trenton, $20; Carthage, $12; Raleigh, $20; Newton, $30; Brandon, $50; Union, $6; Faunia, $30; Lake, $30.

Respectfully submitted,

R. B. DOWNER, Chairman.

Bro. Ivy, agent of the Southwestern Bible Society, addressed the Conference in the interests of the Bible cause. At the conclusion of said address the following resolution was adopted, to wit:

Whereas, We have had the Rev. J. A. Ivy, agent of the Southwestern Bible Society, with us, and as he has explained to us the operations and great usefulness of said society; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Brandon District Conference, Brandon district, Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church South, thank Bro. Ivy for his useful information, and will endeavor to cooperate with him in the dissemination of the word of life in our several charges and communities.

Lake station was selected as the place for the meeting of the next District Conference, at such time next year as shall be appointed.

Bro. J. W. Adkisson, president of East Mississippi Female College, addressed the Conference in the interest of the college. At the conclusion of the address the following resolution was adopted, to wit:

Resolved, That we have heard with great interest and satisfaction the report of the East Mississippi Female College, from its honored president, Rev. J. W. Adkisson, and also from Bro. Smylie, of the visiting committee, and that we do hereby pledge ourselves to renewed efforts in its behalf.

W. H. LEITH.
IRVIN MILLER.

The following members were elected as delegates to the next Annual Conference, to be held at Meridian, to wit: Bros Irvin Miller, J. S. Halbert, Jared Watts, J. W. McMaster. Reserves.—W. M. Thornton, T. C. Tibbs, A. G. Mayers.

The report from Fannin circuit—J. D. Hayes, P. C., being absent—was handed to the secretary after the regular call of the circuits was concluded; whereupon the Bishop directed, the secretary to enter said report on the minutes of the Conference, as follows:

State of the church, good: hope to have an accession of sixteen new members before next quarterly meeting. Quite a number have joined by letter. Sabbath schools are not doing as well as we could wish. There are two Methodist schools—one at Union, numbering forty scholars, and the best on the work; the other at Shiloh, where, with a membership of one hundred and forty, there are only twenty-seven scholars in the Sunday school. The remaining three or four schools on the work are union, and using that class of literature. The financial condition of the church in my charge is reasonably good.

Whereas, It is the custom of some ministers of other denominations to enter into and use our churches without permission, who refuse to recognize our church and ministry, or to exchange the courtesies of the pulpit; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this District Conference that our houses of worship ought not to be opened to those who refuse like privileges to us.

J. W. MCMASTER, Sec.

(Note by the Editor.—The proceedings of the above District Conference were very neatly prepared, and in full, but they occupied about fourteen pages of record paper. We have been compelled to leave out a good deal in order to find room. Please hereafter to condense, and do not expect the ADVOCATE to publish full statistics, as these are reported at the Annual Conference.

Meridian District Conference.

MR. EDITOR: The Meridian District Conference, Mississippi Annual Conference, convened at Shubuta on Friday, June 14, Bishop H. N. McTyeire presiding, and continued in session until Saturday afternoon.

The presiding elder, J. A. Ellis, had taken the precaution to prepare a complete list of members and delegates elect for the secretary's use, not a bad example, which showed a total of one hundred and twenty-three, all of whom answered to their names at the first roll-call except about one hundred. The number in attendance increased, however, to about forty—about an equal number of clerical and lay. The reports disclosed an unsatisfactory spiritual condition, though a decided improvement on "other days."

The people are poorly provided with the literature of the church. There should be at least one ADVOCATE in every Methodist family. I am afraid many of our preachers do not urge the importance of this as they might. Fewer ADVOCATES are taken, I think—and they are more needed—on the circuits where preaching is heard but once a month than in the stations. The best report, however, was from a circuit (Philadelphia,) showing one ADVOCATE to eight members—and the preacher did it; and he sold them books too.

The Sunday school work is advancing in the district. The demand for our Sunday school literature is growing.

The subject of education was discussed, and a resolution recommending the inauguration by each Quarterly Conference of a systematic work, looking to a general diffusion of knowledge among the masses, was adopted. Our college at Meridian was represented to be in a flourishing condition, and doing a noble work for the church.

New churches are being built, and old ones repaired. The number of parsonages has increased, and a prospect for one in every charge, and then a district parsonage. Titles to church property have been perfected where practicable, and in some cases valuable property has been saved, the loss of which was threatened a few years ago through inattention.

Considerable religious interest was manifested, and the services were to be protracted during the week.

Lauderdale was selected as the place for the meeting of the next session.

Dr. C. R. Rencher, Dr. J. W. Avara, B. F. Ormond and S. B. Watts were elected delegates to the Annual Conference; and A. Taylor, A. Trotter and Dr. G. F. Peck, reserves.

S. B. WATTS, Sec.

The Reason Why.

MR. EDITOR: There can be no doubt that the truths of religion are taking a deeper hold upon the mind than ever before. Men are not indifferent to the claims of the gospel. They cannot be. There is a feeling of unrest in the heart, and they are conscious that they need something outside of themselves. That something is Jesus Christ, in whom rest is found, whose yoke is easy, and whose burden is light.

Then we may ask: Why do not men find this rest with all the gospel privileges of the present day? For want of plainness in preaching the gospel. There is more of an effort to please and fascinate than to instruct. Very few sermons reach the heart. They are for the head. A great many fear to be simple in expounding the word of God, feeling that their knowledge will not be appreciated. There is a lesson to be learned: that simplicity in applying the truth is greatness. See the preaching of Jesus Christ. Can anything be plainer or more simple than this? In parable or otherwise his words could be understood by all. "The common people heard him gladly." The apostles followed his example, and in simplicity and with power preached Jesus and him crucified. The cross of Christ was the theme, and souls were born again. Peter preached in great plainness, relating the story of the cross, and three thousand souls were converted as the result of one sermon. Perhaps there are three thousand sermons preached at the present time, and one soul converted. There is too much pride in the heart, and a desire for popularity and applause. I heard of a minister who, upon introducing his subject, said: "By the grace of God, I intend to make a display." Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, and this desire doubtless had the supremacy. There is need of fervent prayer upon our part, that the word of God may quicken the conscience and convict the heart. Much of the prayer before going into the pulpit is for ourselves alone—that we may have "light and liberty," ease and comfort; and when the sermon has been delivered in a style agreeable to ourselves, we care very little for the result upon others. The clamor is for "big sermons," as if any part of truth was small. It is not often that the arrow is on this side, but is beyond. The heart is overreached. Said a good man: "When the people are perishing for bread, don't feed them on flowers." It is not poetry, eloquence, pathos, flowery language, mental attainments or science that produces regeneration, but the "word of truth." This is quick and powerful—a "discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." This is more than a "two-edged sword"—cuts both ways; and the more of Scripture we have the greater the success. This will live; all else is momentary.

Then one fact must be kept in view—the soul's salvation; and better language cannot be found than the Almighty has used. The Bible is a book for every age. Sermons should be preached so that the children may understand the truth, and then we may be sure the grown people will not be ignorant. Sinners need to be told the way of salvation. They are told of heaven and hell, time and eternity, sin and righteousness, and now they need to know the way to the cross. The inquiry is that of the jailer: "What must I do to be saved?" Does the preaching of the present time answer that question? There is a vacancy between the unconverted and the cross which must constitute a portion of every sermon to make it a success. Wonderful will be the revelation of eternity. It may be the "poor preacher, but good man" will wear the starry crown, and the man of fame will have few sheaves for his harvest.

P. H. MOSS.

There are regions beyond the most distant nebulous outskirts of matter; but no regions beyond the divine goodness. We may conceive of tracts where there are no worlds, but not of any where there is no God of mercy.—Rev. J. W. Alexander.

OBITUARIES.

Correspondents, please write names and dates very distinctly. We follow copy on proper names. Obituary notices should be forwarded promptly and immediately. Give only points of general interest, such as will help the living. Details of funeral services, and such phrases as "mourn their loss," etc., are not edifying. Verses, either original or select, not admissible in this department. Give the locality distinctly and in full. In the case of infants only a simple announcement of the death, with names and dates, will be published.

☞ All obituaries received are published as soon as convenient. If, after a reasonable time, any such communication fail to appear, let a duplicate be sent instead of a complaint.

DEPARTED this life, on the seventh of September, 1877, at his residence in the parish of Livingston, La., in the sixty first year of his age, W. D. J. WARNER. "In the full hope of a glorious resurrection."

Possessed of a mind and general intelligence far above mediocrity, ever true to the professions and obligations of friendship, as well as in those which belong to the various relations which connected him, while living, with the living and the dead, his name and memory cannot, shall not perish. He was a worthy son of a most worthy and honored sire, whose name we mention with profound reverence, Hon. Thomas C. Warner; born of an honored mother (Mrs. Tabitha Cargile) of thirteen children, the subject of this memoir being the youngest child and the seventh son. His parents removed from South Carolina and settled in the parish of St. Tammany, La., in 1804. The country being new and thinly settled, school and church privileges were not, for years, enjoyed by them. But the parents, having in their youth enjoyed the advantages of a liberal education, were enabled to teach their children at home; and, although not Christians, taught them to "remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy," not even allowing a song, except sacred, to be sung by them on the Sabbath, and never permitting profanity or an irreverent use of God's name. Possessing themselves the sterling principles of virtue, humanity, truth and mercy in an eminent degree, they early instilled them in the minds of their children.

None of them espoused the cause of Christ until the year 1822. During this year Rev. Thomas Griffin, whose memory is enshrined in their hearts, as by request, to preach the funeral sermon of a member of the family, and during the preaching of this sermon two sisters (twins, who afterward married Rev. John P. Haney and Rev. David Pipes, were converted, and eventually sought and obtained pardon of their sins. The zealous and earnest piety of these sisters aroused the entire family, from the aged grandmother, who knew not God and whose sweet presence gladdened their home, to the subject of this memoir, and during the following six years every member of this family was happily converted. Amazing graces! Of the seven sons, four, Cornelius, Thomas, Richard and John, were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Daniel and Dudley, the subject of our memoir, were for many years stewards, Sabbath school superintendents and class-leaders in the church, ever feeling and evincing a deep interest in the church and her institutions. The other brother died in most triumphant death in the early age of seventeen years.

Dudley was the survivor of the seven brothers, and now, father, mother, seven sons and two daughters (Mrs. T. C. Gant and Miss Hattie H. Warner) have passed in perfect and complete triumph over the river of death, each one being permitted to testify, in the dying hour, of God's boundless love and mercy. Four sisters still survive, who are striving in this life for a home with the loved circle over there.

Dudley Warner, the subject of this memoir, was a man who had seen affliction, having three times entered into the sacred and endearing bonds of matrimony, and three times been bereaved of beloved companions. His first spouse was Mrs. Widow Rhodes, a most estimable lady, who lived one year and departed this life, leaving an infant daughter; his second was Miss Emma N. Edwards, eldest daughter of the late Hon. Daniel Edwards, of St. Tammany parish. In this union he was truly favored of God, he being one of those lovely characters in whom are combined all that is lovely and desirable in the responsible position of wife and mother. They lived most happily until 1880, when death robbed him of this jewel. To them were born eight children, six of whom still live. In 1850 he was married to Miss White, an excellent woman, who lived only four years, leaving two little boys.

In the school of affliction it will be apparent that the subject of this memoir had opportunities of learning many valuable lessons, one of which was very apparent to all those who knew him, namely: an humble submission to the divine will, to which may be added an unshaken confidence and peaceful repose upon the divine goodness. In taking leave of our beloved brother we desire to record the solemn declaration that after the close of a life, a large portion of which came within the knowledge and observation of the writer, we cannot call into remembrance a single word to the prejudice of Dudley Warner as an upright man, a good citizen, ever loyal to the best interests of his country, and of his church, of which he was a devoted and consistent member until the close of his life. That the end of such a man should have been peace is but in accordance with the solemn declarations of Heaven, the experience of God's people, and the observation and experience of the world; nothing having disturbed his peace or caused regret, save only the reflection that he was leaving two infant boys to be educated and reared up. May the God of the fatherless and the orphans bless and prosper the hands that shall nurture and provide for them, and make glad the hearts that shall care for and sympathize with them.

Adieu! adieu! Adieu for a season, my beloved brother.

MRS. A. M. GALLAWAY was born in Hinds county, Ala., April 16, 1833, and died in Bolivar county, Miss., February 16, 1878. She was the daughter of John and Sallie Garner, of precious memory. She was happily converted at a protracted meeting held at Mahan's church, one mile from her home, in her fifteenth year, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The church she loved so much and lived to enjoy its holy communion till God called her to live with him forever. She was married to A. M. Gallaway, her now bereaved husband, March 4, 1853. They lived together twenty-five years and kept up a family altar, that being the vow she made before they were married. She had a tender and loving heart, a sweet and gentle manner, a serene and quiet mind, and such cheerfulness of spirit and devotion as a wife as won the admiration of all who knew her, rendering her an object of pity to her family and friends. She was the mother of fifteen children, two of whom have gone before to await her arrival. She suffered greatly for four months before her death. She never murmured, but said, "God's will be done." She was conscious till the last breath. She often talked of dying—had no fears. A few days before her death she was perfectly happy. On the day before she died we thought she was going to die. We called in all the family. It was then. She said to her husband: "When I have prayer, kneel down by my bed." She then told the children all to pray that it might die easy. She told her husband that we ought to love the church better than anything on earth. She said: "I love the church. What a world it would be without the church! It is the mother of us all." The next morning she called for all her children to come and bid her good-by, telling them to meet her in heaven. She told them (thirteen,) as they stood around her bed, that she was leaving them here on earth, that she was going to meet her children and friends in paradise. She then turned to her husband and told him to raise her children for God. Her husband asked her if she suffered. She said: "No; Jesus can make a dying bed feel soft as downy pillows." Her husband asked her if she knew she was dying. She said: "Yes; I will soon be in heaven." Her husband asked her if she had any message to send to her children. She said: "Tell them to meet me in heaven." The preacher came and sung and prayed. When we arose from prayer she was asleep. The preacher then said: "Now you are dying; do you love Jesus?" She said: "Yes."

She was a constant reader of the ADVOCATE for thirty years, and loved it for the visits of the preachers. She loved her country and her church. She named all her children. Jeff. Davis, another child, and her youngest three years old, Lizzie Pierce, and often prayed that she might make as great a man as Dr. Pierce.

A FRIEND.

THE following preamble and resolutions on the death of Bro. Levi R. Goldsboro were passed by the Second Quarterly Conference for Scotland circuit, held at Bethesda church, Mississippi, May 11, 1878:

Whereas, Bro. Levi R. Goldsboro, one of our most efficient and prompt stewards, a warm-hearted, zealous and untiring worker in the class and Sunday school, was on the fourth day of March, 1878, suddenly taken from this life; therefore,

Resolved, That while his death has been a loss to our hearts, and great loss to the church, and a place is left vacant which will be hard to fill, yet we cherish his memory most affectionately, draw inspiration from his example, and bow in humble submission to the mysterious doings of our God, knowing that his providence is in every event working out some greater and brighter good for his family and the church.

Resolved, That we tender our Christian and heartfelt sympathies to the great sorrowing wife and children, whose loss we know but their own bleeding hearts can feel, but to the widow's comforting and abiding and ever-ready help, and ever-present and tender solace, and to the widow's God, the beloved counselor to the sons and daughters who have long been guided by his wise and watchful counsel.

Resolved, That a committee of three members and the presiding elder of this Conference be appointed to prepare a memorial of the life of Bro. Levi R. Goldsboro, and report at our next quarterly Conference.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, and to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

MRS. L. E. SIGMAN, daughter of Rev. Miles and Sarah T. Malone, was born November 28, 1842; married to L. H. Sigman in January, 1868, and died at her home near Chickasaw, Ala., December 7, 1877. Her girlhood she dedicated her heart to God, and found peace in believing in Jesus. She joined the Methodist Church and became a member thereof until her death. She was a good wife, a devoted mother, and loved by all who knew her. She had a cheerful, happy disposition, always looking on the bright side. For four months previous to her death she was a great sufferer, but she was borne with humble resignation. When the message of death came to her it was cheerfully obeyed. Her children were called to her bed-side, and she gave her mother's dying blessing, telling them that she would soon be in heaven. She leaves five children, who are now motherless and motherless; their father having died in June, 1877. May the Lord comfort the orphans, and prepare them to meet their sainted mother. [illegible]

WILLIAM B. MOORE, of [illegible] county, Miss., died May 21, A. D. 1878, in almost forty-five years. He was a good citizen, and a kind husband and father. He leaves a wife and several children to battle with the world. The deceased had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South for about twenty-one years, and for several years previous to his death he was the child of affliction, which he endured with Christian fortitude and resignation. He was rational to the last, and knew that he was ready and willing to die. We sorrow, we sorrow not as those who have sorrow without hope, for we trust that our beloved brother is in the paradise of God, where the wicked cease to trouble and the weary are forever at rest.

HE LEADS US ON.

He leads us on
By paths we did not know.
Upward he leads us; though our steps be slow,
Though on we falter and fall by the way,
Though storms and darkness oft obscure the day,
Yet, when the clouds are gone,
We know he leads us on.

He leads us on
Through all the tangled years;
Mid all our dreams and hopes, and doubts and fears,
He guides our steps. Through all the tangled maze
Of sorrow, and o'erclouded days,
We know his will is done;
And still he leads us on.

The Encamping Angel.

"The angel of the Lord encampeth about them that fear him, and delivereth them."—Psalms xxxiv. 7.

If we accept the statement of the superscription of the psalm, it dates from one of the darkest hours in David's life. His fortunes were never lower than when he fled from Gath, the city of Goliath, to Adullam. He never appears in a less noble light than when he feigned madness to avert the dangers which he might well dread there. How unlike the valor and self-degradation of the man who "scrabbled on the doors" and let "the spittle run down his beard" is the heroic and saintly consciousness of this noble psalm! And the contrast is not so violent as to make the superscription improbable. And the tone of the whole well corresponds to what we should expect from a man delivered from some great peril, but still surrounded with dangers. There, in the safety of his retreat among the rocks, with the bit of level ground where he had fought and slain just at his feet in the valley, and Gath, from which he had escaped, away down at the mouth of the glen (if Lieut. Conder's identification of Adullam is correct,) he sings his song of trust and praise; he hears the lions roar among the rocks where Samson had found them in days gone by; he teaches his "children," the broken band of men who there began to gather around him, the fear of the Lord, and calls upon them to join him in his praise. What a picture of the outlaw and his wild followers calmed into something like order, and lifted into something like worship, rises before us as we follow the guidance of that old commentary contained in the superscription!

The words of our text gain especial force and vividness by thus localizing the psalm. Not only "the clefts of the rock," but the presence of God's love are his defense; and round about him, not only the strength of the hills, but the garrison and guard of heaven.

It is generally supposed that the "angel of the Lord" here is to be taken collectively, and that the meaning is: the "bright-harnessed" hosts of these divine messengers are the army of protectors round them in the fear of God. But I see no reason for departing from the simpler and plainly grander meaning which results from taking the word in its proper force of a singular. True, Scripture does not speak of the legions of ministering spirits, who, in their chariots of fire, were once seen suddenly opened eyes "round about" a prophet in peril, and are now ministering to the heirs of salvation. But Scripture also speaks of one who is in an eminent sense "the angel of the Lord," in whom, as in no other, God sets his "name," whose form, dimly seen, towers above the ranks of the angels that excel in strength," whose offices and attributes blend in mysterious union with those of God himself. There may be some incongruity in the thought of the single person as encamping round about us; but that does not seem a sufficient reason for evading the reference to that remarkable Old Testament doctrine, the assertion of which seems to me to be immensely to the power of the psalm.

Remember some of the places in which "the angel of the Lord" appears in order to appreciate more fully the grandeur of this promised protection. At that supreme moment when Abraham "took the knife to slay his son," the voice that called to him out of heaven" was the voice of the angel of the Lord." And the power of reversing the command. He says: "Thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from me," and then proceeds a blessing, in the utterance of which one cannot distinguish his voice from the voice of Jehovah. In like manner it is the angel of the Lord that speaks to Jacob, and says: "I am the God of Bethel." The dying patriarch invokes in the same breath "the God which fed me all my life long," "the angel which redeemed me from all evil," to bless the boys that stand before him with their wondering eyes gazing in awe into his blind face. It was that angel's glory that appeared to the outcast Hagar in the bush that burned unconsumed.

It was he who stood before the warrior leader of Israel, sword in hand, and proclaimed himself to be the captain of the Lord's host, the leader of the armies of heaven, and therefore the leader of the armies of Israel; and his commands to Joshua, his lieutenant, are the commands of "the Lord," and, to pass over other instances, Isaiah correctly sums up the spirit of the whole earlier history in words which go far to lift the conception of this angel of the Lord out of the region of created beings: "In their affliction he was afflicted. The angel of his face saved them." In the lofty and mysterious messenger, and not the hosts whom he commands, that our psalmist sees standing ready to help, as he once stood sword-bearing by the side of Joshua. To the warrior leader, to the warrior psalmist, he appears, as he needs required, armored and militant. The last of the prophets beheld him, mysterious figure and proclaimed: "The Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his temple; even the angel of the covenant, whom ye delight in;" and to his gaze it was wrapt in obscure majesty and terror-purifying flame. But for us the true messenger of the Lord is his Son, whom he has sent, in whom he has put his name; who is the angel of his face, in that we behold the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ; who is the angel of the covenant, in that he has sealed the new and everlasting covenant with his blood, and whose parting promise, "Lo! I am with you always," is the highest fulfillment to us Christians of that ancient confidence: "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him." Whatever view we adopt of the significance of the first part of the text, the force and beauty of the metaphor in the second remains the same. If this psalm were indeed the work of the fugitive in his rocky hold at Adullam, how appropriate the thought becomes that his little encampment has such a guard! It reminds one of the incident in Jacob's life when his timid and pacific nature was trembling at the prospect of meeting Esau, and when, as he traveled along encumbered with his pastoral wealth, and scantily provided with the means of defense, "the angels of God met him, and he named the place Mahanaim"—that is, two camps; his own feeble company mostly made up of women and children, and that heavenly host that hovered above them. David's faith sees the same defense encircling his weakness; and though sense saw no protection for him and his men but their own strong arms and their mountain fastness, his opened eyes beheld the mountain full of chariots of fire, and the flashing of armor and light in the darkness of his cave.

The vision of the divine presence ever takes the form of which our circumstances most require. David's then need was safety and protection. Therefore he saw the encamping angel; even as to Joshua, the leader, he appeared as the captain of the Lord's host; and as to Isaiah, in the year that the throne of Judah was emptied by the death of the earthly king, was given the vision of the Lord sitting on a throne, the King eternal and immortal. So to us all his grace shapes its expression according to our wants, and the same gift is protean in its power of transformation; being to one man wisdom, to another strength, to the solitary companionship, to the sorrowful consolation, to the glad sobering, to the thinker truth, to the worker practical force—to each his heart's desire, if the heart's delight be God. So manifold are the aspects of God's infinite sufficiency that every soul, in every possible variety of circumstances, will find there just what will suit it. That armor fits every man who puts it on. That deep fountain is like some of those fabled springs which gave forth whatsoever precious draught any thirsty lip asked. He takes the shape that our circumstances most need. Let us see that we, on our parts, use our circumstances to help us in anticipating the shapes in which God will draw near for our help.

Learn," too, from this image, in which the psalmist appropriates to himself the experience of a past generation, how we ought to feed our confidence and enlarge our hopes by all God's past dealings with men. David looks back to Jacob, and believes that the old fact is repeated in his own day. So every old story is true for us; though outward form may alter, inward substance remains the same. Mahanaim is still the name of every place where a man who loves God pitches his tent. We may be wandering, solitary, defenseless, but we are not alone. Our feeble encampment may lie open to assault, and we be all unfit to guard it, but the other camp is there too, and our enemies must force their way through it before they get at us. We are in its center—as they put the cattle and the sick in the midst of the encampment on the prairies when they fear an assault from the Indians—because we are the weakest. Jacob's experience may be ours: "The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge."

Only remember that the eye of faith alone can see that guard, and that therefore we must labor to keep our consciousness of its reality fresh and vivid. Many a man in David's little band saw nothing but cold gray stone where David saw the flashing armor of the heavenly warrior. To the one all the mountain blazed with fiery chariots; to the other it was a lone hillside, with the wind moaning among the rocks. We shall lose the joy and strength of that divine protection unless we honestly and constantly try to keep our sense of it bright. Eyes that have been gazing on earthly joys, or perhaps gloating on evil sights, cannot see the angel presence. A Christian man, on a road which he cannot travel with a clear conscience, will see no angel, not even the angel with the drawn sword in his hand that bars Balaam's path among the vineyards. A man coming out of some room blazing with gas cannot all at once see into the violet depths of the mighty heavens that lie above him, with all their shimmering stars. So this truth of our text is a truth of faith, and the believing eye alone beholds the angel of the Lord.

Notice, too, that final word of deliverance. This psalm is continually recurring to that idea. The word occurs four times in it, and the thought still oftener. Whether the date is rightly given, as we have assumed it to be, or not, in all events that harping upon this one phrase indicates that some season of great trial was its birth-time, and when all the writer's thoughts were engrossed and his prayers summed up in the one thing—deliverance, He is quite sure that such deliverance must follow, if the angel presence be there. But he knows, too, that the encampment of the angel of the Lord will not keep away sorrows and trial and sharp need. So his brightest hope is not of immunity from these, but of rescue out of them. And his ground of hope is that his heavenly ally cannot let him be overcome. That he will let him be troubled and put in peril, he has found; that he will not let him be crushed, he believes. Shaded and modest hopes are the brightest we can venture to cherish. The protection which we have is protection in, and not protection from, strife and danger. It is a filter, which lets the icy-cold water of sorrow drop numbing upon us, but keeps back the poison that was in it. We have to fight, but he will fight with us; to sorrow, but not alone nor without hope; to pass through many a peril, but we shall get through them. Deliverance, which implies danger, need and woe, is the best we can hope for.

It is the least we are entitled to expect if we love him. It is the certain issue of his encamping round about us. Always with us, he will strike for us at the best moment. "The Lord God is in the midst of her, always; the Lord will help her, and that right early." So, like the hunted fugitive in Adullam, we may lift up our confident voices even when the stress of strife and sorrow is upon us; and though Gath be in sight and Saul just over the hills, and no better refuge than a cave in a hillside, yet in prophecy, built upon our consciousness that the angel of the covenant is with us now, we may antedate the deliverance that shall be, and think of it as even now accomplished. So the apostle, when within sight of the block and the headsman's ax, broke into the rapture of his last words: "The Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me to his heavenly kingdom; to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen." Was he wrong?

The Devil an' Billy Bray's Taturs.

I was goin' to tell the story that I heard from dear old Billy Bray. He was preachin' about temptations, and this was what he said:

"Friends, last week I was a diggin' up my taturs. It was a poor yield, sure 'nough; there was hardly a sound one in the lot. And while I was a diggin' the devil come to me, and he says: 'Billy, do you think your Father do love you?'

"'I should reckon he do,' I says.

"'Well, I don't,' says the tempter in a minute.

"If I'd a-thought about it at all, I shouldn't a-listened to him for his opinions—ben't worth the leastest bit o' notice.

"'I don't,' says he, 'and I'll tell 'ee what for: if your Father loved you, Billy Bray, he'd give you as pretty yield o' 'taturs, so much as ever you do want and ever so many on 'em, and every one o' them as big as your fist; for it ben't no trouble for your Father to do anything, and he could just as easy give you plenty as not. An' if he loved you, he would too.'

"O' course I wasn't goin' to let him talk o' my Father like that, so I turned round 'pon him: 'Pray, sir,' says I, 'who may you happen to be, comin' to me and talkin' like fids here? If I ben't mistaken, I know you, sir, and I know my Father too. And to think o' your comin' a sayin' he don't love me! Why, I've got your written character home to my house; and it do say, sir, that you be a liar from the beginnin'. An' I'm sorry to add that I used to have a personal acquaintance with you some years since, and I served you faithful as ever any poor wretch could, and all you gave me was nothing but rags to my back, and a wretched home, an' achin' head—an' no taturs—and, the fear o' hell to finish up with. And here's my dear Father in heaven; I've been a poor servant of his, off and on, for thirty years. And he's given me a clean heart, and a soul full of joy, and a lovely suit o' white as'll never wear out; and he says that he'll take me home to his palace to reign with him forever and ever. And now you come up here a-talking like that!'"

"Bless'e, my dear friends, he went off as if he'd been shot—I do wish he had—and he never had the manners to say good-morning."—Mind Your Own.

TRY HIM WI' A TEXT.—"What's wrang wi' ye noo? I thocht ye were a' richt," said a ragged boy, himself rejoicing in the Savior, to another, who a few nights before professed to be able to trust Jesus, but who again began to doubt. "What's wrang wi' ye noo?" "Man, I'm no richt yet," replied the other, "for satan's aye tempting me." "And what dae ye then?" asked his friend. "I try," said he, "to sing a hymn." "And does that no send him awa?" "No, I am as bad as ever." "Weel," said the other, "when he tempts ye again, try him wi' a text; he canna stan' then."

—The British contributions to foreign missions the past year were very large. The Church of England raised $2 129 681; the joint societies $781,761; the Nonconformist societies, $1 567 555; the Scotch and Irish Presbyterian societies, $791,715; the Roman Catholics, $32 305; making a grand total of $5 212 101.

I take goodness in this sense: the effecting of the weal of men, which is that the Grecians call Philanthropia; and the word humanity (as it is used) is a little too light to express it. This, of all virtues and dignities of the mind, is the greatest, being the character of the Deity.—Bacon.

A French gentleman, who supposed he had mastered the English language, was sadly puzzled one day when a friend looked at him and said: "How do you do?" "I don't!" "I mean how do you find yourself?" "Sare, I never loses myself." "But how do you feel?" "Smooth,—you just feel me."

A professor was one day walking near Aberdeen, when he met a well-known "natural." "Pray," said the professor, "how long can a man live without brains?" "I dinna ken," said Jeremy, scratching his head; "how auld are ye yersel?"

There is nothing so acceptable to the young heart as variety.

Religious Intelligence.

—The British Wesleyan Methodists have adopted the International Sunday school lesson series.

—The London City Mission had a total income last year of £51 958 an increase of £6 508 on the preceding year. Four hundred and fifty-two missionaries are employed.

—The Southern Baptist Convention reports 10 stations in Italy, with as many evangelists, and 134 members. The receipts of the convention for foreign missions were $32 910, about the same as reported last year.

—The steamship Nevada, which arrived last week at New York, had 341 Mormons on board. They are accompanied by two elders, who have spent two years in Great Britain, Sweden, Denmark and Germany in securing converts. Six hundred Mormons will arrive in about a month, mostly from Sweden.

—Rev. T. Richard, a missionary at Chefoo, China, has 400 inquirers under instruction. This large number of disciples is said to be due to the measures of relief taken for sufferers by the famine last year. The Chinese thought that a religion which prompted such charity must be more than human. Not one of these inquirers received any help.

—The annual meeting of the board of trustees of the Missionary Society of the United Brethren Church was held in Hartsville, Indiana, Bishop Glossbrenner presiding. According to the report of the treasurer the total receipts last year were $20,459.90, of which amount over $7 000 were spent for work in Africa. The total debt of the society is reported at $18,438.12.

—The American Sunday School Union celebrated its fifty-fourth anniversary in Philadelphia, May 25. Addresses were made by the Rev. William M Taylor, D. D., of New York; the Rev. Authon Mitchell, D. D., of Chicago; and the Rev. W. Nelson McVickar, D. D., of Philadelphia; and the music was furnished by the old Moody and Sankey choir, under the lead of Prof. W. G. Fisher. Special acknowledgment was made of the munificent gift of $100 000 from the estate of the late John C. Green, of New York; the annuity of which is to be applied for the employment of missionaries and for securing a higher order of Sunday school literature. The issue of a new monthly paper, the Scholars' Companion, containing answers for the older scholars, began with January 1, 1878. The other periodicals are the Sunday School World, the Child's World, three grades of lesson papers published monthly, and three of review papers published quarterly. The Rev. Edwin W. Rice has been appointed editor of the society's periodicals, in place of the Rev. Richard Newton, D. D., resigned. The missionary work of the Union has been more than usually prosperous. During the year, 1,487 new schools have been organized, and 3,353 other schools visited and aided, having in all 23 056 teachers and upward of 201 000 scholars.

—The extent of country occupied by the London Missionary Society in Madagascar covers some 2,000 square miles, and the estimated population, free and slave, is 10,000. Few of these are congregated in large towns, but are scattered in villages and hamlets, here and there, over the land. That nearly 1,100 men and women are already gathered together to hear the word of God every Sabbath day, and are more or less under Christian influence and instruction, is certainly reason for joy and thankfulness; but that there are over 38 000 in our district still unreached and uninfluenced by us is a sad and startling fact. And then, of the 1,100 adults whom we recognize as attending our chapels, how great is the ignorance of the majority, and how deeply seated the superstition of nearly all! Among them I do not know where I could find a man or woman who has a right knowledge or sense of sin, while nearly all cling to the superstitious belief in witches and charms with the greatest tenacity. This, I acknowledge, is not surprising when you remember that for twenty, thirty, forty, or even a greater number of years, they have been dwelling in darkness, and that it is only a very few years ago that teachers were sent among them, and that the light began to shine in upon them. It is not easy for a man or woman of forty to learn the letters of the alphabet; and in like manner, having reached that age in life, it is not easy for our people to learn even the A, B C of Christianity.

The Bishop of Rochester makes an appeal on behalf of the spiritual necessities of his diocese, which takes in all that part of London lying south of the Thames. In 1831 its population was returned at 191 000. To-day it is not less than 1,500 000, and is rapidly on the increase. People who have been to London, and have gone either to Newman Hall's or Mr. Spurgeon's church, both of them in that district, will remember the labyrinth of streets, crowded with dwellings of the poorer class, and obviously needing a good deal of spiritual oversight. It is in that quarter of London, too, that one finds the great manufacturing establishments, each neighborhood having its special branch of trade. Bermondsey, for instance, is famous for its tanneries, Southwark for silk hats, and Lambeth for potteries. Beyond these are outlying semi-rural districts with a more scattered population, and for this reason greater difficulties in the way of evangelistic work. To provide for this great population there is only one clergyman to every 2,300 souls. To supplement their labors a society has been organized, of which the definite aim is to initiate and sustain new church work of all kinds (except school work otherwise provided for,) such as the employment of missionary curates and other agents, the erection of churches, school churches, mission buildings and parsonage-houses, the purchase of sites for church purposes, and occasionally the assisting of endowment funds. The bishop earnestly asks for "liberal donations to make us a good beginning, and to float our ship into deep water."

Our Young People.

RUST CAKE.

Two eggs, beat them very light.
One quart of blue stand (you will find it on the barn).
Some sugar. Just as much as Bridget will give you.
One pint of cold water.
Some cocoa. About a cupful, I guess.
Stir it up with a piece of shingle. Have the shingle clean.
Be very careful not to get any on your dress.
Have Bridget put it in the oven, and bake till it is done.
It takes beans a long time to bake. She baked it all the afternoon.
If it is made just right you will be surprised at the result (that is what the ladies always say about their recipes.)
Afterward take a bath—we did.

The Wild Mustang.

All the horses we see in the streets or along the country roads are tame. Such a thing as a real wild horse is hardly to be found anywhere, save in certain places in Texas, California, and parts of South America. Elsewhere the horse is tame enough, and no one can remember, neither is it told in any history or story-book, when or where men first tamed him and put a bit in his mouth. A long, long time ago all the horses were wild, but no one knows when that could have been, for, as long as men can remember, they have had tame horses, dogs, cats, elephants, camels and cattle.

Now the curious part of this is that there are wild horses both in North and South America at this day. They do not belong to any one in particular, and run wild, without saddle or bridle, all the year round. Yet they are not descendants of the original wild horses; for there was a time when their fathers were good cavalry horses, and belonged to the Spanish armies that invaded Mexico and Peru. When Europeans discovered the two continents on this side of the world such a thing as a horse was totally unknown to the people living here, and when they saw the Spanish cavalry they thought the horses and riders some new kind of animal. Seeing the horses champ their brass bits, the people thought they were eating gold. So they brought lumps of gold to see them eat it. The soldiers slyly put the gold in their pockets, and said the horses had eaten it up, and the natives were simple enough to believe this wonderful story.

Many of the Spanish soldiers were killed in the war with the Mexicans, and their horses broke loose and ran away. Some of them may have been caught again by the Mexicans, but many others escaped, and were never captured again, and ran wild through the country. The descendants of these horses grew and multiplied, and spread over parts of North and South America, going south into the great plains or pampas, and north into the prairie lands of Texas and the valleys of California. These horses still run wild, and are the only really wild horses in the world. At the same time, they may not precisely resemble the first real wild horses, for their fathers were tame, and perhaps they still remember something of this, and have strange legends among themselves of the old days when their ancestors were good Spanish cavalry horses.

The early settlers that landed in other parts of the country, at New Amsterdam, at Jamestown and Plymouth Bay, also brought tame horses with them, and these, in turn, spread over North America as the settlers moved out toward the West. These horses are now called "American horses," to distinguish them from the wild horses of Texas and California. The American horses, in time, met the wild horses, and then men noticed that they were very different animals. The wild horse is smaller and more muscular, he has stronger and stouter limbs, a larger head, and a more bushy mane and tail. His ears are longer and more inclined to lie back on his head, his feet are smaller and more pointed in front, and his hair is rougher and thicker. His color is often curiously mixed in black and white dots and flecks, like some clowns' horses that you may have seen; and, if his color is uniform, it is generally dark red or deep gray or mouse-color. These mustangs are quite wild, and have no fixed feeding-ground. They scamper in droves over the rolling prairies and pampas, and sleep at night in such dry places as they can find. They keep in companies for protection against bears or other wild animals; and, if they are attacked, they put their noses together and form a circle with their heels out, as if they had been told of the old Spanish fighting days, and of the soldiers forming with their pikes solid squares to resist attacks of cavalry.

They can defend themselves against the bears in this way, but against the lightning and men they have no protection, except to run away as fast as they can. A thunder-storm or a very high wind fills them with terror, and away they go at furious speed through the grass, and at last disappear in a cloud of dust on the horizon.

The wild horse can run away from a man; but this protection fails at times. The horse-catchers or "vaqueros," as they are called—are famous riders, and to see them capture a wild mustang is better than to go to a circus. The vaquero puts a Spanish saddle on a tame horse, and starts out to see what he can find. In front, on the high pommel of the saddle, he hangs in large coils a leather rope, about a hundred feet long, and called a lasso. It is made of strips of raw hide, braided by hand into a smooth, hard and very pretty rope. One end is secured to the saddle, and the other end has a slip-knot, making a sliding noose.

The vaquero has not long to wait, for there are droves of horses cantering or walking about over the swells and hollows of the prairie, with here and there a smaller group looking on, or watching a battle between two horses who wish to be captains of their bands or companies. Presently there is a strange sound of trampling hoofs, like the sound of a squadron of cavalry, except that it has a grand, wild rush and swing such as no cavalry ever had, and a cloud of dark heads rises over a swell of the land. The leader sees the vaquero, and he halts suddenly, and the others pull up in a confused crowd, and toss their heads, and sniff the air, as if they scented danger near. The leader does not like the looks of things, and turns and slowly canters away, followed by all the rest, tramping in confusion through the yellow grass and wild barley. Presently they become frightened, and away they fly in a dusty throng.

The vaquero's horse seems to think his chance has come, and he pricks up his ears, and is eager for the glorious fun of a dash after the mustangs. Away they go pell-mell, in a panic, and the tame horse galloping swiftly after them. Down they tumble—some knocked over in the confusion, snorting and flinging great flecks of foam from their dilated nostrils, trampling over each other in mad haste, each for himself, and the American horse sweeping after them. Now the vaquero stands up in his saddle, and the lasso swings round and round in a circle over his head. Swish! It sings through the air with a whirring sound, and opens out in great rings, while the loop spreads wider and wider, and at last drops plump over the head of a mustang. The vaquero's horse pulls up with a sudden halt, and sinks back on his haunches, and braces his fore-feet out in front. Ah! how the dust flies! The mustang is fast, held by the slip-knot, and he rears up and plunges in wild and frantic terror. The rope strains terribly, but the vaquero watches his chances, and takes in the rope every time it slackens. It is of no use! The poor mustang is hard and fast. Perhaps another rider comes up and flings another lasso over his head. Then they ride round him and the mustang is twisted and tangled in the ropes, till he can hardly move. He falls and rolls and kicks furiously, and all in vain. Panting, exhausted and conquered, he at last submits to his fate. His free days are over, and he seems to know it. A few more struggles, and he recognizes that man is his master, and perhaps in one or two days he submits to a bit in his mouth, and becomes a tame horse for the rest of his life. If, by any chance, he escapes before he is broken in, and runs away to join his wild companions, he seems never to forget that terrible lasso; and if he sees the vaquero again he will stand, trembling and frightened, too much terrified to even run away.

The wild mustangs of the far West are rapidly disappearing. As the settlers come in they capture them and tame them, so that in places where once the wild horses roamed in great droves hardly one is now to be seen, and the much better American horse has taken his place. The picture shows two vaqueros in South America just making a capture. They came out from the plantation under the palm-trees, and the powerful white mustang has just felt the pull of the lasso round his splendid neck. Poor fellow! It is hard, but it will soon be over, and then he will one day enjoy chasing others quite as much as the splendid black horse has enjoyed the exciting chase after him.—Charles Barnard, in St. Nicholas.

WITTY GIRLS.—"Don't put too fine a point to your wit," said Cervantes, "for fear it should get blunted." He spoke to men; if he had been addressing young women he might have said: "Don't put too fine a point to your wit, for fear it should wound rather than tickle." Men don't take kindly to the sharp, clever young woman who is always hurling her shafts of wit. They not only believe, with Shakespeare, that a "soft, gentle and low voice" is "an excellent thing in woman," but that it should be accompanied by gentle manners and a tender heart. The Philadelphia Times utters thoughts about the too clever young woman, the good sense of which makes them worth heeding:

Occasional indulgence in repartee with a bright man or woman is entertaining, but if either insists upon carrying on the game unduly it becomes a nuisance, and the persistent one lays himself or herself open to the gravest of all social charges "bad style." To talk with a girl who will do nothing but cut and thrust, and whose constant attack necessitates a constant defense, is a bore. Nobody cares to live continuously upon spiced meats.

When the too clever girl finds herself shunned by men and hated by women just as clever as she herself, she joys in her heart because she feels that her superiority tacitly is acknowledged; nor does it cross her mind that there be those fitly her equals who are content to allow their wit to gleam naturally and pleasantly, and who do not seek to make it sparkle all the time.

That the too clever girl rarely succeeds in catching a husband, and that consequently she runs down upon the lee-shore of old maidenhood as fast as the gale of years can drive her, is not to be wondered at. Her character is not lovable, and only a most confirmed hunter of curiosities would care to marry her for her intrinsic merit.—Youth's Companion.

The Count de Grasse was once wounded in the knee with a musket-ball. The doctors went and hacked and made many incisions, when, getting out of patience, the count asked why they cut him up so much. "We are seeking," said the surgeon, "for the ball." "Why didn't you mention that before? I have the ball in my pocket."

Jesus is the purest among the mighty, the mightiest among the pure, who with his pierced hand has raised empires from their foundations, turned the stream of history from its old channel, and still continues to rule and guide the ages.—Richter.

Many people are busy in this world gathering together a handful of thorns to sit upon.

Growing Better.

Good George Muller says the world is growing worse, and will continue to do so until Christ comes to reign. Mr. Moody is much of the same opinion, and probably for the same reason. He believes in the doctrine that Christ will come in person to reign in the world, and that nothing else can stem the torrent of wickedness, and overthrow the power of darkness. This may be regarded as the generally-accepted view of the Chiliasts. It inheres in their system. The gospel, attended by the power of the Holy Spirit, will be and is a comparative failure so far as the general reformation and conversion of the world is concerned. A personal manifestation and reign are, as they believe, needful, and clearly promised and revealed. Our own interpretation of Scripture is that when Christ comes the dead will be raised, the world will be judged, and the present system of things will be at an end. The second coming will coincide with the end of the world and the final judgment.

Whether in connection with pre-adventism, or any other system, it is an enfeebling and pernicious conviction that other means and methods must at length be substituted for those now in operation. It is true that the good men whose names we have mentioned are active workers and successful evangelists. They would do what is possible, and save something from the human wreck, while they await a dispensation of greater power. Their peculiar views may not, with them, interfere with the utmost effort, but with many the effect may be to restrain prayer, and to lessen confidence in the gospel as it is. Preaching is very well, the Holy Spirit is a boon of inestimable value, and the present methods of evangelization must be pushed with vigor and zeal; but they wait for a miraculous and overwhelming manifestation—a reserve of demonstration and power in the coming of the Son of Man that shall swiftly silence the adversaries, and do away with sin—that is, they are looking for something super evangelical, for means above and besides those connected with the word and Spirit.

It is obvious to us that God has already set in motion the most powerful forces at his command for the salvation of the world, and that what these cannot do cannot be done by any means whatever. The wisdom and the power of God are in Christ as the object of faith, and in the gospel as the proclamation of divine truth. The demonstration of the Spirit is a more effectual demonstration for the purposes of conversion than a personal coming and manifestation would be. Judgment is to be sent forth into truth on the present line of operations, or not at all. Christ is to be glorified by the Spirit, in the hearts and consciences of men, rather than by the pomp and splendors of an earthly royalty. To look for other means to overthrow sin, and to bring the world to Christ, is, we think, a most serious and damaging delusion. When Christ comes it will be not to save sinners, not to regenerate an impenitent race, but to judge the world.

The Chiliasts are rather compelled by their theory to believe that the world is growing worse, and that it will continue on this downward course until the great parousia is interposed. Those who believe that the gospel, as now exhibited, is the only divine manifestation that is, or that ever will be, made until the end of the world, are prepared to take a more hopeful view. While forced to no conclusion on the subject, they can at least consistently believe that the world is growing better. That the world is still abounding in wickedness we cannot doubt, but, as compared with the times of St. Paul and those of Constantine, it is much better. The Christian civilization of these days has in it less corruption of manners and a higher morality than that which existed a hundred years ago in England and France. To say that the world is growing worse is to take a very limited view as to localities, and almost wholly to ignore the facts of history. The mission work of the Christian churches now is gigantic as compared with any previous period in their history. Taking in the breadth of the field of operations, the number of preachers and teachers, and the conversions year by year, the results of the gospel during the first century were small in comparison with what they are at the present time. It cannot be denied that the gospel is spreading, that its influence is almost universally felt, that idolatry and barbarism are yielding to its power, and that on the whole society in Christian lands has greatly improved within the period of fifty years.

If we take a historical view for purposes of comparison, nothing is clearer than that the world is growing better. With all the unbelief and atheism, and other infidelity of the nineteenth century, it is more enlightened, more spiritual and more honest than the eighteenth. It has taken seemingly a long time for the world to reach its present state. The gospel has wrought slowly, as many would judge, but it has done a great deal, and it is now in a position to rapidly overspread the earth. That the world will ever be wholly converted to Christ we may doubt, but it will be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord. There may come a great falling away toward the end, but as we read the signs of the present times the world is growing better.

The Outlook.

During these growing days, when our cane and cotton are beginning to show what they are likely to make, the local news abounds with statements pro and con. There is too much rain in spots; not enough in some localities. The stand is good here, and there it is bad. The grass is getting ahead of the farmer in some sections, and in others everything is clean and thriving. From all we can learn, and judging from what we have seen, the prospect of good crops has rarely been better at this season of the year. The cane in Louisiana is especially fine, and, with a favorable fall, the product of sugar will be larger than that of any year since the war. In southern Louisiana, and in many parts of Mississippi and Alabama, a good corn crop may be regarded as already assured. Cotton in the Southwest is suffering in places from too much rain, but we have no doubt the results, unless the worm comes early, will be equal to the crop of last year. Such is the extent and variety of the territory in which this staple is cultivated that the aggregate is not likely to be seriously affected by merely local drawbacks. The injury to the Mississippi bottoms from overflow has been comparatively slight, and the harvest from this region will be greater than for years past.

No safe conjecture can be made in regard to the price of cotton. So far as we can learn, factors and buyers do not expect it to be much higher than at present. The farmer must base his calculations of profit at a low figure, and seek to bring his expenses down to this estimate. Debt is the curse of hard times. People who are out of debt, with half the income they had ten years ago, are about as well off as they were then. Cotton is low; and real estate has shrunk one-third, and in many instances one-half, but flour, pork, clothing, and nearly everything else, have gone down nearly in the same proportion. Fifteen dollars in wages will buy for the laborer more than twenty would a few years ago. The cotton that sells now for eight cents a pound will buy more calico and domestics than the same cotton would when it sold for twelve or fifteen cents a pound. The times are hard on the debtor class. The debts were contracted in comparatively flush times, and with the expectation of continued high prices and a brisk business. These debts have grown while everything else has declined. The nip of the hard times is just here. We are suffering not so much from anything unhealthy or abnormal in the business condition of the country as we are from the recklessness and extravagance of the past.

It is probably useless to wait for better times—that is, for higher prices for cotton and labor, and for any rapid or considerable advance in real estate. Our plans must be formed, and our work laid out with reference to things as they are. The farmer must not expect high prices, the mechanic must make his contracts at a low figure if he expects work, and the merchant must not involve himself by unfounded hopes of a brisk fall and winter trade. So far as we can understand the times, they are now approaching a healthier and sounder condition than they have been in for the last fifteen years. These are the days of low prices, nearly hard money, limited credit, small profits, and of real values. And we trust they have come to stay. Inflation is the worst of evils to every class, because nearly all values are then fictitious and temporary, and because it acts as a fatal snare to lure the unwary into dangerous speculations and into debt.

The cry of unemployed labor is largely a delusion growing out of the lower wages which a general shrinkage in values has necessitated. In purchasing power the wages offered will go as far as those paid in other times, but the laborers and artisans insist on the old prices, which would be, in fact, an advance. Then, again, workingmen are coming to believe that they can live as well, and raise their families in a style approaching that of the men of money and of capital. Apart from agitation arising from these causes, there is some enforced idleness and consequent destitution. Whether there will be strikes and riots in the great centers this summer remains to be seen. The events of last year were a warning, and preparations anticipating their recurrence will go far to prevent a similar scene of disorder and bloodshed.

The premonitory symptoms of the fall elections are already heard. Conventions, platforms, nominations, and all the usual din of the politicians, are filling the columns of the political press. There is prospect of warm and earnest work, and of a spirited contest, but none of domestic violence. There will be a peaceful, and, we hope, a fair election, and we trust that every citizen will do his part toward securing the election of wise and good men.

The chances are that the Berlin Congress will come to a peaceful solution of the Turkish question, and, if peace be the result, this will be another favorable element in the general outlook. With peace throughout the world, with good crops almost everywhere, and with Heaven's blessings resting upon us, we ought to be a happy and prosperous people. That we shall be, however, depends much upon the personal industry, thrift and virtue of the people. One secret of happiness is to estimate things as they really are, and not make them out greatly worse than they are.

Home and Sunday Schools.

The first and best school for children is home. It is an evil connected with the education of youth in colleges and boarding schools that they are withdrawn at too early an age from the care of parents and from the influences of home life. There is no absolute remedy. If boys and girls could live at home while being educated it would be better for the most of them. But as every family cannot have a college at its door, the next best thing is not to send the children from home too soon, and when they are sent be sure, to send them where their moral and religious welfare will receive special care. The dangers from the Sunday school are of another kind, and lie chiefly in the disposition of parents to turn over the religious instruction of their children to the Sunday school teacher. The Sunday school, when most efficiently organized and conducted, cannot fulfill the parents' duties. The teaching, however, in many Sunday schools is necessarily limited and defective, and if the matter is left to them the children grow up almost in ignorance of the doctrines of the Bible, and with almost imperfect religious development. The Christian Union, writing on this subject, presents some thoughts that parents may well consider. It says:

But especially our best children's institution—the Sunday school—has hidden danger in it. We are in danger of emptying our families into the Sunday school, and taking away from father and mother that most sacred duty of inculcating the earliest moral principles in their children. It is a misfortune for any child to be brought up without having its spiritual ideas of morality and religion so associated with father and mother, and with home life, as that they will be sacredly cherished in his memory all his life long. When men have gone awry in mercantile life, have neglected the church, and at the age of forty or fifty years, having got through the battle of life, begin to think that they ought to be better than they are, the first thing that comes upon them is the memory of father and mother, and of the truths that they taught them. Say what we will about churches and priests, God's best church is the family, and God's best priests are father and mother.

It ought, therefore, to be a part, and an important part, of the work of every Sunday school to insist that children shall be educated before they come to the Sunday school; and that father and mother shall be their primary teachers. Where there are no parents the Sunday school is to do the work of father and mother as far as possible; but where there are parents the Sunday school is not to do their work for them. The Sunday school, instead of being a reservoir for the family to empty its responsibilities into, ought to throw back upon the parents a knowledge and consciousness of their duty to take care of their children at home. Otherwise Sunday schools will be more an injury than a benefit. It is not until a child is prayed with by its mother, not until he cries on her knee, has heard her tell stories from the Bible, and hungers for her when Sunday comes, that he begins to be educated in a genuine religion. It is her voice, her eye and her influence, and his looking up to her as to a goddess, that does the work. There is no influence to open the minds of children to the truth like love for their parents. It is the plow of love that opens the furrow of faith in which first may be sown the seed of the word.

If the Sunday school is a supplement to the family it is beneficent; but if it is a substitute for the family, as a religious instructor it is harmful. The mother may well rejoice to have the aid of the school in her work of religious training; but she cannot abdicate in its favor. No teaching, however skillful, can ever take the place of the teaching of a mother's love. It is, therefore, the duty of the parents to know what the Sunday school is doing and to use it; and it is the duty of the Sunday school to act back on the family, to ascertain what the parents are doing at home for the child, to advise with them, and so to secure co-operation between the children's church and the children's home. For this reason, too, whenever it is possible, the parents ought to be in the Sunday school, that the whole family may join in the common study of the word, and that the school may become a bond of union, not a dividing line, between the elder and the younger members of the household.

The home is the best Church and the best State, as it was the first; and the safety of both Church and State depend upon its careful preservation.

The Centurion's Faith.

We have before noticed some of the moral conditions of the centurion's faith. If we come to consider the elements of its greatness, they will be mostly found in these things:

1. In its deep, earnest spirituality. It was spiritual. He did not call for look or touch from the Master. The Syrophenician's faith was next of kin to the centurion's. It was not so spiritual, perhaps from the fact that it was not so purely disinterested. The one was for a child, the other for a servant; and then hers was tried by the Master. It was drawn out. It was gradually developed. It came slowly to the birth. The centurion's faith seemed full-grown at a jump. It took hold at once. His wants were no greater—nor so great naturally—than the woman's. And yet his faith was greater in the beginning than the woman's was in the ending. We said above that her faith was next of kin to his. They were much alike in this: that neither asked for a physical demonstration in answer. Neither asked for a touch of his hand, nor a look of his eye, in order to the blessing. There were many in those days who had great faith. But they felt the need of the tangible. They required something as a prop. They wanted a crutch to help them to the blessing. The diseased woman thought that if she could but touch the hem of his garment it would be well. She made her painful, crawling, crouching way through the crowd, touched and was healed. The friends of the sick man had faith. The sick man, borne of them, had faith. It was a great faith, because it commanded the blessing. But they felt it necessary, at least, to get him where Jesus could see him. So he "was let down into the midst," through the roof. The nobleman, "whose son was sick at Capernaum," had faith. He went to him the moment he heard of Jesus' arrival in Galilee. Jesus was his only hope. He knew his power to heal. And yet the Master must "come down" to do the work. "The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child die." So in all cases, even among the most spiritual and trusting, something tangible—something of the body, and grass—must play an active part in the matter. Even Martha and Mary, with whom Jesus had so often talked, and to whom he had so often revealed the purely spiritual of his kingdom, said: "Lord, if thou hadst been here my brother had not died." Their faith did not reach to his power, beyond his presence. But the centurion's faith went beyond the more favored ones. "I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof. Say in a word, and my servant shall be healed." I am not only not worthy that you should come under my roof, but it is not necessary. Speak the word, and it shall be done. Command, and it shall stand fast.

Many have faith to come to Christ, and then reverse the essential order of things, and make conditions for salvation. Bless me, save me, pardon me, and then I'll serve thee. The elements of service and the conditions of faith must all be in the comer in order to the blessing. The centurion had these. Jesus was his only hope. He had faith in his power. He had faith in his willingness to save even the servant of a Gentile master. He was looking upon his human body and into his human eyes, but saw, through the flesh, the divine Son of God, and the essential spirituality of his kingdom and of his work. Hence the greatness of his faith in his wonderful prayer: "Say in a word, and my servant shall be healed." It was a great faith, look at it as we may. It was the faith of a centurion, a Gentile, not a Jew. It was the faith of a man of official position and of influence. It was the faith of a man of earthly consideration, and yet who, seemingly unaided, made of himself no reputation. It was faith in Jesus, stemming a strong current of opposition from his own friends. It was a deeply spiritual faith, where no faith at all was expected.

We need no longer wonder that the divine marveled—that the divine commended. This great faith is within our reach. Let us attain unto it, and reap the benefits flowing from it.

Some Russian Protestant Sects.

In 1868 a new sect arose, who felt called by Christ to teach, to suffer and to build a church. In the midst of winter they broke the thick ice in the Volga, baptized each other in the chilling flood, changed their names, and then held a solemn feast. From that day they have called themselves "Little Christians." They have no priests, and but a slight form of prayer. They reject images, wafers and sacred oil. The government became alarmed and commenced an active persecution, under which, of course, the sect is rapidly increasing. Soon after another lady sprang up—rejecting the established church and forming their own rules of life, which seem to be of a high order. They call themselves "Helpers;" and the government spies sent to watch them confessed that they never drank, swore, lied or got into debt. But they preferred family worship to that of the parish priest, and they would not go to confession. Consequently they suffered persecution; which, however, was short, as they are now left unmolested. Still later a sect has appeared in the province of Viatka, where more than twenty different heresies exist. The distinctive article of their creed gave them the unenviable name of "Non-Payers of Rent." Of course it was impossible that they could be kept hidden. When rents became due they refused to pay. The leaders were arrested, and yet remain in custody; but the government is perplexed to know how to manage an increasing body of men, who make it the first principle of life not to pay their rent-charges.

Another new body are the "Chislennikl," or Counters. The founder is still living, and is the high priest. He was met one night in the woods by a venerable man, who offered him a book to read. Opening it, Taras Maxim found the message of salvation written in the Slavonic tongue. It commanded the people of God to count themselves and be set apart from the world. It called the National Church the Devil's Church; it declared Thursday to be the true Sabbath; it spoke contemptuously of saints and angels, and abolished the seven sacraments and the priesthood. Maxim returned to Semenof and preached the new doctrine. He speedily made converts, who counted themselves all and formed the Secret Semenof Church. They show the bitterest contempt for the Council and the State. While the Orthodox pass by to church on Sunday morning they shut themselves in their houses, and manifest their despite in true Oriental style. Their chief tenet is that man must sin in order to be saved from sin. This doctrine, of course, leads to wild excesses, and the sect is looked upon, perhaps justly, as very immoral.

But the strangest of all the heresies is held by the "Napoleonists." Their spiritual strength also is spent in hating the church and the government. And as Napoleon was the chief enemy of Russia in recent times, they look upon him as the true Messiah, and worship him as God. Placing his bust on an altar, they fall before it in prayer. The worship has to be maintained privately, but they are said to be numerous even in Moscow. They believe that Napoleon is still alive; that he fled from St. Helena to Central Asia; that he is now dwelling in Irkutsk, near Lake Baikal, on the frontiers of Chinese Tartary; and that he will come forth at the appointed time, leading a great army to the overthrow of Russia, and to the uplifting of his church to glory and power. Busts of Napoleon, indeed, are common in Russian houses, among all sects and ranks. Even the royal family show great partiality to the likeness of their giant foe.—C. H. Woodman, in Sunday Afternoon.

God gives every bird its food, but does not throw it into the nest.

The Education of After-Life.

Spend, if possible, one hour each day in reading some good and great book. The number of such books is not too many to overwhelm you. Every one who reflects on the former years of his education can lay his finger on half a dozen, perhaps even fewer, which have made a lasting impress upon his mind. Treasure up these. It is not only the benefit which you yourself derive from them—it is the impression which they leave upon you of the lasting power of that which is spiritual and immaterial. How many in all classes of life may say of their own experience that which was said, in speaking of his library, by one who was no own earliest literary delight, Robert Southey:

"My days among the dead are past;
Around me I behold,
Where'er these casual eyes are cast,
The mighty minds of old;
My never-failing friends are they,
With whom I converse day by day.

"My thoughts are with the dead; with them
I live in long-past years,
Their virtues love, their faults condemn,
Partake their hopes and fears,
And from their lessons seek and find
Instruction with an humble mind."

But it is not by books, whether of literature or science, that the self-education of after-life is assisted. When Joan of Arc was examined before her ecclesiastical judges and was taunted with the reproach that such marvelous things as she professed to have seen and heard and done were not found written in any book which they had studied, she answered in a spirit akin and some respects superior to the well-known lines in which Hamlet replies to Horatio. She replied: "My book, God has a book in which are written many things which even the most learned clerk and scholar has never come across." Then, there is the deeper education to be derived by those who have senses exercised to discern between good and evil, in the great flux and reflux of human affairs, with which the peculiarity of our times causes all to become more or less conversant. One of the experiences which the education of life brings with it, or ought to bring with it, is an increasing sense of the difference between what is hollow and what is real, what is artificial and what is honest, what is permanent and what is transitory. "There are," says Goethe, in a proverb, pointed out to me long ago by Lord Houghton as a summary of human wisdom, "many echoes in the world, but few voices." It is the business of the education of after-life to make us more and more alive to this distinction.—Dean Stanley.

The action, says the Raleigh Christian Advocate, of the Kentucky Methodist Episcopal Conference that no local preacher ought to be licensed, and no layman elected to an official position in the church who does not take one of the periodicals of that church—is cordially indorsed by the California Advocate, which says: "No one can be qualified to fill any responsible position in the church at the present day who does not and will not take a church paper. Reverses of fortune may for a short period sometimes justify one in discontinuing his subscription to his paper. But even in such a case he should desist from serving as an official of the church. He is providentially disqualified for such service." The Evangelical Messenger (Albrecht Methodist) thinks this statement not a whit too strong. It says, further, "that no man can be properly qualified for such position who is not in communication with the spirit and thought and movements of the church, as represented in her recognized organs; and this is equally true of private as well as official members."

The Raleigh Christian Advocate says of the recent commencement of Trinity College, North Carolina:

All things considered, the commencement was in every particular a decided success. The speaking of the graduating class was excellent, indeed the young men acquitted themselves with great credit. The future for Trinity is bright. The president reported one hundred and twenty-seven matriculates during the past term. Measures were adopted by the trustees which, we think, will result in good to the institution. Dr. Craven, upon the return of each succeeding year, impresses the public mind more fully with his great ability to preside over the college. A long experience, ripe scholarship, indomitable energy combined fit him peculiarly for the position he so ably fills.

The degree of D. D. was given to Rev. Henry Melvin Ford, of Kentucky; Rev. Josiah Lewis, professor in Southern University, Greensboro, Ala.; Rev. S. Lander, president of Williamston Female College, South Carolina.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.—The secretaries are sending us full proceedings of these bodies. It is not necessary to do so. If we were to publish in full we should have space for little else. Give us results in a few lines—the state of the church without statistics, and any very important action without preliminaries. It is not important to publish the names of members present, who preached, and such other things as are of no general interest. Do not send us reports by minutes, but merely a brief digest of affairs.

God in all, and through all, and for all, is the only formula that can explain these things. Without God, evolution, continuity of nature, natural selection, conservation of energy, or whatever other phrases have been coined to have currency for the hour, are more sound and smoke, fabrications of science, falsely so called.—John Stuart Blackie.

Happiness is neither within us nor without us—it is the union of ourselves with God.—Pascal.

MAY CHRISTIAN'S DANCE? By James H. Brookes, D. D. Chicago: F. H. Revell.

This little 12mo of 143 pages contains a fair and temperate discussion of the dance, exhibits its evil tendencies, and points out the injurious character of this amusement in its influence upon the Christian life and experience. It is a work that we could wish to be largely circulated and read. Churches troubled with dancing members, and Christians who wish for a convenient tract to put into the hands of their worldly friends, will find this well adapted to the purpose of meeting and silencing the advocates of the dance. Price, twenty-five cents.

CHOICE SELECTIONS FROM THE YOUNG CHRISTIAN'S POCKET-BOOK. Garrigues Bros., Philadelphia.

A convenient little manual of religious paragraphs, suited to the Christian's daily needs. It is handsomely bound. Price, twenty cents.

Our Sunday school periodicals for July are up to their usual standard of excellence. Dr. Cunningham, under the hearty indorsement given him by the General Conference, can look away with a will. He has done his work ably and well, and to the satisfaction of the church. We have no doubt he will continue to give us the fine budget of Sunday school literature each month. Let our pastors all work to put the Magazine, Visitor, Little People and Lesson Papers in every school and in every family.

—Rev. D. McCosh is to contribute to the July number of the North American Review a sarcastic article entitled "Positivism," to be entitled "An Advertisement for a New Religion." The September number will contain a symposium on Inspiration, written by six of the most eminent divines in the country, representing as many sects.

—We have received a copy of Hurt's New Testament Wall Map of Palestine. It is on cloth, colored, 40 by 30 inches in size. Price, $1 50. It is a handsome map, and specially designed to illustrate the International Sunday School Lessons from July 1, 1878, to January 1, 1879. Published by E. E. Hubart & Co., St. Louis, Mo.

—The National Repository for July has: The Syracuse University, illustrated; The Strength of Home; A Walk Through Tiffany's, illustrated; Rev. George Peck, D. D.; A Remarkable Brotherhood; Our Sister of the Southern Deep; Strength; Among the Thorns; The Recluse of Mount Royal; The Starless Crown; Editorial Miscellany.

—The Complete Preacher for June has: The Age of God in Us, by R. Storrs, D. D.; Concerning Jesus as Poet, by Thomas Armitage, D. D.; Catholicity in Its Relations to Protestantism and Romanism, by E. C. Bass, D. D.; The Signs of the Times in Christianity Feeling? by Henry Ward Beecher.

—Wide Awake for July is a wonderful beauty—filled with pictures and charming articles. This number is about the best of this always superior magazine for the young. The young people always watch for it coming. Published by D. Lothrop & Co., Boston. Price, $2 a year.

—Lippincott's Magazine for July has: Here and There in Old Bristol, illustrated; An Atelier des Dames, illustrated; The Washer at the Well; A Real Prisoner at Chillon, illustrated; A Levantine Panic; Popular Marriage Customs of Sicily; Cousin Jess; The Idyl of the Vanclusse; The Avatar Fight at Kagan, and other articles.

—The Golden Hours for July has a fine table of contents. Among other excellent articles we have: Horses and Horsemen; Rudentville Records, illustrated; The Story of Ivy, illustrated; Home of a Poet—Ayr—illustrated; A Summer Sermon, illustrated; Annie's Holliday.

—L. D. Dameron, of the Advocate Publishing Company, St. Louis, has issued a large New Testament Map of Palestine. It is on cloth, accordeon, according to the latest surveys, and shows all the places mentioned in the New Testament. It is designed for Sunday schools, and the very thing for the International Lessons now in hand. The Magazine of Art—Cassell, Petter & Galpin, London, Paris and New York—for June contains a number of fine illustrations and engravings. Yearly subscription, $3; single number, twenty five cents.

—Appleton's Journal for July has: Rose of New England, illustrated; A Bit of Nature; Out of Town; Paris and May; French Painters and Artists; A Tramp, and other articles.

—The annual catalogue of Central College, Fayette, Mo., 1877-78, has been received.

—A catechetical examination in which a little girl was asked: "Why did the Israelites make a golden calf?" She answered: "They was as pacific as sin, and made it."

Has God Spoken?

When the great Scott lay dying, he said to Lockhart: "My son, read to me." "What shall I read?" asked Lockhart. "My son, there is but one book." Perhaps the truth expressed by the dying Sir Walter comes home to us in certain experiences of life, as though it had never been realized before. The heart takes refuge in the fact that there is a divine revelation. In the lecture on "The Book," recently delivered before the New York Sunday School Association by Bishop R. S. Foster, D. D., reference was made to the dangerous concessions as to the divine character of the book, made by those claiming to be its authorized teachers. "It is," said Bishop Foster, "a supernatural book. Unique in composition and ends, it is historic, poetic, prophetic, and I will say scientific, as well as the oldest and most authoritative of books."

As a historic book it is more historic of God than man. It gives prominence in all its narrations to the divine factor. In all the varied history of the world God is a factor. He presides in state over the destinies of the world, but so obscurely that the evidences escape our observation. This book comes giving his side of the question. From beginning to end it is primarily supernatural. Nor are gifted minds required to perceive this element. Whosoever will look will see from Genesis to Revelation an Infinite Power over and beyond nature, exerting a controlling agency in extraordinary and supernatural forms of action. This history is wondrous in its scope. It plunges down into the dateless past, and progresses along the lines of human affairs until, keeping its historic form, it unrolls the future in prophetic revelation. It is unparalleled by any book that has ever obtained currency among men. An Incarnation foreseen indefinitely in the future by different authors during the fifteen hundred years, is held up as the chief objective point; and then, passing on beyond the incarnation, the history of the world unrolls, embracing the destinies of the race. Truly a marvelous plan! Is it any wonder that such a book should have gained the foremost rank, that it has won and holds the empire of the world's highest mind?

It is the oldest book in the world. The larger portion antedates the largest part of classic history. It was written when the foundations were being laid. The entire Old Testament was written before the Latin language was born.

It was the product of a race of mind not marked for research or intellectual power. It is a Jew's book—sprung from a Jewish race before Greek mind was born.

It had its origin while the human mind was in infant immaturity; yet this book does not evade difficulties. It pushes out in the unknown, obscure spiritual realm, and discusses the character of God. All ethics, all theology in the sweep and compass of human welfare it discusses, and declares its dictum. In all these ages of human progress this strange book has not been improved. No book has advanced beyond it. We of the present age, instead of growing out of it, are growing into it. It stands forth to-day as regal authority for the best intellect of the day. There never has been a power equal to that Bible. Not the civil power of all the governments in the world could crush it out of existence. It is the child of God. If not from God, this world has never heard a word from God since he made it—not a sentence, not a fragment. There he has sat and heard the human cries and sobs, and seen the tragic experiences of those who have plunged into the shoreless floods of the dark and mirrled waters, and never held out a flag or signal. Here or nowhere God has spoken—here or nowhere God has revealed his will.

The new Discipline, revised and enlarged, containing the pastoral address of the Bishops, the boundaries of the Annual Conferences, and the plan of conducting our publishing interests, as well as the articles of faith, the General Rules and laws and ritual of the church, printed on good paper, large, clear type, and neatly bound in cloth, will be ready for delivery, July 15, at the following rates:

Single copies ..... 50 cts.
To preachers, when sent by express at the expense of the purchaser, per dozen $4 00
When sent by mail 4 80

Terms: Cash, or its equivalent.

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 25, 1878.

A programme of the total eclipse of the sun, on July 29 next, has just been issued at Washington. It gives maps showing the path of the moon's shadow from Montana to Texas, and suggestions to amateur observers in the line of the shadow. The question of searching for intra-Mercurial planets receives especial attention, and an engraving showing the positions of bright stars on both sides of the sun is given to enable any new object to be detected.

Artichokes are good for rheumatism, and hearty jokes for dyspepsia.

A Fitchburg man developed a fine strategic talent the other day. He was paying a hack fare, when he dropped three bank bills, and the wind whisked them swiftly away. After unavailing search for an hour a bright idea struck him. He folded a piece of paper and dropped it where the bills fell, followed its flight, and where it rested, there he found also his money.

There is nothing like taking all you do at a moderate estimate—it keeps mind and body tranquil; whereas grandiloquent notions are apt to hurry both into fever.

A man is obliged to die before his will amounts to anything, but that of a woman is always in force.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE is the shortest, quickest and best Northern line to New York and the Eastern cities. During the heat of summer the greatest comfort in traveling is found on the route by Chicago or Louisville, and along the shore of the great lakes, or through the grand scenery of the Alleghany mountains. To pass through these regions there is no route so direct, so quick or so good as the Jackson, with its through cars, steel track and short line, enabling its trains to leave New Orleans one hour later than any others, and make the same time.

Excursion tickets are now on sale by this route, good till October 31, to all the attractive and famous summer resorts of the Northwest, just knows among which are Waukesha, with its celebrated springs; Oconomowoc, the center of the delightful lake district of Wisconsin; Green Lake, Grand Haven, St. Paul, Niagara Falls, Montreal, Quebec, etc. The rates are as low or lower than to watering-places in other parts of the country, and living, both at hotels and boarding-houses, cheap and of the best kind, the country around being highly cultivated and furnishing everything desirable for the table.

All are invited to call at the ticket office, 22 Camp street, under the City Hotel, where guide-books, descriptions, routes, rates, etc., will be furnished, and the fullest information given.

VANDALIA LINE.—The attention of our readers and the traveling public is called to the merits of the above line. For parties going East by way of St. Louis there is no better road. Comfortable, commodious and elegant palace cars, gliding noiselessly, swiftly and safely along over a track so smooth that one is almost unconscious of motion unless he chance to look out of the window, offer for the time a home unrivaled in splendor and in luxuries enjoyed by anything the most fastidious traveler of the past generation ever dreamed of. The popularity of this old and reliable route is annually and steadily on the increase. The efforts of the well-known and highly respected general manager, Col. Simpson, are fully appreciated by the traveling public.

LOUISIANA NATIONAL BANK.—The semi-annual statement of the above bank is on this page. This bank is one of the strongest and best managed of any in the South, as is evidenced by the high price at which its stock is quoted in the market. Mr. J. H. Oglesby, the president, and A. Lirla, Esq., the cashier, are second to none as able financiers.

THE WONDER DOCTOR, located at 106 Bourbon street, has established himself permanently at the above place. He has been very successful in his treatment of sickness of every kind, of both sexes. His American herb medicines are very highly spoken of for dyspepsia, etc. See his advertisement.

BERNARD & GRAS.—These gentlemen, dealers in Western and general country produce, are at 47 Poydras street, where they will be pleased to see their friends. All consignments made them will have prompt attention, and the best market prices will be obtained. See card on this page.

WE REFER parties needing steam engines, boilers, mills, gins, presses, etc., to the advertisement of H. Dudley Coleman & Bro., No. 12 Union street, New Orleans, La., they being manufacturers and dealers of well-established reputation.

ANY ONE wishing to take a pleasant trip across the lake should take the steamer Georgia Muncy, which is a new and finely finished boat. It can be chartered by parties for a reasonable price on application to M. H. Muncy, at 121 Toland street.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA.—If you are troubled with coughs, colds or asthma get a bottle of Laplace's Indian Tarnip Pectoral Balm. It will relieve you. Depot, 24 Dryades, Eighth street, New Orleans, and 709 North Main street, St. Louis.

CHRONIC DISEASES.—Persons suffering from the above diseases should write to Starkey & Palen, 1112 Girard street, Philadelphia, and get some of their circulars. These gentlemen stand high in the profession.

EXCELSIOR REFRIGERATOR.—The public are invited to call and inspect the above. These refrigerators are spoken of very highly by those who have used them. See advertisement on first page.

KEEP'S PARTLY-MADE DRESS SHIRTS.—H. P. Perry's advertisement of the above shirts will be seen on the seventh page. All of elegant styles and perfect fitting.

MACHINERY DEPOT.—R. J. West is one of the most reliable machinery and hardware men in the South. See advertisement and send him your orders.

A FAILURE.

Any attempt to produce a perfume to rival or any other country that can surpass Dr. Price's Delicate Perfumes will prove a failure, for Price's Perfumes are as fresh and sweet as the flowers from which they are made, and cannot be improved.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

WILBOR'S TONIC is not a panacea—is not a cure for everything—but is a cathartic, cure for nineteen diseases, and day by day, absorbent hundreds of its cures of glorious success. Invigorates livers and spleens, along the shady banks of our lakes, and rivers, are restored to their healthy and natural sensations. Health and vigor follow its use, and Chills have taken their departure from every household where Wilbor's Anti-Periodic is kept and taken. Don't fail to try it. WHEELOCK, FINLEY & Co., proprietors, New Orleans. For sale by all druggists.

WILBOR'S COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.—The great specialty of this safe and efficacious preparation is to place it before the public to its utmost worth. In the cure of coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, wheezing cough, scrofulous humors, and all consumptive symptoms, it has no superior, if equal. Let no one neglect the early symptoms of disease when an agent is at hand which will cure all complaints of the Chest Lungs or Throat. Manufactured only by A. B. Wilbor, Chemist, Boston. Sold by all druggists.

PIZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER is acknowledged by thousands of ladies, who use it daily, to be the only preparation that does not conceal the skin, but imparts a delicate, clear, natural beauty to the complexion. Mothers can apply it to infants, with the most gratifying results. Removes all eruptions. Price, 50 cents and $1 per box. Sold by druggists, and at depot, 607 North Sixth street, St. Louis (Lindell Hotel.)

From the Jackson (Miss.) Clarion.

Mr. C. H. Manship, of Jackson, one of the best painters in the State, and a gentleman of great intelligence and worth, says to a reporter of the Clarion that the Asbestos Paints which he used on the Capitol dome are not only the cheapest, but the best paints he has ever used. He says he has in his possession the certificates of many of the most prominent men in the country, and that he has no fear of the paint doing well on the Capitol.

STONE IN THE BLADDER
RELIEVED BY THE
BUFFALO LITHIA WATER
AFTER THE LIFE OF THE PATIENT WAS DESPAIRED OF BY HIS MEDICAL ADVISERS. THE STONE DISSOLVED IN THREE HOURS IN A GLASS OF THE LITHIA WATER.

CASE OF MR. C. WOLFF, of Point Coupee, La.

POINT COUPEE, LA., April 1, 1878.

MR. THOMAS F. GODDE: By request I give you the following history of my case: Two years ago I began to suffer with severe pain in my kidneys, and to have periodical attacks about two a week—which caused the most excruciating agony, from which I was habitually relieved by the discharge of a stone from four to six grains in weight. There was never entire freedom from the pain in the kidneys. In eighteen months I discharged seven large stones, besides quantities of smaller stones and sand. As the result of this protracted and great suffering my general health was reduced to so low a condition that my physicians advised me that I had nothing to hope for from medicine, that my case was hopeless one, and I looked for relief only in death. In this state of things, about six months ago, Spring No. 2 was discovered. I was advised by Mr. I. L. Lyons, a druggist of New Orleans, to try the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER. Pleasing one of these in a glass of the Water for three hours, I found it dissolved to a fine dust, which gave me confidence, and I persevered in its use. I have had no attack since. The pain in my kidneys has entirely disappeared. I have regained my usual weight, and my general health is perfectly restored. I very cheerfully acknowledge my indebtedness for my life and the comfort which I now enjoy to this great health-giving Water. Respectfully,

C. WOLFF.

This Water, in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles, can be had at the Springs, and of I. L. LYONS, Wholesale Druggist, 42 and 44 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

Farm, Garden and Household.

FERTILIZER FOR FLOWERS.

A Baltimore florist sends to the [illegible] a receipt for liquid manure, which he has found highly valuable in his business: Put one bushel of the clippings from horses' hoofs into a barrel, and fill it up with water. Let it stand for a week, when it is ready for use. Apply it with a watering-pot. All bedding plants can be watered with this liquid every other day if they are pot-bound; newly repotted plants should be watered once a week until they have plenty of working roots to take up the manure. It will also be found excellent for hard-wooded plants, if used once or twice a week. Two or three weeks after the plants have been watered with the manure the foliage generally changes from green to a golden yellow, moving from the stem down to the point of the leaf, which, however, lasts only for a few weeks, when it changes to a dark, glossy green. Plants under this watering grow very large and bright in color. Plants thus treated can be kept in very small pots for a long time without being transplanted. This is especially advantageous to the market gardener, who can, as he has plants in three and four-inch pots, while he would have to shift them into five and six-inch if he used rich soil alone. Flowers watered with this liquid manure will bring twenty-five per cent. more than otherwise; besides, being in small pots, they are lighter, can be packed closer, and are easier handled. The fertilizer is not a stimulant, but a plant food, and plants watered with it, if planted out, will continue growing and keep in good growth, which cannot be said of guano. It is as powerful as guano, as quick in action, and more lasting.

It will not do the slightest harm to the foliage. Most other liquid manures spoil the foliage when they come in contact with it. It forms no crust on the pots or soil. It is cheaper than any other good fertilizer which is used in liquid form. The chips need be renewed or replaced only twice a year, while the water can be withdrawn every day. I filled a barrel last October, using all the water it holds every day, and I shall not find it necessary to renew the chips before May or June. When liquid guano is used too strong it will cause the plants to drop all their leaves. This liquid manure will not, even if used once or twice a day for a short time.

The Mangel Wurzel. This is a favorite root crop with many farmers, and is well adapted for a wide variety of soils, but succeeds best on those which are neither too light nor too heavy. The two varieties most extensively grown are the long or oblong, and the red and yellow globe, the latter being best adapted for heavy soils, and the former for those of a lighter description. On all good land or clay land the mangel pays well when richly treated, and yields a larger amount of nutritious food than any other root yet introduced, being also a more certain crop than any of the same class. The red globe are said to keep better than the yellow, but the latter are the most prolific. The long varieties require deep cultivation and are more troublesome to harvest, but the globes will thrive where any other roots grow and are less difficult to gather and store. The general practice is to sow mangels on land that has produced a straw crop the previous year. About fourteen loads of good farm-yard manure per acre should be distributed in the furrows, and it will generally pay well to add from two to three hundred pounds of guano. To secure an early start for the crop the seed should be soaked not less than twenty-four hours before planting. After the crop is well up let the ground be thoroughly aerated, and the weeds kept down by the frequent use of the horse-hoe.—Country Gentleman.

Loss in Cold Weather.—There are three classes of animals in which the natural and indispensable diet of fowls consists—grain or seed, green plants and insects. Corn and wheat chiefly should be the main reliance to fill the first division. Boiled potatoes and green cabbage, in winter, and newly-mown grass in summer, are the most suitable vegetables; and shambles' scraps and bakers' waste, procured fresh, are the most economical animal food, except near the coast, where clams and various sorts of fish can be procured at a trifling cost. But care should be exercised not to feed too much of it. Wash the fish from the bones, because they are the cheapest and best, as any other flavor should be given for the sake of a variety, such as oats, buckwheat, rye, beans, wheat, etc., both whole and ground. Now, would you believe this thoughtful writer would if you do not have plenty of eggs this year, persons does not know what to do with them.

Ashes to Save.—A writer in the London Garden says that he finds fruit to keep best in perfectly dry sand. He keeps fruit in this way all the year round. Hams had French grubs two years old. The Catalan pear has remained sound twelve months. The fruit must be sound when stored, and the sand must be quite dry. The chief advantages of packing consist in the exclusion of air currents, the preservation from glimpses of tempered light, the absorption of moisture, which favors decay. Much will depend on the apartment in which the experiment is tried, a dry or cool one being best.

Cucumbers, Cucumbers.—The great drawback in growing cabbages successfully and to profit is in failing to have a large proportion to head. To make them head uniformly and well, hoe often, especially in dry weather, and as soon as the surface is dry after rains. Do not allow a crust to form around them. A thimbleful of salt scattered over them occasionally will be found very beneficial.

FARMING UNDER THE SEA.

The fact is not generally known that within three hours' ride of Boston a large and profitable business has been carried on, ever since 1840, along the sea-shore, and which is nothing more nor less than "farming under the sea." Everywhere upon the coast of eastern New England, may be found, about ten feet below water-mark, the lichen known as carrageen—the "Irish moss" of commerce. It may be torn from the sunken rocks anywhere, and yet the little seaport of Scituate is almost the only place in the country where it is gathered and cured. This village is the great center of the moss business in the country, and the entire Union draws its supplies from those beaches. Long rakes are used in tilling this marine farm, and it does not take long to fill the many dories that await the lichen, torn from its salty, rocky bed. The husbands and fathers gather the moss from the sea, and the wives and daughters prepare it for market. Soak it in water, and it will melt away to jelly. Boil it with milk, and a delicious white and creamy blanc-mange is the result. The annual product is from ten to fifteen thousand barrels, and it brings $50,000 into the town, which sum is shared by some 150 families. Its consumption in the manufacture of lager beer is very large, and the entire beer interest in the country draws its supplies from Scituate beaches, as the importation from Ireland has almost ceased. It is generally known that the moss, as an article of food, is called "Sea Moss Farina."—Methodist.

Vicissitudes of a Hen.—On one occasion, while chopping some meat on a block for the hens, that were looking on with bright anticipations, one unlucky one jumped up to steal a piece just as the ax was descending. In vain I tried to spare her—the ax was too far on its downward tendency, and the poor hen paid for her impatience with the loss of her bill, cut off quite short at the upper mandible, but the lower one projected about one-eighth of an inch. I at first thought of applying the ax on the other side, but, being a good bird, I spared her, and fed her by hand for a few days, thinking to try how she would behave, and whether it was possible for her to feed herself. After a few days she attempted to peck, which she did effectually, after a week or two, from a handful of corn. After finding that she could eat from a pile, she took her station every morning at the corn-crib door and waited for it to be opened, when she helped herself and was no more trouble. The bill grew again almost perfect in six months.—Poultry Bulletin.

Poultry.—In a pretty large experience with fowl-raising, for the last thirty years, we have tried many sorts, new and old, and have settled upon the Light Brahmas as the best fowl for villagers and farmers. They are a long time in coming to maturity, but there is no difficulty in getting nice broilers from them in July and August, or in getting eggs from the early pullets in the fall, and that is about all that can be done with the earlier varieties. Well-fed pullets beginning to lay in November, in warm quarters, will give an abundance of eggs through the winter, when they bring the best prices. They are the largest breed with which we are acquainted, adult cocks sometimes weighing thirteen to sixteen pounds, and hens ten to twelve pounds. The flesh is of good quality, and when one comes to the table there is enough to go round, and some to spare. They are the most popular of all varieties, tested by the demand for breeding fowls and eggs.—American Agriculturist.

The Country Gentleman says: "Seeds must have air, or they will not grow. Buried deep in the soil, they remain dormant for a long time, although kept at a nearly uniform temperature with the soil, to retain their natural moisture. Nurserymen sometimes keep peach-stones in a sound and dormant condition buried two feet or more in compact earth. Many of the most troublesome annual weeds make their appearance in ground supposed to be clean. The careless farmer has allowed weeds to ripen seeds by the ten thousand in previous years, and turned them in deep by plowing. There they have remained dormant till another plowing has brought them to the surface, where they soon appear in myriads, to the surprise of the owner, who, if he is ignorant of the nature of vegetable growth, ascribes their appearance to spontaneous vegetation, etc., says, as we recently heard a farmer who never reads agricultural papers assert, that 'the soil breeds them.'"

Rules for Selecting Flour.—In selecting flour test it by the color. If it is white, with a yellowish straw tint, buy it. If it is white, with a bluish cast, or with white specks in it, refuse it. Next examine its adhesiveness—wet and knead a little of it between your fingers; if it works soft and sticky, it is poor. Then throw a little lump of dried flour against a smooth surface; if it falls like powder it is bad. Lastly, squeeze some of the flour tightly in your hand; if it retains the shape given by the pressure, that, too, is a good sign. It is safe to buy flour that will stand all these tests. These modes are given by all flour dealers, and they pertain to a matter that concerns everybody.

The Farmers' Advocate gives this as the best white wash for poultry houses: Into the whitewash pail drop a teacupful of salt boiled rice, and mix thoroughly. Then pour into a quart pail of cold water say ten or twelve drops of crude carbolic acid. Mix this into the rest, and swab the interior of your hen house with it. For outside use tuck salt dissolved, instead of boiled rice, and dispense with carbolic acid. No other preparation of whitewash ever equaled this for poultry buildings.

Soils for Orchards.—The soil for an orchard should be in good condition, and especially well drained. Any soil in which water stagnates is unfit to plant trees on. If the ground has been occupied by a hoed crop the season previous to setting out the trees, it will be an advantage. Of greater utility still it will be to have the orchard deeply plowed and subsoiled, both the season previous and just before planting, and repeatedly harrowed to bring the soil into a fine tilth. Where the ground is not naturally fertile enough, some fertilizer may be used. There is nothing better than good barn-yard manure, well rotted, or a thoroughly decomposed compost; and nothing worse than green, fresh manures.—Rural Sun.

How to Have Good Eggs.—There is a vast difference in the flavor of eggs. Hens fed on clean, sound grain, and kept on a clean grass run, give much finer-flavored eggs than hens that have access to stable and manure heaps, and eat all kinds of filthy food. Hens feeding on fish and onions flavor their eggs accordingly, the same as cows eating onions or cabbage, or drinking offensive water, imparts a bad taste to the milk and butter. The richer the food the higher the color of the eggs. Wheat and corn give eggs the best color, while feeding on buckwheat makes them colorless, rendering them unfit for some confectionery purposes.

Under the title of the "Gardener Bird," the English Gardeners' Chronicle gives a description, with illustrative wood cuts from an original sketch drawn on the spot by Signor Beccari, of a bird which is not only an expert architect, building a nest like the bower bird of Australia, but also a gardener, laying out a garden in front of it. The bird is a native of New Guinea, and makes a nest of the stems of an orchid. In front of the nest a dressed lawn of moss is formed; on which the attentive husband places day by day, for the delectation of his mate, flowers and fruits of bright colors and pleasing flavor.

The production of tobacco has recently become a very important agricultural interest in Pennsylvania. It is asserted that the State now produces more tobacco than the Connecticut valley, and it is believed that in a few years its crop will be larger than that of Connecticut, Virginia and Missouri. The yield of Lancaster county last year was 18,400,000 pounds.

If we make mistakes in solving the problem of life, our very blundering may teach us to exercise more care. If we learn to know our errors, and gain a little wisdom, we shall be better prepared for a higher life.

THE TRIUMPH

Steam COTTON BAND PULLER

AND BUCKLER.

THE ATTENTION of the Cotton Growers in the United States is called to this

NEW AND IMPORTANT INVENTION.

This STEAM PULLER has been thoroughly tested, and has demonstrated the fact that we can apply to Cotton Bands any required tensile strength and BUCKLE THEM AT EXACTLY THE HIGHEST POINT REACHED, and no slipping of the bands through the buckle, all the bands being drawn taut, and buckled at the same instant, turning out a perfect bale, and without regard to the size, weight or shape of the bales.

THE BUCKLE is simply perfect; it is cheap and strong, and can be furnished on the order of a day by the million. The old hands are used as they take off the bales, and NOTHING IS LOST.

THE PULLER can be attached to any size or style of press, and at an expense that is slight compared to the benefit to be derived by the Cotton Press. It is simple, and can be operated by regular hands, and will not get out of order. The speed is equal or greater than ordinary hand-tying.

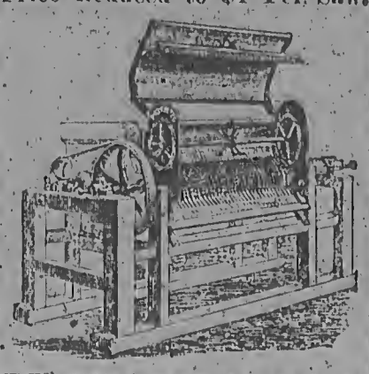
DANIEL PRATT'S IMPROVED

"Revolving Head" Cotton Gin.

PATENTED JULY 15, 1873.

Price Reduced to $4 Per Saw.



THIS GIN has been in use for the past five seasons, and several recent improvements have been added. It obviates all friction at the ends of the cotton box, prevents the roll from breaking, and gives a Larger Yield of Lint from the same Amount of Seed than any other Gin in use. The Revolving Head lightens the draft and causes the Gin to run faster with less driving power, thus doing a great deal more work with the same time, while economizing steam or animal power than any other Gin. The seed being ginned very close, the length of the staple is increased, producing cotton of this account of a greater market value. This improved value, given by length of staple, with extra production of lint, added to increased amount of work done, more than covers the cost of the Gin in every bale ginned. MEDICAL.

The German Star in Louisiana.

THE SO-CALLED WONDER DOCTOR has arrived safely in New Orleans, with his boat and family. He has made a twelve months' tour through the State of Louisiana to show to the public what he can do with his AMERICAN HERB MEDICINES for the diseased human system and organs. The Doctor is a thorough and experienced German chemist of the herb and vegetable kingdom, and has spent eighteen years in exploring America for the purpose of discovering the most valuable medical herbs growing in America. He has succeeded in discovering the secrets of all Indian tribes in connection with the vegetable kingdom, and thus is enabled, as a practical physician, to prescribe these herbs to his patients. The Doctor has been wonderfully successful in the treatment of his patients, of whom he has had in his charge 1,605 within nine months. These comprised cases of sickness of every description, and of both sexes. All these patients were completely restored to health in a very short time. Everywhere in this State the Doctor had to promise to establish himself in New Orleans, which he has resolved to do and carried out, in order to relieve, as fast as Nature will permit, the long sufferings of so many of his fellow-beings. None but American herbs will be employed by the Doctor in the preparation of his medicines, and all patients who may honor him with their confidence and clientage will be treated with them.

The Doctor has established his office and a Chemical Laboratory, as well as a complete Private Hospital, at No. 101 BOURBON STREET, between Toulouse and St. Louis streets, so as to give to the afflicted from everywhere an opportunity to receive medical attention at his hands. The rooms are all well fitted up, and absolutely under his personal supervision. His terms are moderate. Letters of inquiry (with three-cent stamp inclosed) will be answered promptly. Orders for medicines will be filled upon the receipt of the money, and mailed free to any place in the United States. Address

SCIENTIFIC.

—An epidemic of typhoid has occurred at Manchester, England. The outbreak of the disease was in this instance clearly traced to a dairy, the water supply of which ran so close to some ash-pits as to become contaminated with the sewage. The sewage-charged water had been employed in cleaning the vessels used in the dairy, and perhaps, in reducing the density of the milk with the view of increasing the revenue of the dairyman.

—M. Ravaisson-Mollien read a paper lately before the French Academy of Sciences on the treatment of wounds by occlusion. In the winter of 1870 he suffered greatly from chapped hands. He filled the wounds with filaments of wadding, and then covered them with collodion. This gave relief and a speedy cure. But his discovery is hardly new. Artists, when they receive severe cuts or burns when at work, have long been in the habit of quickly covering the injured parts with mucilage or Farm glue, and almost invariably the best results have followed.

—The Rev. H. C. McCook, of the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Science has been observing the operations of aeronautic spiders. They climb to the top of a tall post or elevating the abdomen, throw out a thread, six or eight feet long. With head toward the wind, they then make a sudden spring forward, and, screw borne off on the breeze in the air they turn round, spinning with the current, and spread the threads on their outstretched legs, making such a kite to give them greater buoyancy. During these operations a small white ball was seen to be rolled in the mouth, made of wax, and up sick when the insect took its sail-flight.

—The Yellowstone geysers are the most wonderful in the world. Their water does not bring vents. The largest one throws a column of water 250 feet in diameter 200 feet high, while the stream ascends 1,000 feet. Eruptions occur every 24 hours, and last 10 minutes. The column is a stream 2 feet in diameter 60 feet high, and through a vent six inches in diameter 200 feet. Another one throws a column 100 feet high for three hours. The third projects a column three feet in diameter to the enormous height of 250 feet for about 15 minutes. One small, very regularly for 15 minutes every hour, sends out a mass, 6 feet in diameter, 100 feet high.

An instant despoils the life of a man and his whole fate; one step ahead, thought the resolve, is the work of a moment. It is the instinct sense who seizes on the right time to plunge. Discover danger in time or in your selection of this ardent soul by your hesitation get lost.—Goethe.
